FIXING RATES UNDER PARCEL POST-SYSTEM

Government Goes Into Business of Transmitting Merchandise Through the Mails.

NEW LAW FULLY EXPLAINED

Country Divided Into Zones and Units for Purpose of Fixing Charges for Carriage—No Package Weighing More Than Eleven Pounds Is Mailable—Anything Properly Wrapped Which Will Not Injure Other Mail May Be Sent.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

With the coming of the New Year the United States government will enter into a [illegible] the transmission [illegible] by [illegible]. For years [illegible] demand for [illegible] transmittal [illegible] of favor [illegible] the parcel post scheme [illegible] equally divided. [illegible] of the last session of congress [illegible] was passed which will put the [illegible] into operation, but only [illegible] more than an experimental way.

It is the intention of Uncle Sam to move rather slowly in the parcel post matter. He wants to find how popular it will be, how much it will cost the government, and whether there is to be a profit or loss at the end of each year. If it is found that the plan is successful from the point of view of the people, which means the government also, the parcel post will be extended [illegible] it reaches the [illegible] say [illegible] is destined to assume.

Zone System Explained

It is no exaggeration to say that thousands upon thousands of inquiries have been made of the postmaster general as to just what the parcel post will mean to the people. It was the law of congress establishing the system which made provision for a division of the country into zones and [illegible] which are to be used as centers in describing the circles which mark the boundaries of the zones. There has been no clear understanding apparently of this zone system, but really it is a very simple matter.

The accompanying map shows the country divided into zones from the unit in which Washington is situated as the center. Accompanying the map is a table showing the rate of postage per pound for parcels from Washington to places within all the zones.

Each unit contains an area thirty miles square. Now each unit is a center from which the zones are drawn and so every unit in the country no matter where it is situated will have zones drawn from it just exactly as Washington has them drawn from it. For instance take Keokuk, Ia., which is in a unit in the fifth zone. From that will be drawn circles exactly as they are drawn from Washington and they will be numbered from Keokuk [illegible] just as they are numbered from Washington as number [illegible] Of course, however, Zone Six will have a different geographical [illegible] as related to Keokuk than it has as related to Washington, but as the radius of the circles drawn from Keokuk is the same length as the radius of the circles drawn from Washington, Keokuk's Zone Six will be just as far from its center as Washington's Zone Six is.

How Rates Are Fixed

It can be seen from this readily enough that the postal rates from Washington to its particular zone will be the same as the postal rates from Keokuk to its particular zones. Each unit being about thirty miles square will of course contain in most cases a number of postoffices, but each office in the same unit is considered as being the center of the circles from which the zones are drawn. The rates of postage are fixed from the unit in which the sending postoffice is situated, but the price to every place in any zone is [illegible] the same. To illustrate, it will [illegible] the same amount to send a parcel from Washington to Erie, Pa., that it costs to send it to Atlanta, Ga., because Erie and Atlanta with reference to Washington are situated in the fourth zone. The rates therefore are fixed from the unit in which the postoffice is located, but they are the same from that office to any point in any one zone.

It will be seen by reference to the table of rates of postage that it will cost more per pound to send a package a long distance than it does to send it a short distance. The rate increases for a package weighing one pound at the rate of one cent for each zone. No package weighing more than 11 pounds can be sent under the new parcel post law. It should be said right here that on the long hauls the parcel post may not be able to compete with the express companies, but [illegible] shorter hauls it can so compete. It was the expressed desire of the legislators and of the postoffice officials that the parcel post system should be made of particular use to persons having farm and factory products to transmit to customers. It is probable that producers must study the rates of postage and the convenience of transmittal and compare them with the cost and convenience under present methods before individually [illegible] can determine whether he is to profit or not by the change. Then there is another thing to be considered and which only can be known definitely when fuller regulations have been made to specify exactly what kind of things can be sent by parcel post. It can be said in a general way that anything can be sent which is properly wrapped and which will not injure other mail matter with which it may come in contact.

It is probable that the government will adopt a means of transportation for certain kinds of its merchandise much like those which have been adopted in parcel post countries abroad. What the English call hampers, basket-like arrangements, probably will be adopted and as these can be kept separate from the ordinary [illegible] it is believed that the [illegible] adopted will allow the sending of eggs, butter, dressed [illegible], live poultry, honey, fruit and other products of the country.

The 11 pound limit for a single package may work at first against any very extended use of the parcel post for some of the articles which have been named. Of course, more weight can be sent if it is sent in different parcels, but the cost in that case would be heavier because the increase per pound on a single package is not great up to 11 pounds and probably it would increase at no greater rate if the government were to raise the limit of weight which is now fixed. To make it simpler, it will cost more to send two packages of 11 pounds than it would to send one package of 22 pounds if the government eventually should allow a heavier single package to be carried and should charge in proportion just what it does now for one package of 11 pounds weight.

Every postmaster in the United States will have a parcel post map like the one which is here reproduced except that the zone lines will be shown with the unit of his postoffice as a center. All that a postmaster will have to do when a parcel is presented for transportation is to find out in what zone the destination of the package lies. His table will show him instantly the rate per pound from the unit in which his postoffice lies to the zone of the package's destination, the price as has been explained before to every postoffice in any one zone being the same. The parcel post will take nothing but fourth-class matter. Printed matter is still in the third-class designation. Therefore books cannot be sent by the parcel post system. This the postoffice authorities seem to think is in a way unjust and may work a hardship. It may be that in the future the law will be changed so as to include all printed matter. It seems to be certain that an attempt will be made to bring about this change as speedily as possible.

Must Bear Stamp

Postmaster General Hitchcock has ordered that postmasters be advised that parcel post packages cannot be accepted for mailing unless they bear a distinctive parcel post stamp and have attached to them the return card of the sender. A series of distinctive stamps is now in course of preparation for this class of mail as required by the law creating the parcel post system. Consignments of these stamps will be ready for shipment to all postoffices in ample time for the establishment of the new system on New Year's day.

The postoffice department has given instruction to every postmaster in the country to enlighten his patrons as much as possible on the general subject of the parcel post and especially on the use of the special stamps and the necessary attachment of the return card. The law requires that all fourth-class matter mailed after January 1, 1913, without parcel post stamps attached shall be treated as "Held for postage" matter. Parcel post packages will be mailable only at postoffices, branch postoffices, lettered and local named stations, and such numbered stations as may be designated by the postmasters.

It has been announced by Postmaster General Hitchcock that nearly 70,000 scales will be required for use in the parcel post system which is to go into effect January 1st. He has accordingly authorized the issuance of bids for that number. Two hundred of the largest postoffices and their branches will be supplied with automatic springless scales. The next class of offices, numbering about 10,000, will be given high grade beam scale while the fourth class offices, numbering about 55,000, will be furnished with the best spring balances obtainable, each having a capacity for twenty pounds. These scales will be used by postmasters to determine the amount of postage required on parcel post packages. The fact that many of the postoffices of the country are now furnished with scales of a limited capacity makes [illegible] necessary for the postmaster general to [illegible] this very large purchase [illegible] taking [illegible] ness. It is understood that this will be the largest single [illegible] for scales.

Rate on Seeds Not Affected

[illegible] should be [illegible] congress which [illegible] into operation does not [illegible] affect the postage [illegible] seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, [illegible] and plants as fixed by section [illegible] of the postal laws and regulations.

The classification of articles mailable as well as the weight limit, the rates of postage, zone or zones and other conditions of mailability under the act of congress, if the postmaster general shall find on experience that they or any of them are such as to prevent the shipment of articles desirable or shall permanently render the cost of the service greater than the receipts of the revenue therefrom, he is hereby authorized, subject to the consent of the Interstate Commerce commission after investigation, to reform, from time to time, such classification, weight limit, rates, zone or zones or conditions, in order to promote the service [illegible] insure the receipt of revenue from such service adequate [illegible] thereof.

Through [illegible] different members of the house and senate have been interested in promoting parcel post legislation. Among the men most active in securing the legislation which is soon to go into effect as law are Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon, Representative [illegible] of New York, who has [illegible] elected governor of that state.

To ascertain conditions surrounding the establishment of the parcel post system in places differing widely in climate and industries, Postmaster General Hitchcock [illegible] to Washington [illegible] the special parcel post committee [illegible] postmasters of five typical [illegible] They are William H. Davis, Pittsburg, Pa.; Daniel [illegible], Jacksonville, Fla.; M. H. Foster, Wilmington, Del.; [illegible] Suffolk, Va., and Henry N. Bradley, Charlestown, W. Va.

Confer With Postmasters

The postmasters of the five largest offices in the country have already appeared before the committee. Pittsburg was represented as being a large first class office through which [illegible] than any of the greater five and as being the center of a tremendous manufacturing area. The postmaster of Pittsburg reported that the board of trade of that city has a special parcel post committee working toward bringing the consumer and producer nearer to each other by the new system. He also said that many of the merchants are planning to have their city deliveries made by parcel post.

Wilmington, Del., represented a large farming and manufacturing district with its mail connections close with Philadelphia, one of the largest offices. Jacksonville is the largest office in Florida, and the outlet for all the mail of the state. It is peculiar in having a special increase of force in winter, the tourist season, and the postmaster said that it was expected that travelers would use the parcel post extensively in sending home fruit and ten-pound packages of fruit.

Suffolk, Va., and Charlestown, W. Va., are both very small second class offices, one in the tide-water district with large truck interests; the other far inland in an orchard country with diversified farm products. The postmasters of both offices reported great interest in the parcel post, and said that they had continual inquiries regarding its scope.

From these postmasters the committee was able to glean a great amount of valuable information which added to that gained from the recent hearings in Maryland puts it in a position to plan the details of the service to the greatest advantage of the producing farmer.

Give Him Time

"You're a pretty old man to be begging," said the lady to the man at the back door.

"Have you been begging all your life?"

"Not yit, ma'am."

"Scotched."

An English general was in company where some Scotch gentlemen were present. After supper, when the wine was served up, the general rose and addressed the company in the following words: "Gentlemen, I must inform you that when I get a little too much drink I have an absurd custom of railing against the Scotch; I hope no gentleman in company will take it amiss." With this he sat down.

A Scotch gentleman immediately rose, and, without seeming the least displeased, said: "Gentlemen, I, when I have drunk rather freely, and hear any person railing against the Scotch, have an absurd custom of kicking him out of the company; I hope no gentleman will take it amiss." It is said that on that occasion the Scotchman had no opportunity for the exercise of his talents.

"That's why, darling," Paul declared. "If there's an inaccuracy he doesn't know it, and if it should turn out that he does, you and I couldn't catch him. I know he isn't. He's honest."

You must see, Paulsie," the daughter of Hiram Weston [illegible] This reminder of Weston's own [illegible] was enforced by something that stopped the young man's mouth.

"What's the matter with my baby?"

"Nothing new, dearie," replied the girl, "but the old step-father won't let me marry Paul. He keeps [illegible] ing us along. You know what a deserving mischievous old angel he is."

"What's he done now?" asked the housekeeper, hitching her portly self up on the broad kitchen table and gathering Brownie in her strong arms.

A few words told the latest developments and then Hannah soliloquized:

"He said that did he? You leave him to me. We'll see what poor old maid Foster [illegible] can do for that baby. He wanted to marry me once you know."

When Weston [illegible] evening, Hannah [illegible] lantern and slipped out to the barn, saying [illegible] she closed the door.

"You give him his [illegible] girl."

Toward the end of the satisfying meal, Weston remarked, with his eyes taking in the beauty of the girl:

"You remind me so much of your mother, Brownie!"

"That's a great compliment, father, for they say she was a handsome woman."

"She certainly was," he agreed, "but what's Hannah up to, taking care of old Kitty for me and all? She hasn't heard of my proposition to that slow, good boy lover of yours, has she?"

"What would she try to do if she had?"

"[illegible] think I'd ask her to marry me, especially if you two got your heads together to beat an old man," he chuckled. "But I'll never do that twice to the same woman."

A light step on the porch took the girl to the door and Paul was ushered into the parlor.

"Well, what about the weights?" asked the little lady at once.

"Each load was about 50 pounds short, but he don't know it, I'm sure," was the report.

"All right," she responded, with her eyes dancing with mischief. "I'll [illegible] all him to send you tell him."

"I? I? Tell your father? I'd rather face a [illegible]" he exclaimed.

"But don't you think he ought to know it?"

"Why, yes. He certainly [illegible]" he stammered, as she called out through the open door into the dining room:

INFLUENTIAL RELIGIONS

Jan. 5. Abraham and Judaism.

Jan. 12. Confucius and Confucianism.

Jan. 19. Buddha and Buddhism.

Jan. 26. Christ and Christianity.

Feb. 2. Mohammed and Mohammedanism.

The reader, looking over this list, may be surprised that we do not place the topic "Christ and Christianity" last, thus making a climax. The reason that we present the topics in the above mentioned order is because that is the order in which these religions appeared in the world.

The connection of certain of these religions with the Jewish faith, the connection of certain others with Christianity, make them attractive subjects for study. Under the head of "Abraham and Judaism," we will [illegible] from Zoroaster, who promoted a great religious movement after Judaism was fully developed.

DRY FORCES TO OPEN OPTION FIGHT JANUARY 6

The opening public event of the present campaign of the Lenawee County Local Option association will occur on Monday evening, January 6, at Schoolcraft's Rink, Adrian. On that occasion a great county wide banquet will be given. It is expected that large delegations will be present from the various sections of the county. The principal speaker will be Howard H. Mr. Russell has a national reputation as a speaker and organizer and his occasion will afford the citizens of Lenawee County the rare privilege of hearing Mr. Russell. Mr. Russell now has special charge of the Lincoln Legion, a great temperance organization for boys. Mr. Russell has given the best twenty years of his life to the great temperance cause and is known throughout the nation as one of the foremost orators and workers in this great reform. Mr. Russell has traveled extensively throughout the United States and has participated in battles for temperance on many occasions and under all circumstances. He will bring rich results of his experience and success to the men of Lenawee County in the great message he will deliver. It will be a great occasion graced by the great speaker. There will be special [illegible] short speeches by some of the Lenawee County [illegible] and altogether it will be a great inspirational occasion. No attempt will be made to raise funds at this banquet. The price of the tickets has been placed at the very low rate of [illegible] each.

In the afternoon the county Local Option Committee will hold a most important meeting.

Plans are already well under way for this great inspirational occasion and the workers throughout the county are eagerly anticipating the event.

An Ordinance to provide for the keeping of the sidewalks of the village free from snow, ice, filth and other nuisances.

Sec. 1. The Village of Tecumseh ordains: That the owners and occupants of all lands in the village shall, before the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon of each day, clear away and remove from all sidewalks adjoining their respective premises, all snow, ice, filth and other nuisances.

Sec. 2. That in case of the failure or neglect of such owner or occupant to remove all snow, ice, filth and other nuisances from the sidewalks of this village, within the time above provided, the Street Commissioner is hereby ordered and directed to proceed and remove from all such sidewalks all snow, ice, filth and other nuisances thereon; keeping a seperate account of the expense of each cleaning of the sidewalks adjoining each separately owned or occupied parcel of land, which expense, together with the description of such parcel and the name of the owner or occupant thereof, shall be forthwith reported by the Street Commissioner to the Village Clerk, who shall keep a correct record of the same.

Sec. 3. All expense incurred by the village in the keeping of the sidewalks clear and free from snow, ice, filth and other nuisances, as above provided, shall be assessed, as a special assessment against the premises adjoining the sidewalk in connection with which such expense is incurred, plus a penalty of ten per cent of such expense to be levied and collected upon the next assessment roll of the village.

Pepper.

Black and white pepper are from the same round seed of a tropical plant. The white is ground after the black outer skin has been removed. That is the only difference. The white is considered less irritating to the stomach. It is also preferred for dishes consisting of cream and milk, such as oyster stews, creamed potatoes and the like.

BREAKS PARDON RECORD

Governor G. S. Donaghey of Arkansas smashed all pardon records by liberating 316 state convicts and forty-four county prisoners. At the same time he made public a message, which he will submit to the legislature next month, giving his reasons for granting the pardons. He says he has always opposed the convict lease system as practiced in Arkansas and has made repeated efforts to induce the legislature to repeal the law. He charges that convicts are hired to contractors, who sublet them to others for the sole purpose of enriching themselves, that the men are often treated inhumanly and given prison terms far in excess of their deserts.

Governor Donaghey says he knows of no better way to get the legislature to give the matter attention than by almost emptying the prison.

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by L. A. Wright & Son.

W. R. Fox, 119 W. Washington St., Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble, after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with similar results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Housework Drudgery!

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, heals inflammation and ulceration. It tranquillizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.

MRS. BRIGGS.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any druggist persuade you that his unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

SAGINAW—Geo. Lasch, Hungarian, was found not guilty of killing John Rossman by a jury in the circuit court. The jury deliberated 55 minutes before the decision was reached. Only three witnesses were examined, Mrs. John Rossman, widow of the dead man, Mrs. George Lesch, the defendant's wife, and Lesch. Mrs. Lesch said she saw her husband point the gun at Rossman and fire. Mrs. Rossman said she heard Lesch say: "Look out, I am going to shoot." Lesch said he and Rossman had been drinking alcohol and water and he positively did not know what did transpire until several hours afterwards, and he did not know he had the gun and did not pull the trigger. Judge Gage, when the verdict was reached, said: "How you arrived at such a verdict is beyond my understanding."

LANSING—It is really the front door of the saloon itself, not the main door of the hotel in which it is located, that counts in computing the 400 feet distance which a saloon must be from a church under the Warner-Cramton law in this state. This was decided in the supreme court in a case from Onaway. A. E. Starke sought an injunction to compel Judge Emerick to close a saloon in a hotel because the main door of the hotel was within the 400-foot limit. The judge refused on the ground that the front door of the saloon itself was outside the 400-foot line, and the supreme court upheld the decision.

KALAMAZOO—Claude S. Carney, recent Democratic candidate for congress in the Third district, who, according to official returns, was beaten for that office by J. M. C. Smith by a plurality of 127 votes, intends to contest the election in congress. He charges Smith with illegally elected and that he will be able to throw out enough precincts in Eaton county to make his own election certain.

KALAMAZOO—If the Kalamazoo board of supervisors adopts the report that will be presented by the special committee which visited the Detroit House of Correction, Kalamazoo county will next spring build an institution similar to the one in Detroit. Members of the committee, when seen, were heartily in favor of building a workhouse here similar to the one in Detroit.

LANSING—The Michigan state board of health has received a complaint from Perrinton to the effect that a chicken coop is maintained on the principal street. The petitioner wants the fowls removed to another portion of the town because it gives visitors a poor impression of the place, which the complainant claims is a thriving village.

GRAND RAPIDS—John W. Sampson, of Cadillac, the son of Sheriff Thomas Sampson of Isabella county, who was arrested in Cadillac for selling liquor without a government license, was arraigned before Judge Sessions in federal court. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to ninety days in the Wexford county jail and fined $100.

ANN ARBOR—While she was packing her suitcase, preparatory to going to Detroit for a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Katherine Hoey, of Dexter, dropped dead. Heart trouble was the cause. Mrs. Hoey was seventy-five years old, and she was going to spend the holidays with her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Carmody.

LANSING—When Joseph Mire was convicted in court of having robbed a bank in Lenawee county he appealed on the ground that the burglary statute was unconstitutional in that it provided a cruel and unusual punishment. The supreme court held otherwise, and Mire will have to serve his term.

HASTINGS—Vigorously continuing his crusade against violators of game laws in Barry county, Deputy Game Warden Young has caused arrest of Elzey Mead of Castleton, accused of setting traps on muskrat houses. Mead pleaded not guilty and gave bonds for his appearance for trial Dec. 30.

RICHMOND—F. W. Burke, who was the cashier of the Richmond branch of the Macomb County Savings bank, has resigned to become superintendent for the Eastern Michigan Edison company in Armanda, Memphis, New Haven and Richmond. Elton Congdon will take his place in the bank.

HASTINGS—For threatening to shoot his family and threatening a neighbor who, he says, was setting a bad example for farm boys by hauling light loads to market, John Ryan, a well-known farmer of Irving township, fifty-five years old, has been committed to the asylum at Kalamazoo.

The Joke.

"Jones says his wife can't take a joke." "That's funny, seems to me." "How so?" "She took Jones."—Judge.

GRAND RAPIDS—Clarence Gould, who is a resident of Bellaire, has confessed stealing a letter containing $1.25 from a rural mail box and forging the owner's name when he was arraigned in United States federal court. He was remanded for sentence.

HER CELEBRATION

How an Obtuse English Girl Was Won Over.

BY SUSANNE GLENN.

At eight o'clock in the evening of July second, Jack Duncan swung briskly up the walk toward the piazza that held the charming person of Victoria Mann.

He was going to ask her to help him celebrate the Fourth. He knew that she knew this, and that she was going to refuse. But in spite of it, his lively countenance held an extremely cheerful expression.

"Good evening, Miss Mann," he said, bowing low.

"Good evening." The girl's lips were demure, but her eyes twinkled.

Duncan sank in a chair in close proximity to the big rocker.

"Are you aware," he inquired, "that this is the second of July?"

The girl lowered her eyelids, thereby adding to her appearance of demureness, and incidentally hiding the tell-tale twinkles.

"I—I believe I did notice it when I studied my Sunday school lesson," she murmured.

"Then you will understand that the day after tomorrow will be the Fourth of July," he continued painstakingly.

No response.

"But surely, my dear girl, you can grasp that fact!"

Still she remained silent.

Leaning over, he lifted the pretty brown little hand resting on the broad arm of the rocker, and lingeringly counted off the days on its fingers.

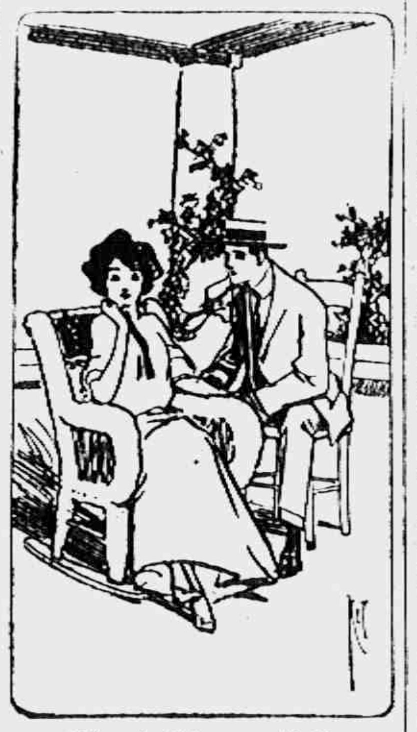
"One, two—Sunday, the second of July, Monday, the third, Tuesday the fourth—the great and glorious Fourth, Victoria!" tightening his hold on the fingers by way of emphasis.

When the blue eyes lifted the twinkles had been subdued, they held only a look of calm wonder.

"Y—es?" she murmured, as if doubting.

"It assuredly is, my girl! And you are going to spend it with me this year—we'll have the time of our lives!" His voice held confidence and affectionate persuasion.

Miss Mann drew away her hand and placed it under the folds of her gown for future safety. She further rocked in a comfortable, maddening manner.



"Victoria, Listen to Me!"

"I expect to spend Tuesday very quietly, while father and the mater go to the park; I fear you will find that too uninteresting," she said, sweetly.

The young man looked at her pityingly but with unabating cheerfulness.

"Victoria, you're terribly obtuse. It isn't your fault, of course, but it is a dreadful handicap, particularly since taking up your residence in this land of 'quickness.'"

Victoria's eyes flashed preliminary fireworks.

"I remember," continued Duncan gazing rather thoughtfully, "the first year you were here. We youngsters planned a picnic for the Fourth, and my heart was just set on taking the pretty little English girl—you were intensely pretty in those days, Victoria!"

"I wish I could retain as pleasant a remembrance regarding your extreme youth, Mr. Duncan!"

"Quite true, my dear, age has used me kindly!

"But my proposal was refused—leaving no room for doubt. My heart was crushed for the time being.

"During the subsequent three hundred and sixty-four days my attentions, however, were accepted—even gracefully courted—but again on the three-hundred and sixty-fifth I was spurned, rejected, walked over! I shall not disclose the times this has been repeated, but I've never missed a year! Surely, such patience, such perseverance is worthy of a better fate."

"It is worthy of a better cause, at least," answered the girl, crisply.

"Will you tell me, fair one, why you thus treat me?" with deep melancholy.

"Because," flashed the girl, refusing to smile, "I am not an American—your Fourth is nothing to me!"

"Girl, girl! Are you wiser than your own father? He, too, was born under the lion, but he'll make a racket next Tuesday that any born American might be proud to produce!"

"But my father is American—his home, his interests are American, because he loves an American woman. I make no complaint. The mater has been as a mother to me—but," with delicate emphasis, "I do not love an American!"

"Obtuseness, my dear, pure obtuseness," refusing to be crushed.

"And beside," lifting her head proudly, "my father was not named for the greatest queen the world has ever known!"

"True again, and the little discrepancy has, as near as I can make out, saved him a jolly lot of trouble!"

"Of course," said Victoria condescendingly, "I must not expect you to understand my feelings any more than I can comprehend your desire to do things on the Fourth of July that you would not think of doing on the fifth. It simply goes to show the insurmountable difference between us!"

"Victoria, listen to me!" He leaned toward her, and the undertone of amusement dropped from his voice and manner.

"I have been disappointed of course, when you have refused to help me be patriotic, but still—I have liked your grit. It has been a [illegible] sort of joke, and I knew we'd [illegible] friends as ever the next [illegible] year it is different. It's [illegible] my last day here for a [illegible] and I want to spend it with [illegible] girl."

"But you told us your stay [illegible] be only temporary."

"It may be three months [illegible] three years."

"If you wish to spend a [illegible] with me, why not tomorrow? [illegible] delighted, for old times' sake."

"Tomorrow is already [illegible] business engagements."

"I am very sorry," she [illegible]

The young man looked at [illegible] ly.

"Very well," he said [illegible] ly, rising to depart. [illegible] Tuesday evening [illegible] by."

Victoria watched him [illegible] the street.

"He'll be back," she whispered to herself, confidently. "I could [illegible] give in now after holding out [illegible]"

"He's going to call on Grace [illegible] worth," thought Victoria with a twinge of jealousy. "Marcia and [illegible] are great friends."

On Monday evening Victoria [illegible] discerned his familiar figure on the Ainsworth veranda. And [illegible] morning as she listlessly [illegible] roses in the garden, Duncan [illegible] Grace flashed past in a gay [illegible]

Victoria spent the day [illegible] wandering about the house [illegible] grounds. She would not [illegible] to think—she would not [illegible] to her own heart that she [illegible] happy.

In the early twilight she sank down dejectedly behind the piazza screen. Evening would bring Duncan [illegible] goodby. She must meet him bravely. Someone was coming down the [illegible] she shrank out of sight instinctively.

"Yes, it is true," one of the advancing girls was saying. "Grace told [illegible] herself this afternoon. She [illegible] happy to live!"

"It was very sudden," the other answered. "She is going—"

The voices passed out of hearing.

Victoria clutched the arms of the chair desperately, shook with sobs. "Oh, what a fool I've [illegible]" she whispered over and over. "[illegible] might have known [illegible] such childishness!"

"Victoria!" he cried, kneeling beside her, "why, my dear, dear girl, what is this?"

Overcome by grief, and chagrin at having him find her in her present shaken condition, Victoria could only turn away her face and sob more frantically.

With a masterful sweep of his strong arms, he drew her close, pressing her tearful face against his shoulder.

"I have come to say goodby, little rebel. What sort of welcome do you call this? How am I to go away and leave you crying like this, Victoria?"

"Well, it matters to me! Dry your eyes, and let's go down to the park and see the fireworks; they will be glorious presently. Let me at least carry away a pleasant memory, dear."

"But Grace—what will she think?"

"She will think you are a nice, sensible girl. We talked about you all day, and she said if you would consent, she should come up here and talk to you herself!"

"But I thought—she—"

"Victoria, if you thought that, you are—obtuse!"

The girl laughed in sudden relief.

"Come," she said, rising with quick determination.

"Dear heart, do not send me away alone tomorrow," he pleaded earnestly.

"Would you take advantage of a defeated general?"

"Are you defeated, Victoria?" [illegible] ly.

"Very, very much defeated," she said with a severity intended to cover the tenderness in her voice, "when I will consent to making the Fourth of July the very happiest day of my life, Jack Duncan!"

PAIN IN THE ROYAL NOTICE

Composer Had Occasion to Remember Former Time That Maria Theresa Honored Him.

An amusing incident of the [illegible] boyhood of the great composer, Joseph Haydn, is given by Mary Maxwell Moffat in her [illegible] of the Austrian empress, Maria Theresa.

When von Reutter became choirmaster of St. Stephen's cathedral he had Joseph Haydn among [illegible]

During a visit to the Hungarian Prince Esterhazy, in 17[illegible], Maria Theresa took occasion to say a word of praise to Haydn, who had composed the music of the opera given in her honor, and had conducted the performance. She expressed the conviction that she had seen him before, although she could not remember the occasion.

"The last time your majesty was pleased to take notice of me," said Haydn, "you ordered [illegible] thrashing."

"That does not sound [illegible]" rejoined the empress. "How did it happen?"

Then Haydn told of a [illegible] time when, with other pupils of von Reutter, he had been brought to Schönbrunn to sing in the chapel [illegible] the services the boys [illegible] ing over the scaffolding of the new wings of the palace. [illegible] caught sight of them, and [illegible] forbidding the dangerous [illegible] the attraction of the [illegible] was irresistible; on the following day the boys were again risking their necks. When Maria Theresa expostulated with von Reutter, his surmise that the ringleader was "that young scamp, Joseph Haydn," led her to suggest that the rod be used to improve his memory.—Youth's Companion.

Assurance of Security

'Tis sweet when the seas are roughened by violent winds to view [illegible] the toils of others; not that there is pleasure in seeing others [illegible], but because man is glad to [illegible] self secure. It is pleasant, too, to look with no share of peril on the mighty contests of war; but nothing is sweeter than to reach those calm, undisturbed temples, raised by the wisdom of philosophers, whence thou mayest look down on poor, mistaken mortals, wandering up and down in life's devious ways.—Lucretius II.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure and get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Much is said now and then about [illegible] but we don't recall ever having read where they threw a spoke as a result of turning [illegible] in a fortnight.

Take the direct road to health and strength by using Foley Kidney Pills for backache, rheumatism, weak sore kidneys and bladder irregularities. Each ingredient is chosen for its positive healing and curative qualities. Foley Kidney Pills are the best medicine you can buy for kidney and bladder troubles. Mrs. J. M. Findley, [illegible], says: "I took Foley Kidney Pills and they entirely cured me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Men are never old as long as they can enjoy the noise made by a crowd of roaring football rooters.

A mean stuffy cold, with hoarse wheezy breathing is just the kind that runs into bronchitis or pneumonia. Don't trifle with such serious conditions but take Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. Quick and beneficial results are just what you can expect from this great medicine. It soothes and heals the inflamed air passages. It stops the hoarse racking cough. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Nobody is born bad, says an eminent socialist. Maybe he knows, but whether right or wrong, his gentle words ought to be a comfort to the [illegible] father.

$1.00 Per Plate

was paid at a banquet to Henry Clay, in New Orleans in 1842. Mighty costly for those with stomach trouble or indigestion. Today people every where use Dr. King's New Life Pills for these troubles as well as liver, kidney and bowel disorders. Easy, safe, sure. Only 25 cts at C. A. Wright & Son.

Sometimes a man lies to his wife because he knows she won't believe the truth.

A Hero In A Lighthouse

For years J. S. Donahue, So. Haven, Mich., a civil war captain, as a lighthouse keeper, averted awful wrecks, but a queer fact is, he might have been a wreck himself if Electric Bitters had not prevented. "They cured me of kidney trouble and chills," he writes, "after I had taken other so called cures for years, without benefit and they also improved my sight. Now, at seventy, I am feeling fine." For dyspepsia, indigestion, all stomach, liver and kidney troubles, they're without equal. Try them. Only 50 cts at C. A. Wright & Son.

We can't help feeling sorry sometimes for the wife of the jolly good fellow.

Cut the High Cost of Living

W. H. Chapman, Winnebago, Neb., tells how he did it. "My two children had a very bad cough and the doctor's medicine did them no good. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before it was all used the children were free and cured of their cough. I saved a doctor's bill for one 25c bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. No opiates. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Political arguments [illegible] more [illegible] than they make votes.

Frightful Polar Winds

blow with terrific force at the far north and play havoc with the skin, causing red, rough or sore chapped hands and lips, that need Bucklen's Arnica Salve to heal them. Unrivaled for cold sores, also burns, boils, sores, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son.

Why do ships have needle guns? To thread their way with stupid.

Escaped After Fifteen Years

W. P. Broyles made a successful escape after fifteen years of suffering from kidney and bladder troubles. Foley Kidney Pills released him and will do just the same for others. He says: "They cured a most severe backache with painful bladder irregularities, and they do all you claim for them." Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

That will enable us to enter our next fall season with entirely up to date stock. Our merchandise is the finest and best as our stock is new and there is no accumulation of old style or shelf worn goods. Allow us to show you.

Browned Potatoes.

Peel and cook sufficient potatoes until done; mash and season with salt and a generous lump of butter dissolved in half a cupful of sweet milk; whip with a fork until light. Place in a baking dish, dot the surface with black pepper in spots the size of a dime, put a small piece of butter in the middle and bake a rich brown in a hot oven.

Lemon Rice Pudding.

One cup of rice boiled soft in water. Add a pint of cold milk and a piece of butter the size of an egg, yolks of four eggs and grated rind of a lemon. Mix and bake half an hour. After the pudding is baked and cooled beat the whites of four eggs, stir in nearly a pint of sugar and the juice of a lemon. Pour this over and brown.

To Dry Clean Lace Collars.

Mix equal quantities of white flour and bran together and gently rub this mixture with a clean piece of flannel into the collar (stretched out onto a hard surface). Beat out with a stick. If necessary repeat the process.

Apple Porcupines.

Peel and core the apples and steam in a rich sirup until tender. Stick the surface with halved pecans, fill the centers with sugar, butter and spice. Brown in a quick oven. Delicious served with whipped cream.

HUMOROUS QUIPS

The Reason.

A Sunday school superintendent determined in the kindness of his heart to give a big treat to all the boys and girls in the Sunday school. His garden was a large one, and this year the strawberry crop was rich and abundant. So he told the children that if they came to the schoolroom on the following evening (Monday) each of them would have given them a plate of ripe strawberries with abundance of sugar and cream.

Of course every boy and girl was there. When they had finished the superintendent said:

"Have you all had a good time?"

"Yes, sir, thank you!" came from a hundred grateful, happy lads and lassies.

"Could you eat any more?" asked Mr. Grayson.

"No, thank you, sir," replied the scholars.

"Now," said the genial superintendent, "suppose you had gone into my garden and taken those strawberries without my leave. Would you have enjoyed them so much?"

"Why not?" asked Mr. Grayson.

No reply. So he put the question again, but still there was no reply. At last one dear little chappie put up his hand, thinking he knew the right answer.

Then Georgie replied so winsomely:

"Please, teacher, we shouldn't 'ave 'ad any sugar and cream wi' 'em."—Tit-Bits.

The Major's Value.

General W. H. Lemon of the Grand Army of the Republic was recounting at a dinner at Lawrence, Kan., tales of the civil war.

"Major Bunks," he said, smiling, "was a pompous chap. The boys had a good deal of fun over his exchange.

"It seems that on a very dark night a stalwart Confederate took the major prisoner. This fact, together with the prisoner's return to camp, was signaled to headquarters tersely:

Hitting It Up.

A guest in a hotel was shot and killed. The negro porter who heard the shooting was a witness at the trial. "How many shots did you hear?" asked the lawyer. "Two shots, sah," he replied. "How far apart were they?" "'Bout like dis way," explained the negro, clapping his hands with an interval of about a second between them. "Where were you when the first shot was fired?" "Shinin' a gemman's shoe in de basement of de hotel." "Where were you when the second shot was fired?" "Ah was a passin' de depot."—Herald and Presbyter.

Explained.

"The most ghastly superstition," Professor James said recently, "has often its base in a ludicrous fact. It is like the case of Jones.

"'Jones,' said a man, 'tells me that his wooden leg pained him horribly last night.'

"'Nonsense!' was the reply. 'How could his wooden leg pain him?'

"'His wife,' he explained, 'hit him over the head with it.'"—Los Angeles Times.

No Doubt.

Sapleigh—Chawming girl, Miss Sweet. Do you know from the way she looked at me I weally believe she was twying to make an impression.

Miss Keen—I shouldn't wonder. People generally select something soft for that purpose.—Boston Transcript.

Locating the Responsibility.

"You can't always rely on weather predictions."

"My dear sir," replied the climate expert, "weather predictions are absolutely correct and scientific. It's the climate that is unreliable."—New York Sun.

Holland's Stock Salt.

A WORD ABOUT WORMS.

Don't Feed the Worms. Ninety per cent. of your stock have them

Worms, like buzzards, are found where there is decay. The food upon which they flourish is the slimy product of undigested food in the stomach and intestines of stock affected with indigestion. The ingredients we have united with salt are especially adapted to stimulate the digestive organs, sweeten the stomach and bowels, neutralize foul gases and deal a death blow to the worms. DR. HOLLAND'S MEDICATED STOCK SALT prevents disease because it is a powerful antiseptic and relieves indigestion. An animal suffering from indigestion is deficient in quantity or blood, which also is poor in quality, and like the contents of the stomach and intestines, is food for the germs of disease.

SHEEP are infested with over twenty kinds of worms. The Medicated Salt will destroy these worms.

HOGS are infested with several kinds of worms that cause various disorders and much disturbance in the stomach and intestines, and seriously retard their development. In all such cases Dr. Holland's Medicated Stock salt will be found to be a sure relief, as it is a worm destroyer.

100 lbs., $4.00; 200 lbs., $7.50; 300 lbs., $11.00.

FACT

Local Evidence

Evidence that can be verified.
Fact is what we want.
Opinion is not enough.
Opinions differ.
Here's a Tecumseh fact.
You can test it.

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past few years and they have given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it." (Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed at a later date he said: "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name in reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Hints for Housekeepers

Keep Foley's Honey and Tar Compound always on hand, and can quickly head off a cold by its prompt use. It contains no opiates, heals and soothes the inflamed air passages, stops the cough, and may save a big doctor's bill. In the yellow package. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son

W. R. Fox, 105 W. Washington St. Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with similar results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Don't sneer at the Kansas City woman who paid fifty dollars for a husband. Women have paid that much for bulldogs that couldn't be taught to roll over in the presence of guests.

Housework Drudgery!

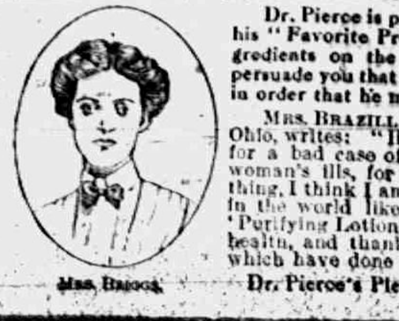
This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, heals inflammation and ulceration. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.



MRS. BRIGGS.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any druggist persuade you that his unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit.

MRS. BRAZILL BRIGGS, of 529 N. Washington St., Delphos, Ohio, writes: "Having taken your 'Favorite Prescription, for a bad case of intestinal disease and constipation with woman's ills, for which I was almost unable to do anything, I think I am safe in saying that there are no remedies in the world like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Purifying Lotion Tablets.' I am now enjoying the best of health, and thank Dr. Pierce for his wonderful medicines which have done me a world of good."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

During the year we have given all that pretains to village life, and if today we change our style of news we are sure it will be enjoyed as much as the regular issue and a paper of this sort surely brings a smile in the Herald office.

OPERA HOUSE IMPROVEMENTS

The new steam heating plant in the Bradley Opera House, has just been completed at a cost of $1500. It is a 3750 foot boiler Nico pattern with 2000 feet of radiation, consisting of the latest styles of coils and radiators, and has as fine a heating plant as any theater in the State can boast of. Charles Courtad had the contract and installed the plant. Mr. Bradley has spared no expense and every thing has been of the best. He contemplates adding further improvements to the house at once. It will be used for the first time next Thursday when "The Girl and the Drummer" is presented.

CHANGE OF PARTY MEANS CHANGE OF FOREIGN POLICY.

Heretofore a change of party has not involved any change in the conduct of our foreign relations or foreign policy in material matters and with the more important nations of the world. It is true that President Cleveland reversed the Harrison program in Hawii and President McKinley in turn reversed the Cleveland policy. But Hawii was an incident, although later it became a long step in our expansion policy. It has been sixteen years, however, since the Democratic party has had any voice in shaping foreign policies. In that time we have become a "world power," and, for the most part, with the opposition of the party about to take control of the government. In the progress of events steps have been taken which brought forth vigorous criticism of men recently promoted to positions of power and control who voiced the sentiment of their party. Promise has been made that some of those steps taken will be retraced and that modification of policies pursued may be expected. It is on this account that the course of the new administration and the party in power in Congress after the 4th of March will be watched with keen interest.—From "Will the Democrats Reverse Our Foreign Policies?" by A Veteran Observer, in the American Review of Reviews for January.

The Domestic Science Stove

THE recreation hours oftentimes teach valuable lessons. It is during these hours that things are done the easiest way, and thus you learn many labor saving methods good for every day use.

The electric grill not only adds ease to the fun of making fudge or cosiness to the impromptu luncheon, but it also teaches the most important lesson in domestic science—how to cook in the easiest, cleanest and least expensive way.

Anything you wish can be quickly cooked by it. You can grill, boil, fry, toast, stew and bake griddle cakes—all on the dining room table or on the little table in your own boudoir.

The Tecumseh Electric Company

"THE GIRL AND THE DRUMMER"

"The Girl and the Drummer" which will be the attraction at the Bradley Opera House this week Thursday was originally booked in Jackson for that date but owing to the entire week being taken by the LaPort Stock Co. the date was switched to Tecumseh.

The company comes here highly recommended by many of the managers through Indiana where they have been playing. The following telegram was received in answer to one sent the manager at Peru by the local management.

Peru, Ind., Jan. 4.
Mgr. Opera House,
Tecumseh, Mich.
(Signed) C. A. Holden, Mgr.

Mr. Fred Byers who plays the part of the drummer, has made an enviable reputation for himself in prominent productions. He created Spolleta in Constance Crawleys product on of "La Tosca." Following this he joined the musical comedy field, tarring in several big productions. Mr. Byers has played many roles but the part of 'the traveling salesman' in "The Girl and the Drummer," is said, by critics to be his best.

A complete production of special scenery is carried by the company. "The Girl and the Drummer" is a comedy drama and though dealing with the life of a traveling salesman should not be confused with the play, "The Traveling Salesman" which played here last winter.

MASQUERADE PARTY

The Masquerade and Old Fashioned dance given by the Woodmen and Royal Neighbors Friday evening Jan. 3 was a very pleasant affair and was largely attended.

There was a wonderful diversity of costumes, and a merry time was had guessing who the various parties might be. Dancing old fashioned and new was prolonged until "the wee sma' hours ayant the twal" and every one enjoyed the last. Refreshments were served during the evening. Mrs. Jack Staulter and Percy Heidenreich furnished the music. Mrs. John Collins and Lester Coller received first prizes and Nettie Reeves and Percy Slater consolations.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure and get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

The semi-annual session of the association of O. E. S. of Lenawee and and Monroe Counties was in session in Tecumseh at Masonic Hall. A business meeting was held Thursday at 2 p. m. and with a meeting at 6 p. m. when the initiatory work was exemplified by officers chosen from the different lodges. The candidates were Mr. and Mrs. Goodsell.

The work was most beautifully exemplified, every officer being fully impressed with the spirit of the order.

Mrs. Kies of Olivet Grand Worthy Matron made a most eloquent speech holding the audience spell bound. She praised our beautiful village, its lights, its railroad convenience and more than all the Masonic Temple and its surroundings, As she mingled with the company, her charming personality made her at once a sister and friend.

W. F. King of Adrian made a short address and was cheered to the echo. G. Roscoe Swift being called upon made a few remarks and then favored the company with singing the "Eastern Star" and as an encore, "The Beautiful Island of Somewhere" and what singing every heart responded to the words as they fell from his lips. Mrs. Reale sang "My Rosary" and for an encore "In Rose Time" in a most charming manner. Mrs. Eldridge—Past Matron of Grand Lodge made a few remarks.

A social time with the visiting brothers and sisters and light refreshments were served. The day was a typical one and the constellation of Stars made it bright within the Temple.

The Grand Lodge officers who were present were:

W. G. M.—Mrs. E. Kies
W. G. P.—William Hollands
P. W. G. P.—W. F. King
P. W. G. M.—Mrs. Clara Eldridge

P. W. G. M. of F. & A. M. G. Roscoe Swift

Mrs. S. W. Anderson as President of the Association deserves much credit for the success of this meeting as she was untiring in her work.

CORUNNA—Robert W. Bounom who is a negro chef, and his brother, Karter Bounom, are in the local jail for slashing two white men with a razor in Durand. The trouble started when George Johnson asked Robert Bounom to pay him a bet he had won in a game of cards. Words led to blows, and Bounom drew a razor and attacked Johnson, severely cutting him. Harry Haskins, a railroad engineer, rushed to Johnson's assistance and Karter Bounom took his brother's side. Haskins was slashed across the abdomen. The negroes fled but both were arrested later.

IONIA—The recently held joint meeting of the Ionia farmers' institute and Chautauqua officers here drew a warm discussion over the proposed plan to break away from the state institute and go it alone this year. Professor Taft notified the local county institute that the usual program must be carried out but it was decided to merge with the Ionia winter Chautauqua for four days starting Feb. 10.

PORT HURON — Being charged with a statutory offense, Annie Clayton, thirty years old, and William Hilliker, thirty-six, were arrested as they alighted from the southbound train at the tunnel station. Both are married. The woman has four children, the oldest nine years of age and the man two children, the oldest ten years of age. When arrested the woman was carrying a baby of less than two years.

GLADWIN—Drilling has just been started on an oil well about a mile from the city. The present well is within a few feet of where an unsuccessful attempt was made to find coal about ten years ago. The well is financed by McClure & Stevens, who have leases on about 20,000 acres besides owning extensive lands themselves. The promoters are very confident that oil will be found.

BATTLE CREEK—Another large factory has been added to the commercial interests of Battle Creek in the Allsteel Manufacturing company which has been organized among local capitalists. The company has secured a patent on a paper baler declared to be one of the best in the market and will manufacture the machines at 91 River street.

LANSING — Governor-Elect Woodbridge N. Ferris has announced that Charles Warren of Cassopolis will be messenger in the executive office. William Comstock of Alpena, will be appointed member of the board of control of the Michigan School for the Blind, and Bishop John N. McCormick of Grand Rapids will be reappointed member of the state board of corrections and charities.

JEFF DAVIS DEAD

Stricken with Apoplexy at His Little Rock Home.

END COMES QUITE SUDDENLY

Arkansan Laid Law When About to Return to Washington to Attend to His Senatorial Duties—Was the Idol of the "Hillbillies" in His State and Foe of Plutocrats.

The senator, who was known as the "Idol of the Hillbillies," was preparing to return to his duties in Washington when stricken. His term was due to expire March 4, 1913.

Mr. Davis was one of the most spectacular members of the United States senate. At all times an inveterate enemy of "the plutocrats," he attracted world-wide attention in the winter of 1910 in a speech opposing a bill to give a right of way through Arkansas for a gas pipe line. He was proud of being known as a "trustbuster."

Tells of Hillbillies.

In Arkansas there are Democrats, Swamp Democrats, Hill Democrats and One-Gallus Democrats. All were Davis followers save the Democrats. The Democrats called the others hillbillies. The hillbilly's classification of Arkansas' population was: Democrats and city people.

As the hillbilly sees it, he is a Democrat and the man who calls him a "hillbilly" is "city people."

Jeff Davis' line of success in politics stretched along this division; his unceasing work was to keep the segregation clear in the hillbilly conception.

Davis Lived in Luxury.

Mr. Davis didn't live according to his hillbilly gospel when at home in Little Rock. He owned one of the biggest residences in the city, a large green-house which stands at the corner of two principal streets, with "street kyahs runnin' fo' de doah." On the broad verandas, in the polished floors visitors could see their reflection as in a mirror.

Luxurious armchairs offered their wire-spanning embrace. Servants came at the touch of a bell; electric fans dispelled the summer heat, steam radiators the chill of winter. There are bath tubs in the house and ice cream freezers in the cellar. His law offices were no less modern.

Was Married Twice.

Senator Davis was born at Russellville, Ark., May 6, 1862, and was graduated from Vanderbilt university in 1861, being admitted to the bar the same year. He married Ina McKenzie in 1882. Three sons and four daughters were born to them. Two years after Mrs. Davis died he married Miss Leila Carter, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Wallace A. Carter of Ozark, Ark.

Soon after being admitted to the bar Mr. Davis was made district attorney. He served two terms and then became attorney general of Arkansas. In 1900 he was elected governor, serving three terms before being sent to the United States senate.

Burns Detectives, Posing as Prisoners, Unearth Michigan Penitentiary Conspiracy.

LANSING—An alarming case of smallpox has been reported near Lapeer. The state board of health is hot on the trail of the case, remembering the epidemic at the home of the feeble-minded two years ago, when it was necessary to call out the militia.

WIT AND WISDOM

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Slayton entertained the Wit and Wisdom Club at their home Monday evening. The evening topic was "The Old and the New South." The following program was given:—

Vocal Solo—F. R. Fenn

Paper, "The Old South"—Rev. W. B. Hartzog

Negro Melodies—By the Jubileesingers, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Slayton, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Slayton, Miss Alice Wimple and F. R. Fenn

"The New South"—Miss Leesen

Vocal Solo—"Southern Song" Elmer Slayton

The papers were very fine, but the negro melodies were great. Light refreshments were served at the close of the program.

UNCLE SAM'S MACARONI

Fine Window Display at F. D. Avery's Grocery. Artistic Work of Ernest Church.

The fine window display of Macaroni in the show window at F. D. Avery's this week is full of interest. The first to call one's attention is the wheat that is used in its manufacture, a little brown kernel that is ground by a certain process for this special use. The prepared stuff comes next, the Alphabets and noodles for soups then Vermicelli, Spaghetti, curved cut and plain Macaroni.

Books of recipes are also on display with the Goddess of Liberty to do the cooking. Everything in this line of goods is shown at its best in this window.

PRESIDENT EMERETUS ANGELL THE "GRAND OLD MAN."

Celebrated 84th Birthday Tuesday Jan. 7 1913 at His Home in Ann Arbor

President Emeretus Angell celebrated his 84th birthday at his home in Ann Arbor Tuesday Jan. 7th. He is in his usual health but passed a quiet day with no outward demonstration, receiving many calls and congratulations. All over the country he will be remembered as the "Grand Old Man" of the U. of M.

BANQUET IN ADRIAN

Local Option Men, Large Crowd in Attendance

Over two hundred men gathered in Schoolcraft Rink Monday evening for the opening meeting of the local option campaign against the opening of the saloons in Lenawee Co.

After partaking of a fine banquet the meeting was called to order by Dr. Hubbill and C. H. Mott led in singing "America." A vocal solo by H. L. Tanner followed, after which the chairman of the meeting was introduced. He had scarcely begun his speech when a telegram was brought in, which the secretary of the local league read to the assembly. It was a message of good wishes from Fr. Hallissey of Hudson and was as follows: "I champion with all my heart whatever advances the grand cause of temperance, the safety of our glorious republic depends upon its righteous citizens and they are true patroits who contribute to this end. Let your battle cry be, "Lenawee must remain dry,"

Many fine speakers were then introduced by Mr. Carr and much enthusiasm was felt throughout the meeting.

DYNAMITERS MAY BE RELEASED ON BAIL

Petition for Liberty Allowed in Thirty-Two Instances.

Bail has been allowed by the United States circuit court at Chicago in the cases of thirty-two of the thirty-three men sentenced to Leavenworth prison for the iron workers' dynamite conspiracy, but the amount of bail demanded makes a total of $950,000.

The amount was fixed at the rate of $10,000 a year for each year to which the convicted men had been sentenced, and there is much doubt expressed as to whether their friends will be able to furnish the entire amount in the form of securities which the court will accept.

Herbert S. Hockin, former secretary of the union, was the only one of the thirty-three men in Leavenworth who was not included in the writ of supersedeas. This man, who has been repeatedly referred to as "the Iago of the conspiracy," is said to have played fast and loose not only with his fellows in the union, but with government agents and private detectives, to whom he gave both true and misleading information.

Immediately following the decision of the court the point was raised by whom the bonds should be approved. It was agreed that Federal Judge Anderson at Indianapolis should be the judge to approve the bonds.

Will Not Name Goethals.

President Taft told Senator Brandegee of Connecticut, chairman of the interoceanic canal committee, that he would not send to the senate the nomination of Colonel George W. Goethals as civil governor of the Panama canal zone because of the opposition by Democratic senators to his appointment.

WASHINGTON NOTES

PREPARATIONS FOR THE INAUGURATION

Arrangements in Washington are now rapidly taking definite shape towards the inaugral of Mr. Wilson. Mr. William Corcoran Eustis has been chosen Chairman of the Inaugral Committee after one of the most unusual struggles for the honor that has ever taken place in Washington. Several Bankers aspired for the chairmanship but they kept fighting each other until they were all so badly covered with mud that Mr. Eustis was named as the dark horse in the race.

MONEY TRUST INVESTIGATION

The climax of the money trust investigation by the House was reached last week when J. Pierpont Morgan "King of Wall Street" was placed on the witness stand. Mr. Morgan has been accused of manipulating large banks in New York so as to control the money of the country, but he denied that he had any such intention and he also denied that it would be possible for any combination of banks to control the country's money, while this may be partly true yet it is a fact that Mr. Morgan controls a large portion of the great industries and banking institutions of the country by "controlling the directors" who directing them, and this should be prevented by Congress by exercising a control over the personnel of directors, and preventing them from serving more than one or two of the big trusts.

FINANCIAL PROBLEMS

Some of our statesmen in Washington are beginning to realize that while this country has a large volume of money, after all it is not large enough with which to transact the great volume of business required of it. It was the opinion of the Great Clay, Calhoun and Webster trio many years ago that there should be $1 in money for each thirty dollars ($30.) in property and as there is one hundred and fifty billions dollars in wealth there should be five billion dollars ($5,000,000,000) in circulation, whereas there is only a little over three billion dollars circulation, and we have only about thirty-five dollars ($35) per capita in circulation, when there should be about fifty-five ($55) per capita in circulation and there would never, be any financial panics such as we had in 1907. France has the largest per capita circulation of any country in the world, more than forty dollars per capita, which is $40, for each man woman and child, and consequently France has never been known to have a panic in times of peace. We have heard the cry of "too much money" in the country but that is not true, there is not enough money in the country to meet its business requirements, and the sooner the volume of money is increased the better it will be for the business and prosperity of the country.

Our domestic commerce is about $40,000,000,000 and foreign commerce about $4,000,000,000 and it is clear that $3,000,000,000 of money is inadequate for even this great volume of business to say nothing of how we are ever going to increase the country's business unless there is a large increase in the circulating medium. The heavy tax or strain to which the money of the country is subjected in meeting the needs of business keeps us within easy reach of a panic any time and in 1907 in the midst of unusually prosperity the financial cord became over strained and snapped and hence the panic.

Friday Superstitions.

Eggs laid on Friday will, it is said, never decay and will, if eaten, cure the colic.

Journeys were rarely undertaken on Friday during the last century in many European countries.

In the eighteenth century no merchant of London would begin a voyage or undertake any new enterprise on Friday.

In north Germany, it is said that witches obtain power over the person who goes out unwashed on Friday.

Medieval romances assert that fairies are on Friday turned into hideous animals, remaining so until Monday.

Friday is, according to the Welsh, Irish and Scotch, a day consecrated to the fairies, who then can do much mischief.

"The Boy and the Man."

Every boy wishes to be a man, but the measure of a man is not that of age nor strength nor stature nor possessions nor position. That which makes a man is a quality of spirit. It is courage, honor, integrity of character and the resolute purpose to know what is true and to do what is right. The central quality of manliness around which all others must be built up is that of a sense of honor.—St. Nicholas.

Animal Peculiarities.

Tortoises and turtles have no teeth.

Both mandibles of the parrot's beak are movables, but most birds are able to move only one.

The horse has no eyebrows. The appearance of much white in the eye of a horse indicates a vicious nature.

The stork is partial to kittens as an article of food and finds them an easy and wholesome food, and the cats reciprocate by a love for young storks.

Cracks In the Fingers.

The tissues of the body have more salts than are usually found in fresh water. When you have more salt on one side of an animal membrane than on the other nature tries to equalize the amount on both sides. Salts, leaving the tissues of the hands to go into the water, leave the cells partly emptied of their contents. They do not hold together well, and "cracks" result.—St. Nicholas.

Halibut Croquettes.

Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add five tablespoonfuls of flour, stir until bubbling, add slowly one and one-quarter cupfuls of milk, season with one-half teaspoonful of salt, a little white pepper, a grating of nutmeg, one-half teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of minced parsley and one-third teaspoonful of table sauce. Stir until creamy, add two cupfuls of finely flaked halibut and the juice of a small half lemon. Turn on a buttered plate, shape into croquettes when cold, roll in fine crumbs, dip in beaten egg, roll again in crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat. Serve with white or lobster sauce.

Invitation Accepted.

It is told that a certain lady of a western Kansas town desired to show kindness to the captain of the local state militia company and wrote the following invitation: "Mrs. —— requests the pleasure of Captain ——'s company at a reception on Friday evening."

A prompt reply came: "With the exception of three men who are sick with measles, Captain ——'s company accepts your kind invitation and will come with pleasure to your reception Friday evening."—Kansas City Journal.

Bravery.

To his teacher's request that he give the class ideas on the subject of "Bravery," little Johnny delivered himself of the following:

"Some boys is brave because they always plays with little boys, and some boys is brave because their legs is too short to run away, but most boys is brave because somebody's lookin'."—Brooklyn Life.

Just For Emergencies.

One Saturday a small boy arrived with an important air and withdrew 2 cents out of his account. Monday morning he promptly returned the money.

"So you didn't spend your 2 cents?" observed the worker in charge.

"Oh, no," he replied, "but a fellow just likes to have a little cash on hand over Sunday."—Harper's Magazine.

Baked Apple Sauce.

Pare and core apples and cut in quarters. Allow one cupful sugar and one-half cupful water to two quarts apples. Place them in a deep dish. Apple sauce baked requires less sugar than when stewed, for the long cooking in the oven develops the natural sweetness of the apple. Cover closely and cook one and one-half hours. If they cook too fast the steam will cause them to burst, and a mushy sauce will be the result. But moderate cooking leaves each piece distinctly whole in a delicious cidery sirup. Let the apples cool in the dish without touching the fruit.

Delightful Musical

At the Home of Mrs. Robert Moore

ABOUT 75 GUESTS

It was a happy thought that induced Mrs. Moore to throw open her house to her friends on Wednesday evening, and those who were fortunate enough to be present had a rare musical treat The entertainment was in the nature of a piano recital by Mr. Donald P. McAlpine. who though making no musical protentions now, was a few years ago preparing for concert work with Sherwood and coaching with Scharwenka, and he was admirably adapted by his artistic ability to exhibit the qualities of the superb Steinway Grand.

Mr. McAlpine was ably assisted by the four vocalists of the evening who are so well and favorably known to Tecumseh audiences that special recognition of each would be unnecessary Suffice it to say that all were at their best both in the solo and ensemble work. After the programme punch and wafers were served and the guests departed feeling deep appreciation for the pleasure which Mrs. Moore had been able to give them.

The programme was as follows:

PART I

Serenade................Rachmaninoff
Andante Cantabile from
Opus 11..................Tschaikowski
LeSoir.......................Schytte
Danse des Gnomes..........
Alla Marcia....................
Auf dem Meere...............

Mr. McAlpine, Pianist

PART II

Charmeth My Sadness
from Irene..................Gounod
Mr. Ellis

The Little Cloud............Logan
Mrs. Ruthruff
Quartetta: From Rigoletto Verdi
Baritone Solo: Ruddier than the Cherry (from Acis and Galatea)....................Handel
Mr. Fenn
Soprano Solo: Charming
Marguerite..... Old French Song
Mrs. Moore

PART III

Prelude. Opus 28, Number 15 .Chopin
Sonata in E flat major.........Haydn
Allegro..........

Moment Musical.............Moskowski
Mr. McAlpine.

OUR TAXES

This year the total tax of Tecumseh is approximately, $25,700 last year it was $30,900 with one day more in which to collect taxes, there is yet about $500 due.

For the first time in several years a dog tax has been collected this year. The abutting property on the Macon drain and the Tallman drain were taxed this year for the first time.

The cause for the difference in the taxes of last year and this is due to the fact that the bridge tax was all paid up in 1911. In comparing our tax with Adrian, we see Adrians tax this year was $33,044.06. $5,000 less than last year with three days in which to pay. Adrian had $5,013.06 yet due.

Here's a Tecumseh fact.

W. W. Shurtz, Willbeck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store my experience has been so satisfactory that I [illegible] give this public account of it." (Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed at a later date he said: "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name in reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Hints for Housekeepers

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease" writes W. R. Patterson Wellington, Tex. "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son

W. R. Fox, 50 [illegible] Washington St. Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but [illegible] positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with similar results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Don't sneer at the Kansas City woman who paid fifty dollars for a husband. Women have paid that much for bulldogs that couldn't be taught to roll over in the presence of guests.

CONGRESSMAN ENDS HIS LIFE IN OCEAN

W. W. Wedemeyer of Ann Arbor Leaps Overboard from Vessel.

Washington, Jan. 6. — Representative William W. Wedemeyer of Ann Arbor, Mich., who suddenly went insane at Colon, Panama, at the time of President Taft's recent visit to the isthmus, jumped overboard from a ship on which he had been taken at Colon. His body was not recovered and it was presumed was carried away by sharks which infest the harbor.

Representative Wedemeyer went to the isthmus with a congressional party. On the voyage from New York he collapsed and was taken first to a sanitarium in Panama and later was put in confinement in a hospital, where he became violent and raved about his defeat last election. He developed a suicidal tendency and was closely watched.

Wedemeyer's close friends say that a few days before leaving for the isthmus he fell and struck his head on an icy sidewalk.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 4. — Congressman Wedemeyer was a member of the law firm of Cavanaugh, Wedemeyer & Burke of this city. He was forty years old and since his graduation from the University of Michigan he had been one of that institution's most prominent alumni.

For a time Mr. Wedemeyer was United States consul at Georgetown, British Guiana, in South America. He succeeded Charles Townsend, now United States senator, in the lower house at Washington.

CADILLAC—H. H. Harrison, who is the vice president and treasurer of the Ann Arbor railroad, has appointed M. A. Perry assistant treasurer of both the Ann Arbor and the Manistique and Lake Superior railroads. J. W. Piper is appointed assistant auditor of freight and passenger accounts, and L. L. Shephard freight claim agent. All assumed office Jan. 1.

RICHMOND—Mrs. Isabel Graham, who is a poineer resident of this place now on her deathbed, numbering her years in the eighties, presented the Lenox Civic Improvement society with $100 in cash to be used in placing a fountain inscribed with her name in the park recently bought by the association.

RICHMOND — Mabel, the little nine-months-old infant of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hollis, is dead from eating poisonous candy at a Christmas celebration. The child's mother selected a brilliant scarlet piece of candy for her and shortly afterward the child was seized with spasms, which ended in death.

GRANT—With the announced time of his wedding only a few hours away, all arrangements having been completed for the event, Peter Nelson, living south of Grant, met death in a tragic form, dashing into a burning barn to save the live stock and being burned to death before he could escape.

LANSING—The submission to voters of the state of Michigan of constitutional amendments providing initiative and referendum laws and the recall of executive, legislative and administrative officials was urged by Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris in his inaugural address.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

MRS. DICKOVER.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years [illegible] the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes MRS. B. F. DICKOVER, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

PEACE TALK ENDS

Turkey Concedes Much, but Refuses to Cede Adrianople.

MEETING ADJOURNS SINE DIE

Reschid Pasha Insists that Action of Allies Is Equivalent to Breaking Off Negotiations and Renewing War —Final Outcome of Matter Still in Great Doubt.

At London, Eng., Turkey refused flatly to give up Adrianople when she made her definite answer to the demands of the allies.

After the delegates of the Balkan allies had conferred for twenty minutes they announced the meeting adjourned sine die over the protest of Reschid Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation, who said the allies might as well break up the negotiations and renew the war.

The answer made to him was, in effect, that if Turkey considered that there had been a rupture, it could do so and start the war again as soon as it pleased.

Does Not Concede Enough.

Turkey, in her answer to the demands of the allies, made several important concessions, but these fell far short of what the allies had been asking and say they will insist on. Turkey offered to give up the island of Crete, but demanded, as a return for this concession, that the allies demand no other islands in the Aegean sea. Turkey also offered to discuss some more the frontier line between Turkey and Bulgaria, but made plain that "this frontier must leave Adrianople in Ottoman territory."

"If, in spite of these sacrifices," the reply says, "the allies are minded to break off the negotiations all the responsibilities and consequences of this rupture will fall on them, and in this case we herewith declare null and void all the concessions we have made hitherto."

Suspend Work of Conference.

The delegates of the allied states withdrew for a conference in private after Reschid Pasha had read Turkey's statement. In twenty minutes the delegates returned and read a statement to the effect that, as Turkey had not proposed a plan which corresponded to the demands of the allies and as Turkey's proposals were such that it looked as if no conclusion could be arrived at, they felt obliged to suspend the work of the conference.

Stojan Novakovitch, head of the Servian envoys, immediately declared the session closed. Reschid protested vehemently, but the allies, coolly began to leave the room.

Finally M. Venezelos, head of the Greek delegation, said that the allies would readily assent to reopening the conference if the Turks had anything of sufficient importance to offer. He made it plain, though, that the allies would consider nothing of sufficient importance to reopen the conference except a full compliance with their demands.

POSTMASTERS WORRY OVER REPORTED PLAN

Rumored New Congress Will Repeal Civil Service Law.

Fourth-class postmasters of the United States now under protection of civil service, are agitated over the rumor that has gone all over the country that the new congress intends to undo the work of Republican administrations by rescinding the civil service law and shunting these fourth class postmasters back into the field of political patronage.

The postmasters of this class that are located south of the Ohio river and west of the Mississippi, are particularly worried because they only got in under the civil service roof last October.

C. O. Barry, president of the National League of Postmasters in Third and Fourth Class Offices, has received many letters recently from men and women, government employes, describing the improvements they have made because they were in the classified service and insisting that the government would suffer in many ways if the postmasters in the fourth class offices be put back into politics.

The postmistress at Greenlawn, L. I., writes to explain how she erected a $4,000 tile and concrete building because she thought her job was permanent.

The tenor of all the letters is that postoffice keeping in the old patronage days was an unsystematic, shiftless business, and that at the government had better let a good thing alone if it does not want to run its postoffices in the old careless way.

POPULATION, PER CAPITA.

The population of continental United States was estimated at 96,496,000 Jan. 2, 1913. This figure was used by the treasury department experts in determining that of $3,350,727,580, the total money in circulation in the country that date, the amount per capita was $34.72.

TAFT FAVORS ARBITRATION

President Hopes to Settle Question of Panama Tolls.

President Taft in New York City declared himself as unequivocally in favor of arbitrating the Panama canal tolls in event the pending negotiations between Great Britain and the United States fail to bring about a settlement. He hopes, however, that the question will be settled before his administration comes to an end.

The president's first public declaration of his attitude on the question was made at a luncheon given in his honor by the International Peace Forum. Later, at the Republican "reorganization" dinner, he presided at what he styled his own political "wake."

AUTO BANDIT CONFESSES

Man Arrested in Chicago Admits Several Hold-Ups.

At Chicago Herbert Cattlith, auto bandit suspect and looked upon by the police as the probable leader of a number of the hold-up raids which have spread terror throughout the city, confessed to Captain John J. Halpin, chief of detectives.

Cattlith had been in custody but a few hours when two victims of hold-ups of which the police suspected him had identified him as the man who robbed them.

Cattlith's admissions were not specific, according to Captain Halpin, but when faced with the identifications by these two victims he is declared to have broken down and confessed that he engineered a number of daring hold-ups and highway robberies.

FIVE KILLED AT CROSSING

Railway Train Hits a Carriage Near Dennison, Iowa.

Five persons were killed, two fatally injured when a Chicago and Northwestern train struck a carriage, one mile north of Dennison, Iowa, at midnight. The dead are John Evers and his 6 year old son, John Reimers, his wife and five months old baby.

The injured: John Reimers, Jr., aged six, and Minnie Reimers, fourteen, were taken to a hospital, where, it is stated, neither can recover. A sharp curve at a point just east of the crossing made it impossible for Engineer Charles Wheeler to see the carriage until it was too late to stop before striking it, he says.

WOULD UPLIFT THE RACE

Odell Will Reintroduce Bill to Sterilize Criminals.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 7.—Representative Arthur Odell of Allegan will reintroduce his bill providing for the sterilization of insane, feeble-minded and idiotic inmates of state institutions, and habitual criminals, defeated at the last session of the legislature by a small majority in the senate.

Sterilization in every case, says Representative Odell, would operate only to reduce the rapidly growing burdens entailed by support of poorhouses, insane asylums, homes for idiotic and feeble-minded, and for the protection of society from habitual criminals.

He cites the reports of the Indiana state prison, where a large number of pardons and paroles were extended to men who, in a few years, became changed persons, and their behavior under surveillance after discharge from prison indicated the plan was a decided success.

BAY CITY FATALITIES RECORD OF ONE DAY

Man Drowned in Cistern, Boy Killed under Cars.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 7.—Three fatalities and one probably fatal accident were recorded here in one day.

Henry Helmuth, sixty-five years old, well known grocer and pioneer German resident, who had been missing since a week ago Friday, was found drowned in his cistern.

Henry Burkett, a neighbor, made the discovery. A long pole ran against the body, just below the surface of the cistern water. Helmuth had been in ill health for some time. He was treasurer for the Arbeiter society for many years and was not again chosen at the order's recent election.

Mrs. Anna Bard, seventy-six years old, who lived alone at South Union and Wenona, was found dead by her niece, Miss Rounds. The woman had attempted to fix her stovepipe and had pulled it out of place. The escaping coal gas killed her.

Frank Shields, six years old, attempted to crawl under a train at the Hart street crossing of the Michigan Central, when the train started up and injured him in such a manner that he died within a short time. His left arm was severed and the left side of his face and head was crushed.

Mrs. Margaret Carney, seventy-five years old, living alone on Van Buren street, was terribly burned when her clothing took fire as she sat in front of a stove warming her hands. She will probably die. She fell asleep and awoke to find the lower part of her clothing in flames.

DISEASE DECREASED IN 1912

All but Measles and Tuberculosis Show Big Falling Off.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 4.—According to figures compiled by the state board of health, measles and pulmonary tuberculosis are on the increase in Michigan. All other diseases show decreases. The most pronounced decrease is in typhoid fever, which went down over 66 per cent. Secretary Dixon attributes this to the care which was paid last summer to water supplies.

Cancer showed a decrease of less than 1 per cent; croup, 56; diphtheria, 19; enteritis, 21; influenza, 57; meningitis, 25; pneumonia, 17; septicemia, 57; scarlet fever, 54; typhoid fever, 66; violence, 8; whooping cough, 58.

Measles increased 36 per cent and tuberculosis 1.7. The figures covered the first ten months of 1912. Violence caused more deaths than any disease but pneumonia.

PEACE IN HOUSE APPEARS REMOTE

Attitude of Lorimer Democrats Presages Long Deadlock.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 13.—Inauguration day for the new Democratic state officers, according to the constitution, came along today, with the general assembly facing either an insoluble deadlock, which will last at least through the week, or a genuine nonpartisan organization of the house, which may be effected Wednesday.

A bipartisan combination founded on the remnants of the old machine organized as a preliminary to the Lorimer election of 1909 is still, much of a possibility. It may be effected, it is believed, if the Democratic end of it can land some badly needed recruits from the membership which has come into the house since the senatorial scandal.

The old bipartisan combine is shy about a dozen votes, counting all of the present members who voted for Lorimer in 1909 and joined in the arrangement which elected Shurtleff speaker. Some of these are repentant in view of subsequent proceedings and undoubtedly will not enter another compact.

The anti-Lorimer Democrats, numbering at least twenty-two, are certain to stay out of any deal which means the recognition of any of the Lorimerites in posts of influence or authority and will not be parties to any agreement which savors of accepting any Lorimerite leadership. This element is perfectly willing to join a nonpartisan coalition which would kick over party lines and permit a working agreement between the progressive element in all four parties.

The difficulty in negotiating this coalition is traceable directly to the United States senatorships. Neither the Republicans nor the Progressives are ready to talk business on the speakership and organization without a contemporaneous discussion of the two senatorships.

TRAIN RACES WITH FIRE

Cleveland, O., Jan. 13.—Special No. 43 on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad, a seven car mail and baggage train, raced into Cleveland with a baggage car afire, and was met by an engine company, which put out the blaze after the car and contents had been almost destroyed. The fire was noticed by the agent at Painesville, thirty miles east, who telegraphed ahead for the engine company.

The car was filled with a consignment of shirts and collars, valued at about $1,500. Damage to the car was estimated at $2,000.

FEAR FOR EXPLORERS

Sverdrup and Sixteen Companions May Be Lost.

Christiania, Jan. 13.—It is feared that the famous arctic explorer, Otto Sverdrup, and a party of sixteen, who accompanied him on a walrus hunt in Greenland waters, have been lost.

Sverdrup and his party left Christiania in March, 1912, in a motor ship, and since then nothing has been heard from the expedition. Mail sent to a station in South Greenland, where the walrus hunters were to have stopped, has been returned here marked "uncalled for."

Tapking Case Nears Close.

Shelbyville, Ind., Jan. 13.—The arguments in the $25,000 damage suit brought by Henry Tapking, of Indianapolis, against the Indianapolis Motor Speedway company were completed. Judge Alonzo Blair gave each side two hours for argument. Attorneys Hugg and Spaan presented the case to the jury for the plaintiff and Attorneys Korbly and Hord, defense.

Alps Claim 95 Lives in Year.

Vienna, Jan. 13.—The Fremdenblatt states the death toll in the Alps during 1912 was ninety-five. Of this number fifty-three fell from precipices, thirteen were killed by avalanches, and eight were frozen to death.

THREE CONVICTS ESCAPE

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 13.—Police, prison guards and other civil authorities are searching the adjacent country for two murderers and a burglar, whose sentences run from ten years to life imprisonment, and who drove quietly out of the state penitentiary in a stolen automobile while a watchful guard obligingly opened the great, barred gates for them.

Outside they threw in the high-speed gear and whirled to freedom south and east of the penitentiary while the guard was trying to explain to his superiors how he came to let them go and why he did not guard more closely the automobile, a fast machine belonging to A. C. Loomis, general accountant at the prison.

The three escaped convicts were all from Cook county, and their names are:

Sigmund Broche, murderer; Stephen Ayers, murderer; Edward Sheldon, burglar.

Don Quixote.

Drive a stick firmly into the ground, letting it stand about two feet high. Turn a flower pot over the top. One of the players, with eyes blindfolded, is placed about ten paces distant from the pot, with his back toward it. He is given a cane or a stout stick and at the word of command turns and advances in the direction that he imagines the stake to be, then halts and strikes vigorously at the pot in the endeavor to break it at the first blow.

Each player may have three trials, but must return to the starting place for each stroke. A special prize may be offered for the one who succeeds at the first attempt.

It is very funny to see how far from the objective point the player will wander and how earnestly he will strike into empty space.

PASSENGERS SAFELY REMOVED

There Were 880 on Board, Mostly Russians, Germans and Austrians—Captain and Crew Remain with with Boat, Hoping to Get Off Reef at Low Water.

Montreal, Jan. 13.—The steamship Uranium, bound for New York via Halifax, struck the reef within a quarter of a mile off the Chebucto Head light and fog station at the entrance to Halifax harbor in thick weather at 11 a. m. Captain Eustace was maneuvering for a pilot at the time.

The spot where the Uranium struck is nine miles below Halifax and the only means of communication with port was the telephone in the light keeper's house. Assistance was phoned for and the government steamer Lady Laurier, the Bridgewater, and other craft put off for the wreck.

880 Passengers on Board.

There were 880 passengers on board, nearly all of whom were Russians, Germans or Austrians. There are also 500 tons of cargo for New York and 200 for Halifax. Of the passengers 640 are for New York and 240 for Halifax. One hundred are cabin passengers and the remainder steerage. The Lady Laurier took off the women and children first and the men were then transferred to the Bridgewater.

The transshipment was effected in surfboats. All the passengers were clear of the Uranium by 5 p. m., and reached Halifax safely, but the captain and crew still remain on board.

Hope to Get Off Easily.

The Uranium struck the reef with her bows. By the middle of the afternoon, when the tide was half high, her bow was six feet out of the water. There was seven fathoms of water amidships and seventeen at her stern. The ship is protected by Chebucto Head from the strong southwest wind blowing, but should the wind change there will be great danger of her going to pieces.

ROCKEFELLER IN FLORIDA

Examined by Government Physician and Found Unfit.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 13.—Trembling as if with palsy and apparently very weak, William Rockefeller, wanted as a witness before the Pujo money trust investigating committee, landed here from Nassau. Mr. Rockefeller, his wife and son, William, Jr., were the first passengers to leave the boat. An automobile was waiting for them and they were met by Dr. Chappell, Mr. Rockefeller's physician, and Percy Rockefeller. The party was driven to the Royal Palm hotel, where the millionaire was examined by Dr. C. W. Richardson, an expert on throat diseases, on behalf of the government, in the presence of Dr. Chappell and Mr. Rockefeller's two sons.

It is said that Mr. Rockefeller is partly paralyzed in the lower jaw, preventing free speech, and that the party will leave today direct for New York. This indicates that his contention of physical inability to testify as a witness has been sustained by the examination of the government's doctor.

The Egyptian Mummy.

When your friends come amuse them by showing them the "Egyptian mummy." To make the mummy, double up your right fist and upon the back of the fist mark the eyes, nose and mouth of a face with a burnt cork or water paints. Tie around this a doll's cap or lace frill and fasten around the wrist, so as to cover the arm, a white apron. Bend the left arm to lie across the waist and put the right fist into the inner bend of the elbow, drawing the apron well around it. These preparations should be made in an outer room and the mummy should be sprung upon your audience. By moving the thumb of the right fist you can make the mummy look as though she were talking, and by turning your head away from the audience and disguising your voice you can make it sound as though she really were talking.

WILSON APPEALS TO BUSINESS MEN

President-Elect Talks to Chicago Commercial Club.

ASKS EQUAL CHANCE FOR ALL

Representatives of Many Classes and Lines of Trade Hear Blunt Words from Next Executive of Nation—New Jersey Man Returns Almost at Once to Home in East.

Chicago, Jan. 13. — President-Elect Woodrow Wilson is back in his home in New Jersey, after a brief visit to Chicago and an eye-opening address on financial conditions in the country delivered before 800 bankers, merchants, lawyers, railroad men and operating officials of public utilities who filled the dining room of the Blackstone hotel.

Mr. Wilson delivered an appeal and a warning to the business men of the country. He spoke at a banquet given by the Commercial club of Chicago.

Some Blunt Words Uttered.

The business men of the country were told bluntly that the peaceable success of the new administration depended on their co-operation and that without it the president would fight for victory. They also were told that no man who did not put the public good above private aggrandizement—be he politician, merchant, or personal friend—could have influence with or part in the administration.

Four Lines of Endeavor.

Four lines of Mr. Wilson's coming endeavor were set forth. They may be summarized as follows:

The country must husband and administer, not exploit, its common resources for the common welfare, with the idea of conservation—not reservation.

The raw material of the country must be at the disposal of every one on equal terms, the government not determining the terms, but guaranteeing against discrimination.

Credit must be at the disposal of all on equal terms. In no other way can dangerous class prejudice be removed. The bankers must see it is done.

Every feature of monopoly must be removed.

Plain Words to Money Trust.

Governor Wilson spoke with the utmost frankness about the recent revelations regarding the money trust.

"I am not indicting the banking methods," he said. "The banking system does not need to be indicted. It is already convicted. I have reason to believe from things which have been said under oath that there are inner and outer circles of credit, regions of chilly exclusion, and regions of warm inclusion. This must be changed. Some of the men who 'run the game' intend to run it fairly, of course. But the country is not going to grow rich by the efforts of those who are 'in' now, but by those who are 'out' now."

Mr. Wilson urged that all prejudice cease. He specified sectional prejudice, and showed a hope that his election, that of a man of southern birth, would show that the southerner is not a different breed from the northerner. And then he pleaded for the efforts of the business men to dissolve the class prejudice, which he declared must be admitted to exist, and not entirely without cause.

Toilet Suggestions.

If the cuticle about your nails seems tough and there is a tendency to "hangnails" rub in a little vaseline or cold cream every night before retiring.

To whiten finger nails and improve the hands cut a fresh lemon in two and rub it well at night. Wash off in warm water the next morning. This same treatment is excellent for stains on the hands.

Astringent lotions should be used to reduce the large pores of the skin, which become clogged with dust and grime. These disfiguring pores are especially noticeable across the nose, often extending over the cheeks. If allowed to go without checking agents these pores develop into blackheads, than which there is no greater enemy to beauty.

BIG NAVAL BASE AT GUANTANAMO

Navy Department Would Develop Cuban Station.

NEEDED FOR CANAL DEFENSE

Fortification Has Been Delayed by Failure of Congress to Provide Sufficient Funds, but Progress on Panama Work Makes Activity Now Almost Imperative.

Washington, Jan. 13. — Relying on the nearness of the completion of the Panama canal to awaken congress to the necessity for appropriations, the navy department hopes to get this year sufficient funds to execute its plans for the development of Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, as a great naval base.

Development Is Imperative.

Secretary Meyer, who is now taking up this matter with the naval committee of the house, has already told the members that the completion of the canal will make the development of Guantanamo Bay imperative for the defense of Panama canal and domination of the Carribean and Gulf of Mexico by the United States. The fortification of Guantanamo will follow close upon its development as a naval base, according to the present plans of the war and navy departments. It is proposed to make Guantanamo just as impregnable as Panama and Pearl Harbor, the latter being the American naval base at Hawaii.

Congress Fails to Provide.

Through the failure of congress to provide adequate appropriations, little progress has been made in the development of Guantanamo. Naval officers hold that Guantanamo is as important, if not more important, to the scheme of national defense than Pearl Harbor. Secretary Meyer recently made the statement that the next great naval engagement of the United States will be fought in the vicinity of either Pearl Harbor or Guantanamo.

GRUESOME FIND IS MYSTERY

Man's Legs Severed at Hip, Found in Chicago, Stirs Police.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—A man's leg, severed at the hip and cut in two pieces, was found in a suit case near a barn in the northern part of the city.

The pieces were wrapped in a newspaper dated Jan. 7. A sack was on the foot and a piece of underclothing on the leg.

Physicians said that the condition of the tissues made it appear that the leg had been severed not more than twenty-four hours. They said the work had not been done as a doctor or medical student would do it.

Five detectives were assigned to the case.

They also complain of unsanitary conditions: that the light is turned off unless the day is very dark and that the heat is turned off at noon, letting the rooms get too cold for work early in the afternoon.

"The first objective," says the statement, "is the organization of the Progressive party in every county and congressional district throughout the country for nominating county tickets for the election of 1914, and making an effective congressional campaign in that year."

A Valentine

That Was a Long Time Coming

By EDNA WINTHROP

In 1849 Edward Poindexter left his home in the east and his ladylove, Ellen Crane, to join the gold hunters in California. She received several letters from him, the last at the beginning of the new year, the midyear of the nineteenth century. In this letter Poindexter said: "I shall send you a valentine, calculating to mail it so that it shall reach you on the 14th of February. The mails are the surest means of transportation from here to the east, but even they are not very regular. If you don't receive my valentine, say within ten days after St. Valentine's day, go to the postoffice and inquire for it, writing me at the same time."

The 14th of February came, but no valentine. Instead, a letter came from a friend of Poindexter stating that Poindexter had been taken ill a fortnight before and had died. He had struck a vein of ore, which he had instructed the writer to sell and send her the proceeds.

The mine was afterward sold for $20,000 and the money sent to Miss Crane. She never married, but a brother having died, leaving a little girl named for her, Aunt Ellen brought her up. The aunt died when little Ellen was twenty years old. Ellen Crane, Jr., inherited the $20,000 her aunt had received from her lover in California. The niece was engaged to be married to Walter Browning, a young man occupying the position of teller in a bank, and expected soon to be a bride.

One evening shortly before St. Valentine's day Walter Browning, who was expected by his fiancee, came to see her with every evidence of distress. A thousand dollar banknote had slipped through his fingers and disappeared. He had handled a package of notes of the denomination of $1,000 each and was satisfied that there were ten of them. They had been deposited as such an amount during the day, but when he came to count them later there were only nine of them.

The misfortune weighed heavily upon the lovers, who were at the time expecting to be married in a few days. Indeed, Browning assigned the error he had made to this very cause. One about to be married is not likely to have all his wits about him, and he realized that he was not, in his condition, fitted for the very important work he was doing. Ellen asked him if he could remember any interruption that had occurred while receiving the money. He thought hard for a few minutes, then said that after making the entry in the depositor's passbook while the bills were on the counter, the cashier had called to him to ask him a question. Browning had turned his back to the money while he held a brief conversation with the cashier, but had not left his cage.

Browning had no trouble in convincing his sweetheart that he was not playing a game to cover up a defalcation. But the bank manager was of a suspicious disposition, and since he could see no way for a thousand dollar bill to disappear within a cage with one man in it, except by means of that man's fingers, he suspected Ned. As soon as the teller had left the bank an investigation was made. The depositor was telephoned to know what amount he had intended to deposit. He replied that he had handed in ten $1,000 bills. This eliminated that loophole for Browning, and it was the only possible escape for him. The officers of the bank met later in the evening and decided what to do in the matter so far as Browning was concerned. They knew that he was to be married in a few days. Browning's fellow clerks had bought a wedding present for the bride, and it had been the intention of the president to send a check for $100. Owing to these conditions they decided not to arrest Browning.

When Browning went to the bank the next morning every person there looked up at him. He felt that he was a suspect and knew that he was indebted to the bank for $1,000, which he could not pay. Ellen would have paid the money in his stead, but in the first place the fortune she had received from her aunt had been left to her in trust for her children, the income only to be paid to her, and in the second place the payment of the last amount would not remove the cloud resting upon her lover.

Browning went into his cage and began to receive deposits, but his mind was so preoccupied by his trouble that he soon went to the manager and told him that, considering his condition of mind, he feared he was not to be trusted at the window; that a substitute had better be put on duty and he be placed temporarily at other work. His admonition was heeded and his request granted.

The wedding was to take place on the 15th of February. On the evening of the 13th Browning and his betrothed talked over the matter of withdrawing the invitations and being married privately, but had come to no conclusion. Browning took his trouble so much to heart that he dreaded the ordeal of facing friends on what was intended for a joyful occasion, feeling that he was suspected of betrayal of a trust, of larceny, and in danger of arrest. On the other hand, no one except themselves and those connected with the bank was aware of his trouble, and it would only make the matter worse if it were known. To recall the invitations would make talk, which would be sure to bring out the cause of their being withdrawn. They parted to meet the next morning, when they would come to a decision.

On St. Valentine's day Walter Browning and Ellen Crane were trying to make up their minds as to what course to pursue. Walter begged for a private wedding. Though there was no reason for such a dread, he fancied he might be arrested during the ceremony. Ellen strove in vain to eradicate this fear. She was arguing with him when a shrill whistle was heard without, followed by a sharp ring at the doorbell.

"It's the postman," she exclaimed, "and since he's loaded down with valentines he's in a hurry. I'll go to the door and take in the mail."

She returned, walking very slowly and looking intently at an unopened envelope.

"Who has been sending me this, I wonder?" she said, speaking more to herself than to her lover. "It seems to be a valentine. At least there are some flowers stamped on it. I don't know the handwriting, and I don't know any one at the place where it was postmarked."

"It seems to me," said Walter drearily, "that the quickest way to find out about a letter is to open and read it. But that's something no woman would think of doing."

"If the postmark was plainer," continued Ellen, without heeding his sarcasm, "I might make it out. It's San-something or other, and Col. That must be Colorado."

"Break it open!" cried Walter testily. "You'll drive me crazy."

She soothed him with a kiss, then tore open the envelope, remarking at the same time that it was dirty enough to have gone around the world. It contained a cheap looking valentine, and within the valentine was folded several thicknesses of newspaper. Ellen unfolded the newspaper and took out two $500 bills.

"What does it mean?" was Ellen's next comment.

By this time her lover's curiosity was excited. With a trembling hand he took the valentine and the bills from her.

"Why, these are old state bank bills," he said wonderingly. Then, taking the envelope, he scrutinized it. "This valentine was mailed in 1850," he went on, "and these letters are not Col; they are Cal. It's from San Francisco, Cal."

Many a time Ellen Crane had heard her aunt tell about the valentine her lover was to send her, about which she was to make inquiry if it did not come and which it was supposed he had been cut off from sending by sickness and death. A flood of light burst in upon her. This was that valentine. It had been sent, but had been many years on the way. The happy girl did not wait to explain this to her lover. Holding the bills high up above her head, she danced around the room, crying:

"Now we can restore the missing money."

Later Browning went to the postoffice with the valentine and learned from the postmaster that a postoffice building had recently been pulled down on the line the valentine had traveled, and the letter had been found on the removal of a fixture behind which it had slipped, doubtless while being sorted. It was forwarded and fell into the hands not of the Ellen Crane to whom it had been written, but to her namesake and heir, who lived in the house to which it had been addressed.

Ellen placed the bills in Browning's hands. Going to a money broker, he learned that though the banks that had issued the bills had gone out of existence a fund had been put aside for payment of all demands against it. Then Walter went to the bank that had issued the bill he had lost and exchanged his money for one of its $1,000 notes and with it made up the deficiency for which he was responsible.

The act removed all suspicion, and there was a happy wedding, made happier by the great load taken off the shoulders of the contracting parties.

The $1,000 was in time returned by the bank. One of the employees of the institution proved dishonest, and a long series of peculations was discovered. He confessed the stealing of the bill that Browning had lost. On that occasion he was acting as paying teller in the next cage to Browning. When the latter's back was turned, seeing that no one was looking in his direction, he took out from a pocket in his coat a slender piece of whalebone with a hook on the end of it and, passing it through an opening in the grating that separated the cages, removed one of the bills lying on the counter.

This occurred shortly after Browning's marriage and caused so great a reversal in the feeling toward Browning that the officers of the bank thought they should make some reparation to him for his misfortune. Besides returning the $1,000 that he had made good, they created the office of assistant cashier and gave him the position with a large increase of salary.

So his misfortune turned out to be a blessing in disguise. And it served him in more respects than one. It made him a far more careful man and extremely cautious in condemning others under suspicion. He eventually became the president of a bank, and whenever a shortage occurred he invariably protected the one suspected from being unjustly condemned. For this alone he was much beloved by the employees.

Kirtland I. Perky, New Senator From Idaho.

Among the new members of the United States senate is Kirtland I. Perky of Idaho, who was appointed by Governor James H. Hawley to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Senator Heyburn. In all likelihood Senator Perky's occupancy of the seat will be brief, as the legislature of Idaho will doubtless elect a Republican to take his place. Senator Perky is a Democrat. The late Senator Heyburn's term would have expired in March, 1915, had he lived to complete it, but the appointee of the governor may only serve until the legislature elects its choice for the unexpired term. The Idaho legislature is Republican and meets on Jan. 6.

Senator Perky is a native of Ohio, forty-five years old and a lawyer by profession. He was admitted to the bar in 1890 and practiced his profession in Nebraska until 1894, when he moved to Idaho. Since then he has been prominent in politics and has served as chairman of the Democratic state central committee of Idaho. He also served a term as district judge of the Fourth judicial district of the state. At the time he was appointed to the senate he was engaged in the practice of law in Boise.

The Top Crowded.

Mrs. Cleveland, whose engagement has been announced, will be missed at Princeton, where her entertainments are heartily liked.

Mrs. Cleveland as a hostess is noted for her wise and epigrammatic sayings. Thus urging a young senior against having for his ambition the acquisition of great wealth, she recently said:

"On the mountain of plutocracy there is less room at the top than people think. The men seated up there are few, but they are very large."

Nevada's New Senator.

Key Pittman of Toponah, who defeated Senator Massey for the seat of the late George S. Nixon in the Nevada state wide primary election last November, is a prominent lawyer of Toponah and owner of mining properties. He is a Democrat in politics. Senator Massey, who is a Republican, was appointed last July and in the popular contest lost by only eighty-nine votes.

A native of Vicksburg, Miss., Mr. Pittman is related to the famous Buckner family of Kentucky, and Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," was his great-granduncle. His father was a prominent lawyer of the old south, a Confederate soldier and a leader in the Restoration. The new senator was educated at Southern Presbyterian university, Clarksville, Tenn., and in 1897 went to Alaska at the beginning of the gold excitement. He was prosecuting attorney at Nome under the "consent" form of government in 1899 and joined with the miners in defense of their rights. He kept up the prosecution until dishonest officials were removed and order restored by federal troops. Recently Mr. Pittman, who is just past forty, made a fortune in the mines. He is vice president of the Toponah Merger company.

What the Ears Indicate.

The thin, angular ear is said to denote bad temper and cruelty.

Small and thin ears usually denote delicacy and refinement.

As age increases the ear becomes more angular and marked.

Great philosophers and statesmen have been noticed to have large and sloping ears.

Four Years Experience as a Marine

BY WM. M. OLDS

Saturday evening Nov. 21 1908, I left Tecumseh for Detroit where I enlisted in the navy on the 25th was given a ticket to Toledo by the recruiting officer and left Detroit at 11:30 that morning.

At Toledo I changed cars for Chicago arriving there at 9:30 p. m. over the New York central, changed cars to the great northern railroad leaving at 11:30 p. m. I was very tired and went to bed at midnight waking up soon after daylight, as the train was slowing down for the city of Cedar Rapids. After eating a hearty breakfast, I secured an easy seat near a car window and viewed the fine farming country we were passing through. This was Thanksgiving day. At 6 p. m. we arrived in Omaha Neb. with some of the other passengers, I got off the train and walked about for twenty five minutes for exercise before the train left, did not have time to see much of the city. Passing through the state found the country very level except in the western part, saw many large flocks of prairie chickens.

The next state was Wycming where all we saw was mountains and plains plenty of Coyotes a few wolves and etc also an indian camp, three mining towns.

The ranch houses stood in many places 50 and 60 miles apart. We went over 90 miles at one time without seeing a building.

At Cheyenne Wyo. we were 8,000 ft. above the level, the climate was very clear and healthy but very cold in the winter. Cheyenne is a beautiful city and has about 18,000 population. Left here at noon reaching Green Rivers in the western part of the state at 4 a. m. Here it was 18 degrees below zero, the coldest I had ever known in Nov. An Indianman on the train with hot ta-manas which was hot coffee and sandwiches, the train stopped here about 15 minutes.

There was a terrible jarring of the car on the rails did not know what was the matter but found out in the morning when we reached Ogden Utah that the car we were in had broken down and must be left on the side track. An extra coach was also added making thirteen cars in all. The train stayed an hour and a half here but it was to cold to exercise being 8 degrees below zero. So we stayed in the station where it was warmer.

Leaving Ogden we soon reached Salt Lake which is the saltiest water on earth. We did not go very fast crossing this lake taking one hour and and twenty minutes. We then entered a valley about 100 miles wide, on each side were high mountain ranges covered with snow, seeming so near but being 40 and 50 miles away. As we proceeded through this valley it grew more narrow until we came to the end at 3 o'clock p. m. From that time on we went through a number of tunnels including several quite large ones. I went to bed that night and had the first good nights sleep I had enjoyed since I left Detoit.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Polly's Pome on Manners.

Manners in a Child are what
Show if she is good or not
And they must not only be
When you're out in company
But you got to have them too
When somebody visits you.
That's the time they are most needed-
For they show how you've been breeded
And the kind of Child you are.
I am good because my Ma
Tells me what to do and say
When a child comes in to play.
And when it is Bessie Yost
She the one that comes the most
She can have my little chair
And she gets the biggest share
Of the cake and biggest bite
Of the pear for I'm polite.
But poor Mrs. Yost I guess
Don't care how she raises Bess
For when I am playing there
And we get some cake to share
Bess she takes the biggest bit—
But I never notice it.
Still though I am fond of Bess
It would be as well I guess
If I were to play there less.
I remember there's a rule
In my copy book in school
That is meant for every Child——
"Who touches pitch will be defiled."

A Puzzling Trick.

Here is an easy trick to puzzle your friends with. At least it is easy to you, but extremely perplexing to your audience. You ask some one to write down a row of five figures. Tell him that four more rows will be added underneath, and that you will give him the result "before the sum is put down," simply from this first row. Suppose he has written 2 3 4 6 5. You "deduct" 2 from the last, or right hand and place it in front of the first, or left hand, figure. You will then write down 2 2 3 4 6 3 and say, "That will be the result." Now ask him to place a second row of figures under the first row—anything he likes. Then you yourself put down the second row of figures, and you must do it so that each of your figures adds up to 9 along with his. For instance, if he writes 4 6 0 8 3, you must write under that 5 3 9 1 6. He then puts down the fourth row of figures, and you supply the fifth, which again must make 9s when added to his. Then get him to add up the whole. It will come out 2 2 3 4 6 3, just as you said it would. This may also be done on the same system—in three rows of five figures each, but in this case you deduct "one" only from the right hand figure, to place before the left hand one. Or it may be "seven" rows, in which case you deduct "three" from the right hand figure. This all depends upon the magic of the number 9.

The Judge.

I think he's judge of all the rest,
Our friend the solemn frog;
He's judge of all the water things,
The skimming bugs with dripping wings,
The turtle on the log.
He sits upon a lilypad,
And if he sees that one is bad
With sternness he will say:
"Go hide among the darkest weeds,
Down deep among the dungeon reeds,
And there repent your wicked deeds.
Away, young thing, away!"

WHEAT CROP INJURED BY THE OPEN WINTER

Third of Michigans Planting Suffered, Report of Secretary of State

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 10.—The crop report of the secretary of state shows the open winter has injured a third of the wheat crop of the state.

In only a few sections of the state has the ground been covered by snow up to this time even in the upper peninsula.

The wheat marketed in December totaled 533,757 bushels. Of this amount 91,330 bushels were marketed in the southern four tiers of counties; 48,565 in the central, and 13,862 in the northern counties and upper peninsula.

The estimated total of bushels of wheat marketed in the five months, August to December, was 2,750,000.

The report on live stock shows the stock to be in healthy and thrifty condition.

Milady's Mirror

Style Versus Beauty.

"Handsome is as handsome does" is a good old fashioned axiom, and beauty of soul is a fine thing; so is being good hearted. Many a plain looking woman has found consolation in the two latter attributes. In ancient Greece there were two kinds of women, the Venuses and the Minervas. When Venus frowned on one consolation was sought in Minerva. One is always a Minerva from second choice. Venus sits back in a porch rocker, calm, cool and serene in the knowledge that her hair won't get out of curl, her complexion won't blow off and she doesn't have to talk—just a smile, and everybody basks in it. Minerva works hard, her hair is limp, her nose is shiny, and she can't keep cool because she engages in heated arguments. Venus marries the millionaire and rides in a chaise; Minerva marries the professor and darns stockings. What a giddy world it would be if women were all Venuses, for it is undoubtedly the Minervas who are the balance wheel of society.

In modern days the next best thing to being a Venus, if one cannot be a Minerva, is to be stylish.

What is this seemingly indefinable thing called style? What is it that differentiates one woman from another? Why is it that one woman will be stylish and the other dowdy, though gowned in the same manner? Why will a pretty woman often pale into insignificance beside her plainer sister? One of the first things when the desire is born to be stylish or smart looking, as the English say, is to feel stylish. This is easier than to feel beautiful, as is occasionally advocated. The feeling that one has style is bracing. Unconsciously the body straightens, the head goes up and the step becomes smarter and brisker.

Another point to consider in this achievement is the poise of the body. She who slinks along and shuffles her feet will never attain the desired end, if style be her desire. Much has been accomplished when once you have thrown your shoulders back, your head up and acquired a smart step, for the proper carriage and walk are the foundation of style.

Beauty Hints For Travelers.

For the traveler there is a neat little case in pink linen, which is more practical than silk, because it can take many visits to the laundry without injuring its usefulness. This little case when unrolled displays pockets for the soap, talcum powder, cold cream, tooth powder or paste and toilet water. It will save many precious minutes in the dressing room of the Pullman sleeper, though it costs only $1.50.

Another article which is sure to be appreciated by the traveler—and there are few not among this number these days—is the manicure set, with all the necessary little implements packed compactly into the buffer. This does away with those vexatious moments when the hurried traveler searches madly among the dozen and one articles in the bottom of the bag for the nail file or perhaps the orange stick. By pressing the catch at the side of the buffer the top springs up, revealing a velvet lined compartment containing a pair of scissors, half a dozen emery boards, a duplex file, an orange wood stick, a box of nail luster and another box of the salve. Close the catch and the buffer is ready for use. Many women buy them nickel plated for $2 to keep in the bathroom, where the guest may use them easily and where they will not take up the room that the different articles would if spread out separately. The silver plated set costs $2.50 and the solid silver $6.

Monument to Stanley Ketchel.

R. P. Dickerson of Springfield, Mo., states that he has just finished the erection of a $5,000 monument over the last resting place of Stanley Ketchel, the former king of the middleweights, in the Polish cemetery, near Grand Rapids, Mich. It is built of Vermont marble and granite, and stands twelve feet six inches in height and eight by six at the base.

Dickerson and Ketchel's mother were childhood playmates when the fighter's family were tenants on the farm of the former's father. Dickerson has spent something like $15,000 in avenging Ketchel's death and straightening out his affairs.

Baseball Helps Chinese.

"Baseball has been the greatest single factor for good among the Chinese," declared Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, at a meeting of students recently. President Eliot was telling the students of his recent trip to the orient.

He said that baseball was fast becoming popular among the Chinese and that already it had done much to make them abandon games of chance.

THE NEW BAGS.

Moire Affair the Latest In These Useful Accessories.

The very newest idea in bags is the moire bag. There are all sorts and shapes of moire bags, ranging from the small oblong purses to the large bags elaborately fitted out with mirror and all the vanity fixings. A handsome bag in black moire opens very wide, revealing at a glance the contents of the entire bag. On one side there is a mirror resting against the soft white silk lining and in the side pockets the cardcase, change purse and other necessities. Such a bag can be purchased for $18.

A large round bag in black moire is edged with an inch plaiting of the moire. Another very much smaller bag has a deep pleating of the moire. The monogram should be stamped in one corner and outlined in rhinestones.

To slip into the muffs there are long oblong purses in moire with the flexible gold or platinum frames. These are really a development of the cigar and cigarette cases which pleased the men so hugely two or three years ago. The moire purses have the advantage over the fur purses of the same shape in that they can be carried with the spring suit. The old fashioned reticule with the openings at either end is now fashioned in moire and lined with white silk. These moire ones are newer than those in brocades and other eastern stuffs which made their appearance in the fall.

Vogue For Net.

One of the latest novelties among the lovely laces and the dainty robes of broderie Anglaise for the slender pocketbook is the coarse net. The wardrobe can have nothing prettier than one of the pretty slips of string colored fisherman's net and lace. The coarse net may be mounted over a color, but it is really smartest when its foundation is of the same tone, and this serves as a relief for last summer's washed out gown. The trimming must be a heavy Venetian or guipure of filet lace, and there may be a girdle of black or colored ribbon.

The Newest Fad.

My lady's new boots are half black and half white, the white portion being on the outer side of the foot and the black sides coming together over the ankles. There is no division between vamp and buttoned upper part, the boot being, so to speak, a "two gore" model, with seams down the center front and back, and one gore is of black calf and the other of white buckskin. The heels are white and also the buttons, which run up the outer side of the boot in a straight line.

The Diptheria Scare

USE COMMON SENSE, THE BEST GIFT OF THE GODS.

In asking of the Gods what gift you would rather have bestowed upon you many would ask for various attributes But if they would ask for good plain Common Sense we would have less sensational scares, and used in regard to our diptheria cases' we have not had black diphtheria as reported. this on the authority of Dr. Briegel, Dr. Jones and Dr. North. The one death was the result of neglect, the boy being taken sick Monday, and having nothing done for him until Saturday when it was to late for the anti-toxine to take effect. This was given to the other children and they are gaining right along, not even being confined to their bed.

It was thought best to close the schools to have the rooms disinfected. The children in the neighborhood are being carefully watched, and while they have colds, not one case of diphtheria has been reported.

The Peotter family live in Brawtville on the out skirts of the town. On the authority of our physicians, we have not another case in town up to this date.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home, Rev. W. B. Hartzog officiating

Mrs, Benedict had been in Los Angeles three years. She united with the Tecumseh Baptist church by letter in 1856, and therefore was a member for 57 years. She has always been active, for years she read the Bible through each year. The day before New Year's she finished the last chapter of the Bible, and said "It is finished." She was taken ill the next day, and never more read from the sacred book. She passed to her reward Jan 4, 1913. She lived nearly 88 years.

Adrian council at their last meeting voted to hold an election February 12 for the purpose of giving the people a chance to vote on the question of spending $2,000 for appraising the Adrian Water Co's plant. As Feb. 12 is Lincolns birthday and a legal holiday an election would be void. Hence the council have played a joke on themselves.

Since the vote on the good roads proposition was so overwhelming against it. Many people have thought it was over for all time, The farmers all favor the good roads idea but object to the system by which they are now constructed and think the expense is to great. They also feel that the automobiles should stand part of the cost. And they are as willing to get out of "the mud" as any one can be and will do their part to help the good work along.

The Board has taken considerable time and pains inquiring into the merits and capability of each applicant.

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it." (Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed at a later date he said: "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name in reference."

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son

W. R. Fox, 195 W. Washington St., Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with simular results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Don't sneer at the Kansas City woman who paid fifty dollars for a husband. Women have paid that much for bulldogs that couldn't be taught to roll over in the presence of guests.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

BEEF EN CASSEROLE.

BEEF cooked in the casserole dish takes on new and delicious flavors; also tough beef is made tender by cooking it in this way.

Miroton of Beef.—Take about a pound of cold beef and mince it. Then season, using half a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of pepper. Mix with two hard boiled eggs, chopped fine. Moisten with gravy or stock. Butter a casserole dish, one which has a tight cover. Place the meat in the baking dish and cover with the cold mashed potatoes, which have been mixed to a paste with milk and butter. Cover the top with breadcrumbs and dot with bits of butter. Cover the dish and bake for half an hour. Then remove the cover and let the top brown.

Meat and Vegetables.

Casserole of Beef With Tomatoes.—Take a buttered casserole dish and place in it a layer of round steak cut in pieces and season with salt and pepper and a little sifting of flour. On this put a layer of sliced onions that have been parboiled a few minutes, add the seasoning of salt, pepper and sifting of flour. Next add a layer of tomatoes and more salt, pepper and flour. For the top layer use potatoes cut in quarters and salt, pepper and flour them. Fill the dish with water and bake slowly two or three hours.

Casserole of Beef With Potatoes.—Take a pound of the upper round of beef and cut into small pieces. Slice two small onions and brown with the beef in a hot pan with drippings. Rub a casserole with the drippings, cover the bottom with a layer of sliced raw potatoes, put in the browned beef and season to taste. Cover with a layer of potatoes and then with hot stock or hot water to cover all. Put the cover of the dish on and cook in a moderate oven until done.

A Medley of Ingredients.

Casserole of Beef and Mixed Vegetables.—Take a pound and a half of beef, a tablespoonful of onion and a carrot, cut fine; a tablespoonful of minced celery, a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper, a tablespoonful each of flour and finely chopped parsley and a dash of paprika. Use a wet cloth to wipe off the meat, which may be chuck or round. Cut into small pieces or let remain whole. Put the meat into a casserole dish with the onion, celery, carrot, salt, pepper and paprika. Add two cupfuls of boiling water and bake in hot oven two hours, adding water if necessary. Put the meat in the center of platter, mix the flour with a little cold water and add to the gravy. Boil one minute. Pour the gravy over the meat and vegetables and sprinkle with the chopped parsley. Garnish with sprigs of parsley.

MRS. STEVEN B. AYRES

New President of Woman's National Democratic League.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

Mrs. Ayres was elected president of the Woman's National Democratic league at the Washington meeting over Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, the retiring president. The latter is reported to have said after the election, "I have lost the election because of the question of whether I am a free trader and single taxer or not, and since this is the case I do not care to preside over such a narrow minded set of women."

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

MRS. DICKOVER.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes MRS. B. F. DICKOVER, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CORNBREAD RECIPES.

CORNBREAD, one of the most useful quick breads of which the housewife can avail herself for winter breakfasts, may be made in a variety of ways. Cornmeal is a cereal that contains a large proportion of fats and is therefore more heating than wheat.

Eggs add to the richness and the nourishing qualities of these hot breads and where it is convenient to do so should be used liberally in making them.

Care of the Pans.

Be sure to grease the pans well before the cornbread batter is poured into them. One of the tragedies of the kitchen is a cornbread that insists on sticking to the pan.

Souffle Cornbread.—Take a cup of hot milk and stir into it half a cupful of yellow cornmeal and cook until it is a thick mush. Remove from the stove; add a scant teaspoonful of salt and the yolks of four eggs. Beat well, then fold in gently four stiffly beaten whites. Place in a greased baking dish, set in a pan of boiling water and bake in a moderate oven thirty-five minutes.

Steamed Cornbread.—Take a pint of cornmeal and mix it with a scant cupful of flour, a little salt and a teaspoonful of soda. Add to this a cupful of granulated cornmeal and three cupfuls of flour. Dissolve a yeast cake in water, add the remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly. Let rise, shape, let rise again and bake as entire wheat bread.

In Odd Forms.

Dish Cornbread.—Take a quarter of a cupful of cornmeal and stir it into a cupful of boiling water and steam twenty minutes. Add half a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of butter, a third of a cupful of milk, a well beaten egg and two-thirds of a cupful of cornmeal sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake twenty minutes in a buttered baking dish and serve from the dish in which it was cooked.

Loaf Cornbread.—Take a cupful of cornmeal and a cupful of sifted flour, half a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; sift all together and mix well. Beat one egg light, add a cupful of milk, pour into the dry mixture and beat well. Then stir in quickly a third of a cupful of melted butter. Bake in a loaf pan in a quick oven about twenty minutes.

STEWED PRUNE DAINTIES.

THAT homely fruit, the prune, may be so disguised that those who once complained of it will welcome its reappearance on the table.

With Whipped Cream.

Stewed Prunes With Whipped Cream.—Wash and rinse nice large prunes and let them stand overnight in water. Stew them in this water and add enough sugar to make a rich sirup. Remove the stones when the fruit becomes soft and insert walnut meats in their places. Serve in a glass dish heaped with whipped cream.

Prune Sponge.—Take a pound of prunes, wash and let these soak overnight in water enough to cover them. In the morning stew them in the same water until tender. Add a cupful of sugar and put through a sieve to remove all stones and skins. To the pulp add half a cupful of water, juice of a lemon and an orange. Beat until foamy. Then add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs and beat until all are thoroughly mixed. Serve with whipped cream.

Handsome Desserts.

Prune Mold.—Take a pound of prunes, three ounces of granulated sugar, an ounce of gelatin, the rind and juice of a lemon, a pint of water and six drops of cochineal. Boil the soaked prunes in the water and sugar until soft; then take out the stones and crack the kernels and add them, with the lemon juice and rind, to the cochineal and gelatin dissolved in a little water. Stir all until thoroughly mixed and then pour into a mold and put away in a cool place to stiffen. Turn out into a glass platter, garnish with whipped cream and serve.

Prunes and Apple Sauce.—Take half a pound of prunes, a slice of orange or lemon, a quarter of a cupful of sugar and as much water as is needed. Soak and boil, as usual. When cold remove the stones, fill the center with a teaspoonful of dry, tart apple sauce or with the same amount of nuts and jelly. Press two prunes together, leaving them spread apart after filling. This if shaped a little with hands, will form a ball. Then use as center the ices known as bombes.

To make the nut and jelly filling take the meats from six English walnuts and chop these very fine. Mix with enough tart jelly to moisten and fill the prunes with this.

NICE POTATO SALADS.

POTATOES make one of the most useful salads on the winter bill of fare. Should it have to appear often on the table it may be varied from time to time, now being served with mayonnaise, now with a boiled and again with a French dressing.

The ingredients of the salad should always be thoroughly mixed. It may be garnished with radishes, sliced or cut in roses, or with sprigs of parsley or watercress.

Two Novel Salads.

Hot Potato Salad.—Take small potatoes, wash and peel these and take off the skins and slice. Pour over them a hot dressing made of one-half cupful of bacon grease, one-quarter cupful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt, pepper or paprika to taste, onion juice or chives, if desired.

Savory Potato Salad.—Boil small firm potatoes and when they are cold cut them into dice. Put a layer of them into a salad bowl, sprinkle with a small quantity of blended oil and vinegar and a little finely chopped onion; add a thin layer of sliced radishes and pickled gherkin, then more potatoes, and so on until the bowl contains the required quantity, finishing with potatoes. Around the edge put a border of cress, from which the stalks have been removed. Scatter some finely chopped parsley and the sieved yolk of a hard boiled egg over the potatoes, and the salad will be ready to serve.

Tempting Combinations.

Plain Potato Salad.—Take four cold boiled potatoes which have been sliced thin, one teaspoonful of finely chopped onion, one teaspoonful chopped parsley, one tablespoonful diced bacon, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and one-half cupful vinegar.

Put bacon into a frying pan, add the onion and fry until light brown, then add the vinegar, salt and pepper. Mix the potato, chopped parsley and the hot vinegar dressing together and serve.

Rich Potato Salad.—The yolks of four eggs are used in this. The other ingredients are one teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful sugar, one teaspoonful mustard, one of flour. Mix well together and add one-half cupful vinegar. Cook slowly until thick. Slice six good sized boiled potatoes thin and mix two onions, chopped fine with them. Thin the dressing with sweet cream and one tablespoonful melted butter. Pour over potatoes and onions, stir well and let stand fifteen minutes before serving.

Believe Archer's Mind Unbalanced.

Bloomfield, Ind., Jan 13.—The defense in the trial of David Archer for the murder of his wife made a strong effort to prove that the defendant has a strain of hereditary insanity. His mother was in an insane asylm before she was married and his father was at one time committed to a hospital for the insane. A dozen or more witnesses testified that from conversations with Archer and from his actions they believed him to be of unsound mind.

Highly Seasoned Croquettes.

Chicken Croquettes.—Take one pint of finely chopped cooked chicken, one tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, one cupful of cream or chicken stock, one tablespoonful of flour, four eggs and one teaspoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one pint of crumbs and three tablespoonfuls of butter. Put the cream or stock on to boil. Mix flour and butter together and stir into the boiling cream; then add chicken and season. Boil two minutes and add two of the eggs well beaten. Take from the fire and set away to cool. When cold shape and fry, adding parsley.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

POT ROASTS.

WHILE inferior cuts may be used for pot roasting, the top sirloin makes the best roast. Top and bottom round, the cross ribs, chuck and rump all may be pot roasted.

One secret of successful pot roasting lies in not getting too much water in the pot. The meat must be turned often in order that it may brown all over.

Roasted With Sweet Potatoes.

Southern Pot Roast.—Take any kind of meat you prefer. Use a large enameled saucepan or an iron pot in which to cook it. Place in the vessel a tablespoonful of butter; let it brown; wash off the roast and put it into the pot. After it begins to fry pour in enough water to half cover the meat, season with salt and pepper, cover and stew slowly.

A half hour before serving add either Irish or sweet potatoes or turnips and let them brown with the meat.

A French Recipe.

Parisian Pot Roast.—Fry three or four onions in a little bacon in the vessel in which you are to cook the roast. When tender lay in the meat and let it brown well.

Roll the meat round and round and tie in place with a piece of cotton cloth in order to keep it in shape for slicing. Have ready a bunch of carrots scraped and sliced, a turnip sliced and peeled, a little chopped parsley and a cupful of tomato sauce.

When the meat has browned on both sides put in the vegetables and cover with hot water, not allowing it to come above the level of the meat. When it begins to simmer season with salt and pepper and cook slowly for two hours, turning the meat once.

Put the meat on the platter and set in the oven to keep warm. Then with skimmer remove the vegetables, arranging them in a circle about the meat. Thicken the gravy remaining, pour it over the vegetables or serve separately.

Flavored With Carrots.

Vegetable Pot Roast.—Take about three pounds of rump beef, season with salt, pepper and a sprinkle of cayenne. Heat some finely cut beef suet in a saucepan and brown the meat all over, turning it frequently. Add half a cupful of boiling water and a whole onion and cook slowly for an hour.

Peel and slice some carrots, just cover with boiling water, add a teaspoonful of sugar, boil for half an hour, drain and add to the meat along with some finely cut turnips, potatoes, tomatoes or any vegetable you like. Cover and cook slowly for another hour.

Arrange the meat in the middle of a dish, the vegetables around it, and pour over it a gravy made by adding some hot water and thickening it with browned flour.

NOVEL BAKED APPLE DESSERTS.

SOME delicious desserts which are as wholesome as they are appetizing may be made with baked apples.

Apples in dumpling are often a trifle indigestible, but if you will try the following recipe you will have no cause to complain on this score:

Culinary Hints.

Baked Apple Dumpling.—Take a cupful of sugar and cream it with quarter of a cupful of butter. Add a beaten egg, one-half a cupful of milk and one and a half cupfuls of flour mixed and sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Half fill a buttered deep earthen dish with sliced tart apples, pour the batter over the top and bake about an hour. Serve with hard sauce.

Apples En Casserole.—Cut the apples in quarters, then put in a buttered casserole dish and cook until you can pierce them. Take out and sprinkle sugar over them. This will melt and run through the hot apples.

Delectable Concoctions.

Baked Apple Pudding.—Take one cupful of sugar and cream it with one-quarter cupful of butter. Add one beaten egg, one-half cupful of milk and one and one-half cupfuls of flour mixed and sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Half fill a buttered deep earthen dish with sliced tart apples, pour the batter over the top and bake an hour. Serve with hard sauce.

An Apple Medley.—Wash and core six apples and boil slowly until the skins can easily be removed. When peeled dip each apple into one-half cupful butter, then into a cupful of sugar and last into some shredded cocoanut. Chop one-half cupful of dates and stoned raisins together and fill the place where the core has been taken out. Bake in slow oven until the sugar shines.

Baked Apples and Nuts.—Take five or six large tart apples, remove the cores carefully, being particular not to break the outside skins. Fill the cavities with walnut meats, then bake in a quick oven. When done place in a dish and pour over them whipped cream or milk. Serve while hot. Do not take the skin from the apples, otherwise they will burst in cooking.

MANY FAMILIES HOMELESS

Hundreds Are Driven from the Waterfront at Louisville.

Many families at Louisville, Ky., have been driven from their homes along the water front here during the last twenty-four hours by the rising waters of the Ohio. The stage at this point during the night, according to the local weather bureau was 35.8 with the rate of rise of 0.2 foot an hour.

A stage of forty feet is predicted by this evening. This would put the water over the cutoff embankment east of the city and flood an area of several square miles.

Both trains were eastbound, and the wreck was caused by the flagman sending No. 20 on the wrong track.

Worth Knowing.

Never throw away pieces of lemon after they have been squeezed with the lemon squeezer. for they come in handy, for removing stains from the hands and elsewhere. Dipped into salt they will scour copper kettles nicely and remove stains from brasswork. Lemon like this will take stains, dirt and odor from pans and kettles as nothing else will. The odors of fish and onions can thus be easily removed

ELECTORS MEET IN THE VARIOUS STATES

They Cast Ballots for Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt.

The electors of forty states cast their votes for Governor Wilson, five states were lined up for Theodore Roosevelt and President Taft rested content with the eight electorial votes of Vermont and Utah. One state, California, split its vote between Wilson and Roosevelt.

When the electors in each state met, a messenger to carry the result of their vote to Washington was selected.

This result is carried by the messenger to the president of the United States senate. The electorial votes are canvassed and counted in the presence of both houses of congress and the result announced by the president of the senate.

Mr. Wilson will receive the news at Trenton. He probably will not be surprised when he hears the result.

FLOOD IN ILLINOIS

Farmers in the Lowlands in Southern Part Are Fleeing.

The river at Cairo, Ill., is rising, and has reached a stage of 40.2 feet, while the government predicts 48 feet or more for Cairo.

A 45-foot stage will cover thousands of acres of land bordering the river in this section and drive many families from their homes.

The river has gone over the great cutoff embankment at Louisville and there now remains no doubt that all flood records since the devastation of 1884 will be broken. About 1,000 persons were ordered from their homes by the police when it was seen that the river would overflow the embankment and flood about ten square miles of territory.

The government boat Wave Rock took up the rescue work at Shawneetown, Ill., where the river has reached 35 feet and is rising an inch an hour. Lowlands are inundated and farmers will lost many thousands of dollars.

Kills Himself in Chicago Hotel.

At Chicago, being driven to desperation by insomnia, from which he had suffered for a long while, Ernest Bodenheim, forty-two years old, a lumber merchant, of Cassel, Germany, committed suicide by shooting himself in the left temple in his room at the Blackstone hotel.

Autographs of Noted Men.

When President Taft on Dec. 17, 1912, affixed his signature as the nine hundred and ninety-fourth signer of the autograph collection of Louis Barth of Budapest, Hungary, he added the name of another leader to a collection which has cost indirectly $70,000. Mr. Barth journeyed from Europe to secure the autographs of President Taft, Thomas A. Edison and other celebrated Americans. Andrew Carnegie was the latest to add his name to the collection.

The signatures and sentiments in Mr. Barth's collection are in forty-four languages and include nearly every ruling sovereign of Europe and some of Africa and Asia. He has the autographs of dominant statesmen, leading writers, artists, scientists, actors and publicists.

Theodore Roosevelt signed the album in Berlin in 1910, and J. Pierpont Morgan affixed his signature in Paris in 1911. The collection was started by Mr. Barth eight years ago.

ARCHBALD GUILTY

Forever Disqualified from Holding Public Office.

TEST VOTE POLLS 68 TO 5

United States Senate Not Only Finds Judge Guilty Upon Five of Thirteen Counts, but Goes Full Extent—Convicted of Using His Office for Private Gain.

The judicial ermine was torn from Commerce Court Judge Robert W. Archbald by the senate at the conclusion of his trial for "misbehavior and misdemeanor" in office.

Archbald was convicted on five of thirteen articles of impeachment—the first, third, fourth, fifth and thirteenth.

Disqualified Forever from Office.

After a vote of three hours on the separate articles the senate went into executive session and as an additional punishment decreed that Archbald shall be disqualified forever from holding any federal office of honor or profit.

Conviction upon any of the thirteen articles carried the penalty of removal from the bench.

The test vote was 68 to 5 against Archbald on the first article, regarding his negotiations for the Katydid culm dump. Archbald's highest vote was on article 10, when only Senator Ashurst voted "guilty."

When the last vote had been cast upon the indictments Senator O'Gorman offered the resolution that Archbald be removed from the bench and forever be ineligible to public office. Senator Root moved that the doors be closed, and the court went into executive session.

Bacon Announces Sentence.

Judgment was pronounced at 4:33 o'clock. Senator Bacon announced the sentence. Judge Archbald was not in the chamber.

The impeachment case came up shortly after 1 p. m. on a special order. Senator Root proposed that the question of Judge Archbald's guilt should be submitted in this form:

"Senators, how say you, is the respondent, Robert W. Archbald, guilty or not guilty of the charge contained in this article?"

The order adopted by the senate provided that each senator should rise in his place as his name was called and answer "guilty" or "not guilty."

Several Senators Are Excused.

Before the first article of impeachment was read, Senator Kern of Indiana, Senator Dillingham of Vermont and Senator Bradley of Kentucky asked to be excused from voting because they had not been present throughout the trial. They were excused.

Senator Clarke of Arkansas was excused from voting on all articles that charged Judge Archbald with wrongful acts before he was elevated to the commerce court; Senator Tillman was excused from voting on all articles except the first, and Senator Jackson of Maryland, was excused from voting on all articles. He entered the senate since the trial began.

The conviction on the first count came with an unexpected majority against Judge Archbald, but two-thirds being necessary for a conviction. As the roll call proceeded, sixty-eight senators rose slowly in their places and pronounced the word "guilty" in low tones.

SOLONS IN A DEADLOCK

Neither House of Illinois Legislature Has Been Organized.

At Springfield, Ill., the forty-eighth general assembly of Illinois is in session with both branches deadlocked.

At the time the house was called to order it was the prevailing impression that out of the deadlock would come a combination of Republicans and Democrats for the election of a speaker, the choice probably to be a Democrat.

In the senate the Republicans have not met the conditions inspired by the two Progressive senators, and neither have the Democrats, and each side, without the help of the Progressives, lacks the necessary votes to organize.

Eight candidates jumped into the actual battle for the speakership almost before the sound of the gavel used in calling the house to order had died away. Secretary of State Doyle opened the session of the lower branch of the assembly at 12:15 o'clock.

WILSON IN CHICAGO

President-Elect Is the Guest of the Commercial Club.

Woodrow Wilson arrived in Chicago at 2 o'clock in the afternoon over the Pennsylvania railroad to be the guest of the Commercial club of Chicago.

The visit of the national executive-elect to Chicago was the first one since he was selected as the next head of the government, and his every utterance was heard and commented upon with interest.

While Governor Wilson was the city's guest Chief McWeeny saw to it that six of his best detectives were constantly at Mr. Wilson's side, acting as a personal bodyguard.

MIGHT HAVE SAVED WEDEMEYER'S LIFE

That's What Partner of Michigan Congressman Declares.

New York, Jan. 11.—George Burke, lifelong friend of Congressman Wedemeyer and a member of his law firm, who came to this city to meet the ship Panama and endeavor to learn from her officers and the congressional party on board all the particulars of the tragic death of the late congressman, has returned to his home in Ann Arbor.

Just before leaving his hotel for his train he expressed great bitterness over the death of his law partner and a feeling that the tragedy might easily have been avoided.

"Had they allowed him his freedom on land and exercised human judgment on the way back, this tragedy would never have occurred," said he. "I have just had a talk with the ship's doctor and he said Wedemeyer was not insane when he left the boat after they had reached Panama.

"He said Mr. Wedemeyer should have been placed in a sanitarium, and not in an insane asylum.

"That broke Wedemeyer's heart. The purser of the boat has told me the same thing."

The physician in whose charge Wedemeyer was placed on the return trip was an eye specialist, it is said, and was therefore probably entirely unprepared for the sudden and insane move of Mr. Wedemeyer when he hurled himself into the sea.

WORK PRISONERS IN NORTH WOODS

Latest Scheme for Employment of First Offense Convicts.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 13.—Work short term prisoners in lumber camps in the north woods is the latest combination "jag cure" and reform measure to be advanced for the solution of the criminal problem.

Representative McBride of Shiawassee, Progressive floor leader, has not embodied the idea in a bill, but unless some satisfactory bill to segregate short term, first offense prisoners from the hardened and habitual criminals, perverts and degenerates who now make up a large proportion of the population of state prisons is offered, his ideas will probably be incorporated in a bill.

Representative McBride believes that the hard, muscle-building blood-enriching work of swinging axes and pulling saws in the fragrant, spicy air of the north pine woods will do more to bring a convicted man near to nature, and thus nearer to natural cleanliness of mind and body, than any others means, and the sociology sharps of the legislature declare he is right.

Camps could be established without great cost to the state, the Progressive leader declares, and the disclosures regarding degeneracy and perversion among habitual criminals make it an urgent duty of the legislature to provide a place for young men where they shall be safe from contact with those whose morals are already warped.

Representative Tufts, of Ludington, doesn't believe in a stone pile. He wants to see some good use made of prisoners' time, but a stone pile isn't what it is cracked up to be, he declares.

MISER LEAVES FORTUNE

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 14. — Adam George, who toiled for years on a little piece of land near Dearborn, a few miles west of this city, and lived in a tumble down shanty, died three weeks ago from the effects of starvation. No one suspected he was anything else than poverty stricken until a short time before his death he informed his relatives that he had money in the bank.

Search of the shack has disclosed that he owned a farm valued at $12,000, stock and grain worth $3,000, and a bank account of $1,800. In addition, cash to the amount of $2,400 was discovered hidden on the place.

An old vest yielded $260, but the favorite hiding places were tin cans, several of which were found crammed with five, ten and twenty-dollar bills, some of them so old and soiled it was almost impossible to ascertain their denomination.

LINER ON A REEF

PASSENGERS SAFELY REMOVED

There Were 880 on Board, Mostly Russians, Germans and Austrians—Captain and Crew Remain with with Boat, Hoping to Get Off Reef at Low Water.

The steamship Uranium, Captain Eustace, bound for New York via Halifax, struck the reef within a quarter of a mile off the Chebucto Head light and fog station at the entrance to Halifax harbor in thick weather at 11 a. m. Captain Eustace was maneuvering for a pilot at the time.

The spot where the Uranium struck is nine miles below Halifax and the only means of communication with port was the telephone in the light keeper's house. Assistance was phoned for and the government steamer Lady Laurier, the Bridgewater, and other craft put off for the wreck.

880 Passengers on Board.

There were 880 passengers on board, nearly all of whom were Russians, Germans or Austrians. There are also 500 tons of cargo for New York and 200 for Halifax. Of the passengers 640 are for New York and 240 for Halifax. One hundred are cabin passengers and the remainder steerage. The Lady Laurier took off the women and children first and the men were then transferred to the Bridgewater.

The transshipment was effected in surfboats. All the passengers were clear of the Uranium by 5 p. m., and reached Halifax safely, but the captain and crew still remain on board.

Hope to Get Off Easily.

The Uranium struck the reef with her bows. By the middle of the afternoon, when the tide was half high, her bow was six feet out of the water. There was seven fathoms of water amidships and seventeen at her stern. The ship is protected by Chebucto Head from the strong southwest wind blowing but should the wind change there will be great danger of her going to pieces.

Messingwell's Failure

He Kept His Promise Faithfully

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The telephone bell rang sharply, and the girl at the typewriter paused and drew the receiver to her ear. She frowned as she recognized the voice at the other end of the wire.

"Perhaps you better talk to Mr. Messingwell; wait a moment, please," she said, pressing a button at the side of her desk. She hung up the receiver, but did not resume her interrupted occupation. From behind the closed glass door of her employer's private office came the deep bass murmur of his voice as he talked with Rudolph Fearing.

Suddenly she caught her breath as Messingwell's voice rang suddenly sharp and distinct to her listening ears. "Very well, Fearing, if you don't hear from me by noon you can do your worst—and go to the devil afterward!" Then she heard the receiver slammed on its hook and the creak of his chair as he swung away from his desk.

It was a losing game for Messingwell. He had come at the bidding of a dying father to carry on the long established business of Messingwell & Co., which old Messingwell and a spendthrift younger son had managed to involve almost to the point of failure when a death stroke laid the father low. The younger son had taken himself as far away from the tottering business as his means would permit, and so Alden was left with his promise to fulfill to the best of his ability.

"I'll do the best I can, father," he promised. "I'm not a good business man—doctors seldom are, you know—but as long as I have a penny to my name the old sign shall swing above the office door."

His father had begged him to keep up the appearance of prosperity. "The business will come back again, Alden. Just give it a chance to recover from the depression."

The depression was a thing of the past, and prosperity was abroad in the land, and there still remained the decaying business, perhaps a little strengthened here and there, but bound to die in the near future. The machinery in the long mill buildings was out of date, and Messingwell's methods were hopelessly old fashioned.

The week before Alden had closed down the mills and given the hands two weeks' vacation. The notice tacked on the door spoke of an "Inventory" being taken, but Rudolph Fearing had laughed as he read it and promptly hired all of the Messingwell hands for his own modern, up to the minute factories. He knew that Alden had not the money to pay his workers another week's wages; that there were no orders on his books; that failure was staring the unfortunate physician in the face.

Emily Carman knew all these things, and so she hesitated before she turned the knob that opened the door between her office and Messingwell's. At last she summoned courage and slipped inside, standing with her slender, erect figure beside him.

"Did you call me, Mr. Messingwell?" she inquired.

He swung about and turned a pale, despondent face toward her. "No, I didn't call, Miss Carman. But," he paused for an instant and looked in her face for the flash of sympathy he had never failed to find there, and again he was rewarded, "did you know Fearing had bought up every obligation we owe?" he asked bluntly.

"I heard it yesterday," she said steadily.

"He gives me until noon to settle, then he will close me up for good. I've made a mess of it all!" he ended with sudden passion. "I ought to have hired a manager and kept out of it myself."

She permitted a little silence to follow in order that he might recover his poise. Then she said: "Of course it seems hard to let the business go to a man like Rudolph Fearing, but every firm must come to an end some day, timely or otherwise. If you sell all the buildings, machinery and fixtures I have calculated there would be enough to wipe out all the obligations and leave a clean record for the firm of Messingwell & Co."

His astonishment was genuine. "You have calculated?" he repeated. "You have estimated the possibility of my giving up—you have seen what a blanked failure I am?" He smiled bitterly and turned his eyes away from her.

"It isn't failure to withdraw from business because one cannot honorably carry it on," she returned with spirit. "If failure is the ultimate end, why not draw out before it actually happens and thus frustrate the end?"

He shook his head hopelessly. "I promised father I'd hang on to the business as long as I had a penny. I haven't got much now, but I think I know how I can stave Fearing off for awhile."

"You cannot do it, Mr. Messingwell," said Emily sadly. "If he holds all the notes you can't force him to arbitrate."

"I'll borrow the money from somebody and pay him off," replied Alden, reaching for his hat. "We'll struggle along somehow for another month, and if Sherwood will only rake in a few orders on this trip we may be able to start up once more."

"Who are you going to borrow it from?" asked Emily, and so much a part of his business had she now become that Alden Messingwell did not consider whether his chief clerk was overstepping the bounds of her position or not. Only those two knew the real situation of the Messingwell mills.

"I'll go to Giles. He offered to put me on my feet once before." Alden stood with his hand on the doorknob.

"At ruinous interest, and he'd sell you out to Mr. Fearing without the slightest compunction," exclaimed Emily.

"I've got to do something!" cried Alden and left the office.

Half an hour later he came back, white and shaking. He beckoned Miss Carman into his office and closed the door. "He turned me down—he turned me down, Miss Carman," he gritted between his teeth. "He treated me as if I had been a beggar suing for alms, and he talked loud enough to inform his whole office force the nature of my errand. That is the man my father set up in business—who might have been drawing kerosene in a country grocery to this day if father had not helped him!" He threw himself down in the chair and pulled the telephone toward him. "By the way, Miss Carman, please type a notice that owing to business troubles I must dispense with the entire office help from tomorrow night. Bring it here and I'll sign it and put it up in the main office. I shall be glad if you will stay with me until matters are closed up, if you will do so."

"Certainly," said Miss Carman and left the room to do his bidding. As she closed the door she heard Messingwell telephoning to his lawyer.

It was an eventful day in the mill offices. The startling notice of dismissal agitated the half dozen men and women at the various desks, and there was little work done that afternoon. Emily Carman made up the weekly pay roll and discovered that it amounted to exactly $85 more than the balance in the bank. That was a paltry $6.00 and ought not to be touched if they were going into the hands of a receiver.

But it didn't go into the hands of a receiver, for somehow Messingwell's lawyer got an extension of time from Fearing and in the meanwhile got in touch with an official of the trust and offered the Messingwell mills and available site for sale, and the trust accepted the offer and paid a sum sufficient to clear the good name of the old company and leave the erstwhile doctor a little balance to start him once more in his profession. As for Rudolph Fearing, it was the worst turn of business he ever attempted, for in course of time the trust forced him to the wall, and he had to sell out or go under, so he sold out and became a manager in what had formerly been his own business.

The last day of office work came for Emily Carman when the affairs of Messingwell & Co. were finally wound up. She had accepted a position with the trust when the mills should start up again, but she looked very downhearted as she closed the desk where she had sat so long with Alden Messingwell's responsibilities heavy on her young shoulders.

As she leaned weakly against her desk his deep voice suddenly pronounced her name, and she looked up to see him standing in the doorway looking down at her with a queer expression in his grey eyes.

"Miss Carman, to hark back to the day when we dismissed the clerks, will you please explain how you managed to pay them off with a sum aggregating $90 when you didn't have a penny in the cash drawer and the bank account was tied up?"

She steadied her voice with difficulty. "Why—why, Dr. Messingwell" (giving him the title that was his once more) "I knew it was only a temporary embarrassment, and so—so I happened to have some money saved and I was glad to do it," she ended breathlessly.

"I know you were glad to do it, Miss Carman. You've been the pluckiest little partner that a man ever had! I've been going over things and I find that you haven't drawn half of the salary coming to you, besides advancing $90 that last day. You've borne my responsibilities and—and"— He could not control his voice and it broke strangely.

"Please don't say any more. I have not missed the money, and some day when things go better you can pay it back. Now I must go." She held out her hand. "I wish you much success, Dr. Messingwell, and"—

He held her hand tightly and looked down at her flushed face and suddenly confused eyes. Gone was the demurely quiet, young business woman, and in her place was the loveliest, shrinking girl imaginable.

"Emily," said Messingwell at last, "success won't mean anything to me unless you are my partner in it. Do you understand what I mean, dear?"

Her face drooped until he could see nothing save her crown of lovely hair, so he was emboldened to take her in his arms and explain to her what he really meant—as if she did not know!

"Could you—would you marry such a fool as I am, darling?" pleaded the doctor in her pink ear. "I've made a failure of the business, and I don't blame you if you haven't faith in me"—

Suddenly Emily looked up and her eyes were filled with happy tears. "Alden," she interrupted, "have you—failed in everything?"

He looked deep down in her eyes and then kissed her lips. "My failures have been small indeed, dear, beside the winning of your love," he said tenderly.

Hardy Shetland Ponies.

The cost of raising Shetland ponies is remarkably low. These little animals are natives of a rough and semi-barren locality, where they are used to rustling for every mouthful of their food. When they are first brought over to this country they don't know the difference between oats and rice. They are complete strangers to a grain ration. In the Shetland islands they run out the year round, without any shelter, and pick their living from between the rocks. For generation after generation these ponies have had to make this kind of a struggle for existence, and the result is a race of hardy little animals that are able to thrive on the coarsest food and to stand an amount and degree of exposure that would put an ordinary American horse out of business.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Burmese Tartar Wooing.

Wooing as done among Burmese Tartar tribes is as simple as it is idyllic. On the first day of winter the tribe holds a great feast at which all the marriageable girls gather and listen to the music made by the bachelors, who sit under the "desire tree" and play their favorite instruments. As the maiden he loves passes him a youth will play louder and more feelingly. If she ignores and passes on he knows she will have none of him. If she steps up to him and lays a flower upon his instrument he jumps up, takes her by the hand, taking care not to drop the flower, and off they wander.—Argonaut.

Sea Anemones.

Sea anemones, delicate and sensitive though they look, may attain great age. Sir John Dalyell, a Scottish naturalist, captured in 1828 a sea anemone of the liver colored sort so common around our shores. Its age was then estimated at seven years. It flourished in Edinburgh until 1887 and was just attaining a vigorous and sober maturity when from some unknown cause it died.—London Express.

It Hurt Him.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

ANN ARBOR—George Burke, who was the law partner of Congressman W. W. Wedemeyer, of Ann Arbor, who jumped overboard from the steamer Panama during a return trip from the canal and was drowned, met the steamer at New York and procured the following statement from Congressman Loud, who was aboard: "Wedemeyer was never at any time violent physically and was not under guard on the trip to Panama. He didn't threaten to kill himself on the way down, but told me he had tried three times to make up his mind to jump overboard, but could not. On the way back Wedemeyer ate a hearty meal at 6 o'clock and after walking the deck and talking for about an hour he jumped overboard without a word."

MARINE CITY — Although his death was attended with some circumstances of an extraordinary nature, Charles Richardson, fifty-one years old, succumbed to suffocation in a dilapidated structure here, as rescuers entered the house in an attempt to suppress the flames which threatened to destroy the abode. Rumors of murder were refuted by Sheriff Maines, but not until a postmortem examination had been held and also a coroner's inquest. That Richardson met death by suffocation was the verdict of both physicians and jury, and the fact that his face was smeared with blood they held to be no uncommon occurrence.

CHEBOYGAN—Hundreds of Cheboygan voters, at a special election granted a franchise to the Cheboygan Electric Light and Power company. The company has promised to spend several thousand dollars in improving the present plant and also to build electric line to Petoskey within five yeras' time. The company purchased the plant at Pellston, which will provide power for the western end of the line. The building of this road will give great impetus to the already rapidly growing resort section between Cheboygan and Petoskey.

GRAND RAPIDS — At a recent meeting in which fourteen Michigan counties were represented, definite action was taken toward building the proposed boulevard highway through Michigan to form the connecting link of the Chicago-Grand Rapids-Straits of Mackinac automobile road. The route adopted enters Michigan on the highway from South Bend, Ind., to Niles, Mich., and passes through several cities, including Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Traverse City, Charlevoix and Petoskey.

BATTLE CREEK—Mrs. E. L. Boyce of this city, mother of J. D. Boyce, proprietor of the Ideal laundry, is at the point of death as the result of being struck a street car. The accident occurred near her own home. Mrs. Boyce stepped off a West Main street car and started to cross the avenue, when she was hit by a car going in the opposite direction. Her right shoulder, a rib on the same side, and the bones in her left hand were broken. Because of her advanced age, seventy years, the injuries are considered serious.

THE SAVAGE ABORS.

They Sacrifice Men, Women and Animals to Their God of War.

More unattractive savages than the Abors it would be hard to find. Of Tibeto-Burman origin they speak a language which is allied to that of the Tibetans, while their arts, such as they are, probably come from Tibet.

Their religion is animistic. The deity, Piang, is the god of war and the chase, and is believed to favor attacks on defenceless neighbors and the ruthless destruction of all game. In pursuance of a policy to propitiate him, men and women are killed or taken as slaves, big game is hunted, birds, squirrels and fish are trapped.

The elemental belief in man as the hunter, and consequently the more fitted to be the protector, still holds good, so the women and slaves toil unceasingly at the crops as hewers of wood and drawers of water, and my lord, bow in hand and with quiver on his shoulder, stalks off on the warpath, his arrows poisoned with aconite or croton berry.

Their burial rites present points of interest similar to those of African savages. Over the grave of each defunct warrior is a grass shelter, where are hung his cane helmet, dao, bow and arrows, the horns of the tame bison which furnished the funeral feast, with a basket containing food to propitiate the deity.—New York Telegram.

PAMPERED PRINCES.

Luxurious Lives of the Gilded Young Rajahs of India.

"It is almost impossible for an American boy or girl to imagine the extravagance and luxury that surround some of these young India princes," says a writer in St. Nicholas. "Servants attend them night and day, fan them, dress them and obey their slightest wish. If a wind stirs while they sleep curtains are drawn that they may not be disturbed. When they drive out a mounted escort accompanies them, and all the people salaam as they pass.

"Once when taking tea with a rajah in his garden I was amused to notice that as he moved about among his guests a servant followed carrying a cup, which he kept always within reach of his master's hand. The rajah would take a sip of tea and with perfect unconcern set his cup down in midair. With unfailing dexterity the saucer was placed under it by the servant in time to avoid accident.

"One prince had suspended from the ceiling a silver couch, which was kept gently swaying while he slept or read. Another had a beautiful vine covered arbor, where artificial rain was made to fall while the nabob sat under a marble canopy in the center, cool and refreshed, with the rest of the world broiling about him."

"In what way?"

"It raises the dust for him, you know, by laying it for other people."—Exchange.

STOPPING THE PAPER

"I've stopped my paper, yes I hev:
I didn't like to do it,
But the editor he got too smart
And I allow he'll rue it.
I am a man as pays his debts,
An I won't be insulted,
So when an editor gits smart,
I want to be consulted.
I took his paper 'leven years,
An' helped him all I could, sir,
An' when it comes to dunnin' me,
I did't think he would, sir,
But that he did an' you kin bet
It made me hot as thunder,
Says I, I'll stop that sheet, I will,
If the cussed thing goes under!
I hunted up the measley whelp
An' for his cunnin' caper
I paid them 'leven years an' quit!
Yes, sir, I've stopped his paper!"

LODGE PRESENTATION

At the regular meeting of the Lodge I. O. O. F., Mr. John J. Orr was presented with a beautiful emblem pin, as having been a member of the order twenty-five years or more. Mr. J. J. Belcher acted as spokesman for the lodge, and Mr. Orr responded most feelingly. He has been a member of the order for twenty eight years, and of those who were members when he joined, Eugene Hodges, C. E. Williamson and Mr. Orr are the only ones who are left. His many friends will join in wishing that he may live long to exemplify the spirit of the order.

Rice Stealing Coolies.

Among Chinese coolies a favored method of stealing rice is to lean up against a pile of sacks and stick a tin tube through the sacking, the rice, which is dry, flowing naturally through the tube into the coolie's clothing. Flour is also stolen in this manner, and a common punishment in this case is to let the thief obtain a large quantity and then pour water into his clothing, which makes matters rather uncomfortable for the culprit.

FACT

Local Evidence

Evidence that can be verified.
Fact is what we want.
Opinion is not enough.
Opinions differ.
Here's a Tecumseh fact.
You can test it.

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it." (Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed at a later date he said: "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name in reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Hints for Housekeepers

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son

W. R. Fox, 195 W. Washington St. Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with similar results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Don't sneer at the Kansas City woman who paid fifty dollars for a husband. Women have paid that much for bulldogs that couldn't be taught to roll over in the presence of guests.

Ferguson New Umpire.

Charles Ferguson, the crack American association umpire, who was signed up by Ban Johnson recently, is regarded by A. A. critics as equal in ability to "Brick" Owens, who graduated from Chivington's circuit into the National league a year ago. Ferguson has been a member of Chivington's executive staff for three seasons and during that time had never had any trouble of any consequence.

Ferguson, who is a native of St. Paul, where Bill Brennan of the National league also hangs his hat, formerly played in the American league as a member of the Browns. He later played with St. Paul in the A. A. and then managed the Wausau (Wis.) club of the Wisconsin-Illinois league.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

MRS. DORN.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. W. DORN, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds."

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Joe Rivers May Be Ritchie's Next Opponent.

By persistent efforts Joe Rivers, the Mexican, has worked his way up to the point where he can say "Good morning" to the new champion, Willie Ritchie, without feeling out of place. Rivers proved that he was made of the right kind of material on Thanksgiving afternoon by defeating Joe Mandot, the pride of New Orleans, in a twenty round contest.

It was a good fight, and Mandot made a game effort, but in Rivers he met his master. Rivers is now entitled to consideration for a championship fight, and were it not for his nerve of steel he would be a down and outer instead of seeking championship honors. It was enough to discourage any man to lose a fight in the manner Rivers lost to Wolgast on the Fourth of July, when he practically had Wolgast out, only to be declared the loser while wriggling on the floor to get to his feet. This was an awful jolt for the Mexican, but instead of returning to his careless way of living he set his heart on regaining his prestige, and he made good with a rush. He trained faithfully and entered the ring fit to make the fight of his life. Rivers will probably be matched to meet Ritchie in the near future.

DELICIOUS CARAMELS.

PURE candy can be made at home much cheaper than it can be bought. Caramels are among the most popular of homemade candies, and if one has a thermometer, such as is used by candymakers and which may be bought cheaply where confectioners' supplies are sold, the results are more certain.

To make caramels the sugar is cooked until it reaches 420 degrees and turns brown.

Wholesome Sweetmeats.

Cocoanut Caramels.—Take a pint of fresh sweet cream and put it into a pan with three ounces of desiccated cocoanut and let them boil together for three or four minutes, stirring all the time. Then pour into a basin, cover and leave till nearly cold, when you pass it through a fine sieve. Take one pint of this liquor and two pounds of sugar, put them in a pan and stir them together over the fire till the sugar is dissolved; then add half a pound of glucose, a quarter of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar and boil these all to the "crack," keeping them well stirred. Pour on to a buttered pan and when cooling divide in squares and wrap in greaseproof paper.

Vanilla Cream Caramels.—Take half a pint of molasses and put it into a saucepan with four ounces of granulated sugar and half a gill of water and stir these over the fire till the sugar is dissolved; then let it cook without stirring for fifteen to eighteen minutes or until, on dropping a little of the mixture into a glass of water, it becomes hard. Flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla and beat until creamy. If liked, four ounces of chocolate can take the place of the molasses. Pour into well buttered pans and, when cold, cut into squares.

FOUND GUILTY

Judge R. W. Archbald Is Stripped of Judicial Honors.

SOUPS FOR THE SEASON.

SOUPS that will give relish to the winter bill of fare are a valuable aid to the housewife. Nothing so quickly warms and revives the tired, cold human as a nice nourishing soup daintily served at just the right temperature.

Winter vegetables suggest themselves as the most popular ingredients for these soups, but cereals, such as rice or barley, or dried vegetables may take their places.

Vegetables With a Cereal.

Cabbage and Rice Soup.—Take half a small white cabbage, remove all the stalk and cut the leaves in pieces. Put these with half a cupful of washed rice into two quarts of light stock and add half a can of tomato soup. Season to taste.

Cauliflower Cream Soup.—Take a pint of the stock in which cauliflower was boiled. To it add two cups of boiling milk, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper and a tablespoonful each of butter and flour rubbed together and the outside leaves of the cauliflower which have been boiled until tender and chopped very fine. Boil five minutes, stir well and dust with paprika.

A Delicious Cream Soup.

Cream of Celery Soup.—Take a pint of white stock, a pint and a half of celery cut in inch pieces, two cupfuls of boiling water, one slice of onion, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, two cupfuls of milk, one cupful of cream, salt and pepper to taste. Parboil the celery in water ten minutes, drain, add stock, and cook until celery is soft and rub through a sieve. Scald an onion in milk, remove the onion, add milk to the stock, add cream and season with salt and pepper.

Barley Soup.—Take a pound of the neck of lamb, wash and put it on to boil with two quarts of cold water, two tablespoonfuls of cut onion, two tablespoonfuls of carrot cut small, one tablespoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful pepper. Boil slowly half an hour, remove the meat and strain the stock. To it add two tablespoonfuls of well washed barley. Chop the boiled carrot fine and add to the soup. Pick the meat from the neck of the lamb and chop fine and add it also. One tablespoonful of caramel and one tablespoonful of chopped parsley are added to make a very nutritious and wholesome soup.

ORANGE MARMALADE.

ORANGE marmalade is a wholesome and appetizing addition to the breakfast or supper bill of fare. Marmalade made at home is always to be preferred. It is not only less expensive, but is more apt to be pure and of the right degree of sweetness. Manufacturers sweeten their fruit to suit the average taste instead of catering to that of individuals.

Methods of Making This.

Oranges which one does not care to eat fresh may be made into marmalade. Indeed, for this purpose oranges which are a little tart are the best. The size and shape need not be considered, either, and thus a cheap grade of oranges may be utilized for putting up.

Among the various methods of making orange marmalade choose the recipe that seems best to please you.

Excellent Recipes.

English Orange Marmalade.—For each orange used allow a pint of water and a half pound of sugar. Take the peel of one lemon to six oranges. Cut the oranges in thin slices, remove the pips and put into a basin with a little extra water. Put the sliced oranges and finely chopped lemon peel into an earthen dish with the water and let it remain all night. Next day boil for five hours, then add the sugar and boil for an hour longer, put into jars and cover when cold.

Delicious Preserves.

Rich Orange Marmalade.—Take equal weights of lump sugar and oranges. Peel the oranges and boil the peel in plenty of water for four hours, changing the water once or the peel will be too bitter. When boiled it must be cut into thin strips. From the inside of the oranges first remove the white, then the pips and skin, leaving in a dish the juice and pulp. Wash the skins with a little water and add the water to the juice. Next boil the juice pulp and sugar together for half an hour, then add the cut peel and boil all together for ten minutes.

Another Orange Marmalade.—Acid oranges insure a marmalade that will jelly. Slice thin one dozen tart oranges and five lemons. Cover with eight quarts of cold water and let stand for twenty-four hours, stirring it occasionally. Put away for another twenty-four hours. Measure and allow one cupful of sugar to each of the orange mixture. Simmer another hour then turn into jelly glasses.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

LAMB AND VEGETABLES.

DIVERSITY may be given to the ways of cooking lamb by combining it with vegetables. These will often give an entirely different flavor to the meat.

Any kind of lamb preferred may be used for the purpose. The vegetables combined with the meat may be such as convenience or personal taste dictates.

Breast of Lamb.

Fricassee of Lamb.—Take two pounds of breast of lamb and cut it into square pieces. Sprinkle with salt and flour and place the pieces in a frying pan and brown with butter or drippings. Then take a stewpan, place in it a sliced onion and cover this with boiling water, adding the meat. Simmer until any bones which may have been in the meat can be slipped out. Strain the broth off the meat, take off the fat and let boil again. Then adding the meat, salt and pepper stew it until almost tender. Then stir in a quart of canned peas and simmer for a quarter of an hour. Instead of peas a pint of broiled maccaroni cut into short pieces or a pint can of asparagus tips may be used.

Breast of Lamb and Tomatoes.—Take out the large bones and season the breast of lamb. On the inside put a layer of breadcrumbs mixed with one egg, one tablespoonful of butter, an even teaspoonful of salt and a quarter teaspoonful of pepper. Now roll the lamb and tie it up; put in a saucepan with the bones and brown over the fire. Dredge a tablespoonful of flour over the meat and brown. Add a quart can of tomatoes or a quart of fresh tomatoes which have been peeled and sliced. Season with salt and pepper and add enough boiling water to make the tomato sauce the consistency of gravy. The lamb should then cook slowly for about an hour.

A Toothsome Fricassee.

Fricassee of Lamb With Potatoes.—Take a pound and a quarter of lamb, six potatoes, a tablespoonful of minced onion, a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley, two teaspoonfuls of flour, a teaspoonful each of butter and salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper. Wash the meat, put over fire with one cupful boiling water, add the onion and boil one hour, watching that it does not go dry. Add water as it is necessary. When it has boiled an hour add the salt, pepper and potatoes; boil thirty minutes, then remove the meat, put it into the center of a hot platter, with the potatoes around the edge. Thicken the gravy with the butter and flour, which have been rubbed together, and when it comes to the boiling point, add the milk and boil one minute. Pour the gravy over the meat and potatoes and sprinkle the chopped parsley over the top.

SOME SAVORY OMELETS.

OMELETS may be combined with cheese and vegetables to make exceedingly nutritious and attractive dishes. The lightness of the omelet makes it particularly appropriate to feed to children and those members of the family who are troubled with indigestion. If the ingredients are varied omelets may be served frequently without becoming monotonous.

Rich Omelets.

Baked Omelet.—Take one tablespoonful each of flour and hot butter, one cupful hot milk, a half teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful pepper, six beaten eggs, one teaspoonful baking powder. Stir the flour into the butter and add gradually the milk, salt, pepper. Cool slightly and add the well beaten yolks of the eggs, then the beaten whites and the baking powder. Bake in moderate oven.

Cheese Omelet.—Take four eggs. Break these in a dish. Add four tablespoonfuls cold water and beat until light; add one-half teaspoonful salt. Put two teaspoonfuls butter or drippings into a pan, when hot pour in the eggs. With a fork lift the edges of the omelet to allow the soft portions to run underneath, shaking the pan constantly. Put in four tablespoonfuls grated cheese and then fold over half the omelet. Serve on a hot platter and garnish with parsley.

Made With Vegetables.

Tomato Omelet.—Take a half cupful of pulp of canned tomatoes. Beat three eggs without separating the yolks and whites and mix them with the tomatoes when the latter are well drained of juice. Make the omelet as usual, seasoning with salt and paprika. Fold and serve garnished with parsley.

Potato Omelet.—Take a cupful of cold mashed potatoes which have been passed through a sieve, three eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately, a scant teaspoonful of salt, a dash of white pepper, one-half cupful of sweet milk, a heaping teaspoonful of flour. Heat and butter a saucepan or frying pan and pour the mixture into it. Keep on top of stove at moderate heat till set and browned on under side, then place in the oven to brown.

COLD CHICKEN DAINTIES.

WHEN there is a quantity of cold chicken in the house it may be made up into various delicious luncheon or tea dishes as follows:

Chicken Fritters.—Cut up cold roasted or boiled chicken in small pieces. Season with salt, pepper and a piece of fresh lemon. Let the meat stand one hour; then make a fritter batter and stir the pieces into it. Drop it by spoonfuls into boiling fat and fry until a light brown. Drain and serve.

A Fine Hash.

Chicken Hash.—Cut the chicken from the bones and divide it into small neat pieces. Heat the gravy left over, diluting it with hot water or with weak stock if the supply is too small. Season with salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce or ketchup and put the meat into the gravy when this is boiling hot. When the meat has simmered in it for ten minutes add a tablespoonful of cranberry or currant jelly, thicken with a little browned flour and serve either on toast or fried bread, with triangles of this arranged around the edge of the dish.

A Dainty Meat Loaf.

Chicken Loaf.—Take cold boiled chicken and separate the meat from the bones. Take off all skin and cut into thin slices, mixing the light and dark parts together. Season with salt and pepper. Take the cold broth in which the chicken was boiled, heat it, pour it on the meat and mix well. Shape this like a loaf of bread, wrap it in a cloth and press with a heavy weight for a few hours. When served cut in thin slices.

REPUBLICANS MAY FLOCK TO BORAH

Movement Afoot to Amalgamate G. O. P. and Progressives.

DISLIKE THIRD PARTY MOVE

Idaho Senator to Deliver Series of Speeches in South and Is Expected to Put Forward Some Plan Which Will Bring Progressives Back Into Ranks of Party from Whence Most of Them Came.

Washington, Jan. 20. — In the discussion that has been going on quietly here in regard to the reorganization of the Republican party, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho has been mentioned most frequently as the man about whom the scattered Republican forces can be rallied. This talk has become so strong and definite recently that many Republicans have been predicting that Senator Borah will be one of the most prominent candidates for the Republican nomination in 1916.

Borah to Speak in South.

If any doubt existed on this point it was dissipated when it became known that Senator Borah is soon to deliver a series of a dozen speeches in the South. All of these will be of a political character. The Idaho senator also is scheduled to deliver a speech on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12, before the Union League club of Baltimore. Senator Borah's friends say that on that occasion he will express some views on the reorganization of the Republican party that undoubtedly will attract the attention of the entire country. Mr. Borah will follow up this address with his speaking tour in the south.

Senator Borah is a Republican of pronounced progressive tendencies, but refused to follow Colonel Roosevelt in the last campaign.

Although little has been said recently of the movement to reform the Republican party along Progressive lines, it has been making a rapid advance under the surface and, in the opinion of party leaders here, soon will assume such proportions as to make it certain that the third party movement engineered by Colonel Roosevelt is doomed to fail.

The new movement contemplates the temporary elimination of the old regular leaders in the Republican party and the putting forward of men of well known progressive views.

Active Work Going On.

It has been learned that since the election much active work has been going on quietly looking to the reorganization of the Republican party. This is particularly true of the states west of the Mississippi. The information that has been received from Pennsylvania is very encouraging to the Republicans. Senator Works has been hearing good reports from California, while Senators Cummins and Kenyon of Iowa report that the third party is practically eliminated in their states. Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin is in the new movement.

The reports which the Republican leaders are receiving from the states all indicate that there is a disposition among prominent Republicans to get back into the party organization.

Woman and Children Cremated.

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 20.—Mrs. Lewis Cimbro, thirty-two years old, and her two children, Rose, aged 4, and Amelia, four months, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the three-story frame house at 993 Park street. The woman's husband saved himself by jumping from the third story to the roof of a porch. A boarder was badly burned.

GOULD CHILDREN

MISS HELEN GOULD IS POPULAR BRIDE

Gifts Will Number Specimens from Many Sources.

New York, Jan. 20.—The dimes and quarters which the enlisted men of the Atlantic squadron "chipped in" for something for Miss Helen Gould have been used to buy a gold flower bowl. The selection was made by a committee selected from the crew of the battleship Delaware now in the Brooklyn navy yard. The bowl stands about ten inches in height, is something on the lines of a loving cup, and has three handles. The amount contributed by the men was between two and three thousand dollars.

The soldiers stationed at ports about New York harbor have decided on what they want to send Miss Gould, too. A committee of sergeants bought a silver service.

The men of Forts Jay, Wadsworth, Hamilton and Tolen, the Forty-Ninth artillery at Fort William, Me., the Seventeenth infantry at Ft. McPherson, Ga., and the men of the proving grounds at Sandy Hook have got together something like $500.

The railroad men are not hurrying with their contributions and whatever they unite upon for Miss Gould will be sent her after the wedding. This is because the men connected with the Y. M. C. A. headquarters here are on the road all the way from Maine to Buffalo.

TO SEND ALIENS WEST

Bill Passed to Establish Immigrant Station in Chicago.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Distribution of immigrants through the aid of federal immigration stations at interior points is made possible through a house bill sent to the president by the senate. The measure appropriates $75,000 for the establishment and maintenance of a station at Chicago, and authorizes the secretary of commerce and labor to establish such other interior stations as he considers necessary.

The bill is the result of continued efforts to relieve congestion at New York and send immigrants out into farming communities.

INDEPENDENCE OF FILIPINOS PUT OFF

Democratic Leaders Abandon Plan for Legislation.

PRESIDENT TAFT IS OPPOSED

Even Should Matter Be Held Over Until Extra Session, President-Elect Wilson's Attitude Is So Uncertain that Fear Is Expressed He Would Not Approve When Measure Came Up to Him.

Washington, Jan. 20.—That Democratic leaders have abandoned their plan to enact legislation looking to the independence of the Philippines at this session of congress became known here following President Taft's speech on the Philippines in New York.

Taft in Opposition.

President Taft's repeated declarations of opposition to the Jones bill or any similar plan for conferring independence upon the Filipinos in the near future have convinced the sponsors of the house measure that it would be useless to pass the measure at this session.

Wilson's Attitude Dubious.

To pass the Jones bill in both houses and senate at an early date had been the plan of the Democratic leaders until very recently. Conferences of the leaders with President-Elect Wilson has resulted, however, in considerable uncertainty as to whether the measure will be taken up even at the extra session.

This decision of the Democratic leaders to postpone consideration of the Philippines question for a year will prove a severe blow to the plans and hopes of the Filipinos themselves.

DESLYS ROBBED OF JEWELS

Girl for Whom Manuel Lost His Throne Is Loser of $70,000.

New York, Jan. 20. — Gaby Deslys, who appears in Brooklyn tonight after an upstate tour, announced that she had been robbed of $70,000 worth of jewelry. The $70,000 worth of jewelry that Gaby Deslys says she has lost disappeared somewhere between Albany and this city. She had most of it in a couple of trunks.

Her property man Sheridan went down to look after the cars of the company. He says that most of the cars had been entered and that the trunks of Gaby and the others had been broken into. Reporters saw two broken trunks at the Grand Central.

He has agreed to wear long trousers. eLo is five feet eight inches high and weighs 100 pounds.

PRESIDENT AT ART MUSEUM

Views Paintings in Metropolitan Institution in New York.

New York, Jan. 20.—President and Mrs. Taft, surrounded by secret service men and policemen, spent half an hour viewing the Morgan collections of paintings and Chinese porcelains at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The president's party was merged in with what is believed to be the biggest crush the museum has known.

Another Young Widow Dies.

Goethals Asks 25,000 Troops.

Washington, Jan. 20. — A garrison of 25,000 men will be necessary to guard the Panama canal, Colonel Goethals told the house naval affairs committee. Under present plans congress would provide for a garrison of only 8,000 men.

FARMERS NEED SENSE AND TRAINED MUSCLE

James J. Hill Takes Slap at Agricultural Schools.

Bemidji, Minn., Jan. 20.—At a banquet which marked the opening of the new $10,000 Great Northern station, James J. Hill, who was the guest of honor, said a few things about farmers and farming that have caused comment among agriculturists.

Mr. Hill indirectly took a slap at the agricultural schools. He said:

"In order to develop your city you must develop the country around it. You can't wait for the farmers to go to agricultural colleges. If you do you won't raise enough to feed whippoorwills to the acre. You have got to take the education to the farmer in the meantime. You have to show him what he can do for himself on his own land. You can't farm with chin music.

"It takes just good old fashioned horse sense, backed up with plenty of muscle. With these two things you can make every acre pay $20 a year and then you will have no trouble keeping boys and girls on the farm."

$9.625.368 FUND ASKED

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 20.—Appropriations amounting to $1,525,270 more than those granted by the legislature two years ago are recommended for the eighteen state charitable institutions under the control of the board of administration in a report issued by Frank D. Whipp, fiscal supervisor of the board. The total is $9,625,368.89. The appropriations are for the coming biennial period.

In his report Mr. Whipp gives the amounts asked for by the managing officers of the various institutions as well as the recommendations made by himself. The amounts set forth as necessary by the managing officers exceed by $3,582,265 the appropriations made for the state institutions by the last general assembly. Mr. Whipp slashed more than $2,000,000 off the figures as presented to him by the managing officers.

The increased appropriations recommended this year are accounted for in large part by the acquisition by the state of the Cook county institution for the insane at Dunning, now known as the Chicago State hospital.

Two years ago the managing officers of the institutions then under the control of the board asked for appropriations amounting to $8,837,003.58. The fiscal supervisor cut this amount to $7,814,293. The appropriations finally made by the legislature totaled $8,100,098.58. Of this sum the ordinary expenditures came to $6,915,848, while the items classed as extraordinary amounted to $1,184,250.55.

Prohibitionist Says Reason Is That Almighty Has No Vote.

Indianapolis, Jan. 20.—"God will never settle the liquor question because he has no vote," was the way C. J. Hall of California voiced his own approval of a movement to separate the Prohibition party from all church organizations at a session of the party's national committee.

A. R. Buckanan of Norris, Wis., said he kept a saloon to show people how they wasted $15,000, and won in his fight to elect Prohibitionists to all town offices.

Q. L. Morrow of South Dakota opposed the holding of meetings in churches and the taking of collections.

BUILDING WORKERS READY TO STRIKE

Twenty Thousand Men Await Order in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Twenty thousand building workers are awaiting orders to join in a sympathetic strike with the 800 men employed by the Thompson-Starrett company on two big loop buildings who walked out when it was learned that the contract for supplying the marble to be used in the erection of the new Field museum had been given to a firm that employed members of the Independent Stone Cutters' union. This organization is a rival of the American Federation of Labor.

Men on strike are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Information came to them that the Thompson-Starrett company, which has the contract for the Field museum had in turn given a contract for marble to the Norcross company, which employes the Independent Stone Cutters' union men.

Five hundred men working on the Continental and Commercial National bank building and 300 men on the Conway building in Washington street, between LaSalle and Clark streets, were notified by their officials that if the Thompson-Starrett company, their employers, refused to concel the contract with the Norcross company they should walk out. The demands of the men were refused. A strike was then declared and all building union leaders in Chicago were notified.

PREFERS DEATH TO PRISON

Paroled Convict Takes Poison When Being Returned to Reformatory.

Columbus, Ind., Jan. 20.—Frank Townsend, twenty-three years old, a paroled convict from the Indiana reformatory, took poison on a train between this city and Richmond and is in a critical condition at the county jail with little hope for his recovery.

The would-be suicide was sent from Wayne county for grand larceny in 1909 and was paroled in July, 1912. The grand jury of Wayne county returned an indictment against him for highway robbery, and the authorities were notified. H. F. Purnett, state agent at the prison, was taking him back to the reformatory when he took poison. He said he preferred death to being taken back to the reformatory.

TURK TO REJECT NOTE OF POWERS

Porte Will Firmly Refuse to Give up Adrianople.

ALLIES MAY RENEW THE WAR

Sultan Asks Powers to Make Representations to Balkan States with View of Bringing About Peace on Some New Understanding — May Consent to Loss of Some of Aegean Islands.

Constantinople, Jan. 20.—The Turkish foreign minister, Noradunghian Effendi, submitted to the council of ministers a draft of the reply to the note of the powers. It is understood that it insists upon the retention of Adrianople for the following reasons:

First—Because the Bulgarian inhabitants are in the minority in Adrianople, not only in comparison with Moslems but as compared with other Christians.

Second—Because of the splendid defense of the garrison.

Third—The loss of Adrianople, containing the temples of Caliphs, would ruin the prestige of Islam.

Fourth—The loss of Adrianople, which is the gate of Constantinople, would endanger the existence of the empire.

Asks for "New Understanding."

"The porte therefore prays," continues the reply, "that the powers take consideration of the vital necessities of the empire and make representations to the Balkan states with a view of peace. Turkey sincerely desires to find a common ground of understanding and will even consent to fresh sacrifices."

Regarding the Aegean islands, the reply says Turkey refuses to abandon the islands near her coast, but is ready to continue pour parlers respecting the distant islands.

Noradunghian Effendi has instructed the Ottoman ambassadors abroad again to sound the powers with regard to Adrianople.

The superior council of war has handed the council of ministers a report on the military situation.

Turkey's decision will lead probably, to the resumption of hostilities within a week.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure and get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

His Fellow Passenger

A Railroad Episode

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Burnell boarded the train at the Grand Central station and walked slowly through the crowded coaches until he found a vacant seat. There was only one, and the other occupant was a woman, young and slender and deeply veiled. He paused irresolutely, and the woman drew aside her skirts and made room for him. With a murmured word of thanks he flung his grip into the rack and settled himself behind the evening paper.

The train drew out of the station and into the stifling atmosphere of the tunnel. The dim light made reading impossible, and Burnell turned his eyes toward his fellow passengers. There were the usual aggregation of home going commuters, a sprinkling of shoppers and a number of travelers who had made themselves thoroughly comfortable for a longer journey. He shot a glance at the other occupant of his seat and was startled into a prolonged stare.

She had thrown back her veil and revealed such a profile as Burnell had dreamed of. She was young, perhaps twenty-one, with delicate coloring and pale golden-brown hair parted above a low, white brow, her nose was perfect, and her mouth adorable.

As the train glided out of the tunnel into the pale afternoon light the girl made a little movement, and the purse in her hand slipped to the door. Burnell bent to pick it up, and as he restored it to her she thanked him with a smile and a flash of sea blue eyes that fairly made him dizzy.

He looked wistfully at his painting kit in the rack above and wished that he was going to Boston to paint a picture of this girl, instead of that of a wealthy Back Bay spinster whose generous fee would support him for a year.

"Will you please stop the sandwich boy?" she asked timidly.

The artist whistled sharply and when the boy came she bought a package of chicken sandwiches and a couple of oranges. Burnell winced as he saw her carefully counting the money from her shabby purse.

"It is the curse of everything," he thought savagely, remembering some of his own shattered illusions. Then he returned to his newspaper, while the girl ate her lunch daintily by his side. After that she drew down her veil and leaned back in her corner, and Burnell thought she slept.

Hour after hour the train thundered through the night; occasionally they stopped at a brilliantly lighted station, and the car was gradually emptied of its passengers. After they had left Providence behind and were whirling on toward Boston Burnell left his seat and took a vacant one just behind it, where he alternately dozed and meditated. The girl in black slept soundly.

At 10:30 Burnell slipped his watch back in his pocket just as the girl in front awoke with a little start, looked about her in bewilderment and then at the empty seat at her side. She turned in the seat and lifted her veil, and her face brightened visibly as she met the artist's interested glance.

"Ten-thirty," he said pleasantly.

"Why, what time shall we arrive in Providence?" she asked with a carefully suppressed yawn.

"Providence! Why, madam, we will be in Boston in exactly thirty minutes."

A look of [illegible] to her eyes.

"Oh, no, no; it cannot be," she cried. "I must have made a mistake. I wanted to go to Providence, not Boston! What shall I do?"

"That is easily remedied," said Burnell kindly, laying a strong hand on her trembling little fingers, "for you can take a train to Providence as soon as we arrive or wait until morning. Have you any friends in Boston?"

"Too many!" she shook her head doubtfully. "And, besides, I haven't any money. I spent the last for sandwiches. You see, Felix was to meet me, and"— she flushed crimson and drew back in the seat as if she had divulged some secret.

Burnell's hand sought his pocket and withdrew a ten dollar note. It was half of all he had in the world until the portrait should be finished. "Take this. You can repay it when you join your friends. Here is my card." He thrust them into her hands.

"Oh, you are so kind. I shall never forget it," she murmured in a relieved tone. "I suppose I am horrible to accept assistance from a stranger, but if you only knew"—

"It is sufficient for me that you happen to be in need of it," returned Burnell, with his rare smile as he reached for his overcoat. "If you will permit me I will find out about the Providence train for you and see that you are safely aboard."

"Thank you, but I am sure that I can make the connection all right now." She pulled down the disguising veil and preceded him down the aisle of the car, for they were drawing into the Union station. The young painter saw his fellow traveler safely aboard the Providence train, and when the lights of the end car had disappeared in the darkness he walked thoughtfully back to the subway for a car to his hotel.

The next morning he called upon Leander Ridgely, the brother of the lady whose portrait he was to paint. He found the great shipping magnate pacing restlessly about his beautifully appointed office.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Burnell," said Mr. Ridgely, as he shook hands with the painter and bade him be seated, "but my sister, Miss Malinda Ridgely, who was to sit for her portrait, is quite indisposed today and cannot see you. I trust she may be able to talk to you tomorrow."

"I trust her illness is not serious," remarked Burnell, rising to go, but the other waved him back into his seat.

"Don't go. I would be happy if you will dine with us tonight, though you will find us anything but cheerful company under the circumstances." He threw himself into a chair. "As you will see more or less of my family, I may as well take you into my confidence. At present we are in great trouble."

Burnell looked interested as he lighted the cigar Mr. Ridgely offered him.

"I have a daughter, an only child, a beautiful girl," said Mr. Ridgely, his voice trembling with emotion. "She has been reared with the greatest care, and my sister has been a second mother to Frances. Four weeks ago you can imagine how shocked we were when my daughter—she is only eighteen—confessed that she wanted to marry her music master, a young German, clever enough in his way, but of whose antecedents I know nothing. I forbade the match, of course, until the man could give some account of himself, but he must have exerted some influence over my daughter, for a few days after her confession of love for the musician Frances left home, taking only a small sum of money with her. She left a note saying that she would go away and earn her own living until Felix could afford to marry her.

"You can imagine our grief and consternation. Of course I put detectives on her track immediately, and she has been under surveillance ever since. It seems the fellow went to Providence to play in some orchestra there, and Frances has seen him only once since she went to New York. She has been working in a department store until yesterday afternoon; then I received word from my agent that she had left the employment of the firm and had told her landlady she was going to Providence to be married. Somehow Alden, my agent, lost sight of her, and she has slipped off to meet this fellow.

"If I only could catch her. I am sure she would listen to reason, for she loves us dearly, but her Ridgely pride has been roused, and I have been letting her fight it out alone, hoping she would tire of it and come back to us. But I let it go too long. This German chap undoubtedly is after her money as well as herself."

"I think I can help you out, Mr. Ridgely," exclaimed Burnell. "I believe your daughter came down on the train with me last night." And he related his adventure to the impatient father.

"It is Frances!" cried Mr. Ridgely, reaching for his hat. "I thank you a thousand times for your kindness to my child, Mr. Burnell. Now, if Alden will only come along we can get that 10:03 and reach Providence in time to prevent their marriage."

In five minutes the detective arrived, and as they hastened down to the station, Mr. Ridgely told the story of Burnell's meeting with the girl in black and his knowledge of her having gone to Providence.

Burnell afterward learned from Mr. Ridgely's own lips what had happened. It seems that his daughter had grown somewhat disillusioned concerning her German lover, but her pride forbade that she give in, though her tender heart was breaking for a reconciliation with those whom she had loved and from whom she was now parted for the first time in her life.

Her correspondence with the young German was desultory and only served to emphasize the difference in their upbringing. At the end of three weeks Frances Ridgely admitted to herself that she was completely cured of this fatal fascination for her music master, but just then he wrote to her and urged that they be married at once. He had a steady position and could support them. His endearing epithets recalled once more the bliss of their first lovemaking, and the girl was momentarily stirred by his appeal and consented to go to Providence and marry him.

Mr. Ridgely and his agent arrived just in time to halt Felix Hermann on the steps of the girl's boarding place. She was standing in the doorway, gowned in that same shabby black dress in which Burnell had seen her. When she saw her father she fainted in his arms, and afterward they learned it was from pure joy at her release from her engagement.

Felix Hermann seemed to be relieved of a great responsibility when Frances returned to her father, and not long afterward he married a rich widow who was passionately fond of music.

Robert Burnell painted Miss Ridgely's portrait, but he did not meet Frances, who immediately went abroad with her father for change of scene after her escapade. But he never gave up his hope of one day knowing her and transferring to canvas her beautiful face.

When she finally returned he renewed his acquaintance with her, and after her first embarrassment in his presence wore off he was overjoyed to receive a commission to paint her portrait.

So successful were the sittings that in the end the painter gave Mr. Ridgely the exquisite painting in exchange for the original, and his fellow passenger for life proved to be the same girl he had met on the train and assisted to elope with another man.

Remember this—that a very little is needed to make a happy life.—Marcus Aurelius.

OPEN OUT YOUR HAND.

Then Note the Effort It Requires to Keep It From Closing.

Many thousands of years have elapsed since the ancestors of man lived in trees. (It is never to be forgotten that though ape-like forms, they were not apes.) Yet, in spite of these tens of centuries that have passed by, man has not yet forgotten the instinct of self preservation in the forest. As he was a tailless creature he was compelled to depend for [illegible] the grasping power of his hands and feet. For many ages, however, he had gradually been going on the ground more and more and in the trees less and less so that his feet became more adapted for walking and his hands exclusively for grasping, with the result that the grip and muscular strength of his hands became immense. This is still most powerfully evidenced in a young baby, which, without muscular development, can within a few days of birth hang by both hands to a stick for as much as five minutes at a time and by one hand only for two or three, a task beyond the power of any adult except an athlete and gymnast.

But a fact which is still more remarkable is that to the present day there is not one of us that can hold his hand open without discomfort and absolutely no one whose hand will stay open at all unless the will is exerted to that end. Try it! Hold your hand open for three minutes by the watch and see how tired you will be! Lay your hand on the table, the palm on the wood, the fingers over the edge, and see how, in spite of yourself, they will curve round and grasp it. Look at the hand of a sleeping person and think if the fingers are ever shown to be out straight.

When the anatomy of the hand is taken up it will be found that on the palm and on the under side of the fingers are numbers of nerves sensitive to touch which respond as readily as the nerves of the eye do to color or the nerves of the ear drum to sound. These were the principal protection of our tree living ancestors, for an immediate clutch at a branch was necessary in rapid travel in the lower branches of great forest trees. The sensitiveness is being lost, but it is being lost slowly. Yet even today we can no more prevent responding to the stimulation of the sense of touch in our hands than to the sensation of light in the eye or sound in the ear.

Disregarding the thumb, the human hand is really nothing more than an adjustable hook. It is at rest only when in the position of a hook. When any one loses a hand the best substitute is a stout metal hook.—New York American.

Japan's Musical Trio.

In Japan a favorite musical instrument is the kokiu, a kind of two stringed violin. It is supposed to have had the same origin as the violin and to have been brought to Japan by the Portuguese about 300 years ago. The kokiu is played with a bow, like the violin, but instead of being held under the chin is held vertically upon the lap by the left hand. The samisen and kokiu are often used to accompany the koto, and when played together they are called "the musical trio" by the Japanese. The samisen is the most generally played by the people.

The Aye Aye.

A very strange animal, related to the lemurs and peculiar to Madagascar, is the aye aye. It feeds on wood boring grubs that tunnel into the bark of trees. The beast cuts away the outer bark with its chisel-like teeth and as the worm retreats to the end of its hole pokes after it with a finger. This finger is a curious organ particularly adapted for this purpose, being abnormally long and armed with a hook shaped claw for dragging out the grub.

FUN FOR THE ROWDIES.

Revelries of the Mohocks In London In the Old Days.

Some curious particulars of the dangers of London streets in the old days are given in an article on "The Scowrers and the Mohocks" in a British magazine. The favorite practice of the Scowrers was to invade some tavern in the evening, drive out the customers, ill treat the proprietor and his attendants, wreck the premises and, above all, "roar." Steele tells of the Mohocks, one of whose pastimes was to "inclose women in casks and roll them down the street." In 1712 a royal proclamation was issued offering a reward of £100 for the apprehension of any Mohock.

Soon after the accession of George IV. to the throne in 1820 there was a recrudescence, though in a milder form, of Mohock rowdyism, and attacks on the watch—"boxing the Charlies," as the phrase went—once more became fashionable among the wilder spirits of London. These revelries, however, were rudely disturbed by the establishment in 1829 by Sir Robert Peel of an efficient body of police.

Yet again in early Victorian days there was another Mohock outburst under the auspices of the Marquis of Waterford, and once more knockers and bell handles were wrenched off, public monuments injured, lights extinguished and crockery smashed. This form of humor, however, was quite wasted upon the local authorities, the marquis being promptly knocked down by a watchman and taken up half dead. The same authority tells us that in the following year he and some other men of fashion were convicted at Derby assizes of trying to overturn a caravan, screwing up a toll barkeeper and painting houses and people red. For these recreations they were fined £100 apiece.

Wearing the Trousers.

Ancient Britons were among the people whose wearing of trousers was noted by the more civilized ancients who eschewed them. "Braccae" (breeches) seem to have impressed the Roman mind very much as Chinese pigtails did the modern west. Gaul, beyond the Alps, was at one time known as Gallia Braccata—Trouserland—and Cicero taunts a man with having sprung from "trousered" ancestors. As Roman ways degenerated the use of trousers began to creep in, and it is recorded that Alexander Severus wore white ones, previous emperors' trousers having been crimson.

HIS FIRST CASE.

The Young Lawyer Made the Court Sit Up and Take Notice.

Several prominent attorneys were discussing the peculiar and rather humorous questions put to witnesses by young attorneys entering upon their legal work, and one of the number vouched for the authenticity of this incident:

"I went up to the superior civil court one day to hear a young friend of mine try his first case. All his relatives and friends were there, and the novice wore a most serious expression as he started to question a witness. He did nicely until he asked the man:

"'Did you have a contract with the plaintiff?'

"'Yes,' replied the witness.

"'What kind of a contract was it?'

"'An oral one,' replied the witness.

"'Will you please produce it?'

"The witness stood stock still staring at the attorney and then looked at the judge inquiringly. There was a ripple of laughter throughout the courtroom, but still the young attorney did not 'catch on,' and, looking toward the judge, remarked:

"'Your honor, I ask you to give the witness until 2 o'clock to produce that contract.'

"The court could not longer withhold and joined in the laughter. Then the young lawyer saw his mistake and with reddened face also had a good laugh."—Boston Record.

COAST TO COAST

Four Years Experience as a Marine

BY WM. M. OLDS

We passed from the state of Nevada into California between two and three o'clock Sunday morning when I woke at day light I looked out the car window and saw, we were passing [illegible] miles of the Southern Pacific snow sheds built to protect the the trains from land slides.

The train went down to the foot hills of the Sierra Nevada mountains that was fine, and in Placer Co. we saw many orange groves and fruit orchards of all kinds. We arrived at the Sunny city of Sacramento about twelve o'clock and, made an hours stop, from there we went to Benica a Small village on the Sacramento river, crossing on the largest railroad ferry in the world to Port Costa then Vallejo Junction near the rivers mouth where it flows into the San Pueblo bay. This was the end of my long journey across the states. I waited here about an hour for a ferry which takes passengers across the mouth of the river to the city of Vallejo, here I again transferred on a Naval tug which runs from that city to Mare's Island. This Island stands a little more than a mile and a half south west in the bay from Vallejo and is where one of our largest Navy yards is located. It was 7 o'clock p. m. Nov. 29, when I arrived at the Marine Barracks at Mare Island which lies thirty three miles north of San Frnciseo.

I was very much surprised when I found what the climate was in this part of United States, I expected to find the whole state as I had heard people tell, a place of perpetual summer and ever blooming flowers but not so, except in the southern and central parts of the state. There is some handsome country in these parts but in the north and thirty and forty miles from the coast, lo is cold and rainey from the middle of November to the first of April, I found ice ¼ inch thick on a pond near the Barracks one morning.

While I was at Mare Island I thought I would take a trip down to San Francisco and see the town before it got rebuilt from the effects of the fire and earthquake nearly two years before. Some building were put up already and were better than the ones before the disaster, but not enough buildings were put up to make much of a show in the burnt district.

I was at Mare Island a little less than five weeks and was then sent to Hawaiian Islands, which lie two thousand eighty nine miles south west of Son Francisco in the Pacific ocean. I left Mare Island on the fourth of January with about one hundred other men that had lately come in the service.

We went to San Francisco bay on a Naval tug and got there about noon and transfered on to the cruiser U. S. Buffalo which was anchored about one mile from the harbor of Frisco about two o'clock one hundred men arrived from the Navy yard of Bermington Washington and at four o'clock one hundred and ten more men arrived from the Navy yard at Newport, R. I. and transferred, on the Buffalo from the tug. These men with the one hundred sailors on the ship brought the number up to a little more than four hundred.

That night I ate supper which was my first meal aboard ship in the navy. The next morning at eight o'clock we went to work unloading lumber from a big barge that had pulled up along side of the ship and stored it below In the afternoon a flat boat load of twenty box cars came along the other side of the ship filled with large boxes of goods of all kinds for the new camp that was to be built for us at Honolulu. We worked all that afternoon storing these boxes away and commenced the next morning ao seven o'clock and finished up at 9 o'clock one hour an fifteen minutes, later the ship pulled up anchor and started on its trip across the rough sea towards Honolulu. At this time of the year the sea is always rough and stormy between Frisco and Honolulu, and I got sea sick before the Buffalo got through the Golden Gate out onto the open sea and that is the worst ship to roll and pitch in heavy seas that Uncle Sam has.

When stooping, I become very dizzy and spots of fire seemed to flash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, and received no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They made me feel like a different person, completely ridding me of my trouble.',

Since 1906, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occasions, getting my supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store, and they have acted as a tonic to my kidney. The first sympton of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain across the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so. After I had taken this remedy a short time, my pains and aches disappeared and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me. I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a numcer of friends and shall continue to do so."

Are YOUR Kidneys Weak?

HOW TO TELL. First read the testimony and learn what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for others.

Then if your back aches, if sharp pains strike you when stooping or lifting; if you are lame in the morning, tire too easily; if you have dizzy spells and are nervous, despondent and inclined to worry over trifles; if the kidney secretions are highly colored and full of sediment, if passages are too frequent, scanty, painful or scalding. It is likely that your kidneys need quick attention.

Take a sample of the urine and let it stand for 24 hours. If a sandy, brick-dust like sediment settles to the bottom of the receptacle there is evidence enough to suspect the kidneys.

TEST EYESIGHT

All Michigan School Children Are to Have Eyesight Tested Before Spring

It is expected that the eyes of every school child in the state of Michigan will be tested before spring. Superintendent of Public Instruction Luther L. Wright has had furnished to every teacher in the commonwealth a proper eye-testing card with explicit instructions as to how to make test of children. In other states the percentage of children having defective eyesight has proved appalling. The tests in Michigan are given with a view to helping the teacher handle the child Often a child is considered dull but it is due to the fact that the hearing or eyesight is defective and the teacher does not regonize this handicap. Sometimes by moving a child's seat nearer a window relieves a decided strain. It is expected that in quite a number of cases the condition of eyesight will be found so bad as to warrant the services of an optician. The teacher will then take the matter up with the parent, in this way making it possible for the child to become a better student. Those children whose eyesight is so defective that school work is impossible must under the compulsory school law be sent to Lansing.

Washington St., Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with similar results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Don't sneer at the Kansas City woman who paid fifty dollars for a husband. Women have paid that much for bulldogs that couldn't be taught to roll over in the presence of guests.

UTES TAKE WARPATH

Defy Sheriff to Arrest Big Rabbit and Troops May Be Asked.

Cortez, Colo., Jan. 20.—Fifty Ute Indians, enraged by the killing of one of their tribe in a rifle duel with a Mexican sheep herder, are on the warpath off the reservation. They are fortified in the Ute mountains and defying the sheriff of Montezuma county and Indian Agent Spear to arrest Big Rabbit, an Indian who wounded the herder after the latter had killed Big Rabbit's companion.

The Utes are armed with magazine rifles. They made so determined a stand that the sheriff returned to Cortez to gather a posse of fifty men to pursue them into the mountains. Unless the Indians yield he will call on the state to reinforce him with national guardsmen.

The trouble started when Joseph Vichel, a sheep herder, refused to allow Big Rabbit and another Indian hunter to camp near his flock.

SOLDIER TENTS FOR VICTIMS OF FLOOD

Temporary Means of Shelter Sent to Shawneetown, Ill.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 20.—Illinois has been called on for the first time this year to aid flood sufferers. The call came from Shawneetown, on the Ohio river. In response sixty Illinois national guard tents were sent from the stores of the state militia to the scene.

For several days the Ohio river has been rising and a near record high water mark has been reached. Devastation has been spread in the river's wake and not only Illinois towns and farming communities but those of other states along the river have been jeopardized.

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 20.—The Ohio river is slowly rising at Cairo and will reach at least 46 feet on the Cairo guage before the crest comes. Thousands of acres of farming lands will be covered by water throughout this territory.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 20.—Governor Samuel M. Ralston directed Brigadier General Gerrard, quartermaster general of the Indiana national guard, to provide food, shelter and clothing for 400 persons at Utica, Ind., who are in want because of the Ohio river flood.

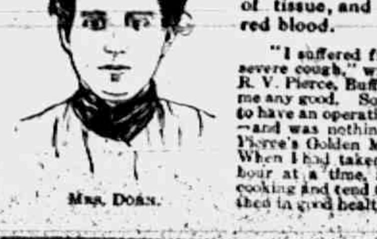
THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.



MRS. DOAN.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes MRS. W. DOAN, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 1[illegible] pounds."

A Gift on the Field of Battle

A Story of the Balkan War

By F. A. MITCHEL

One of those bloody battles between the allied Balkan forces and the Turks, near Adrianople, had been fought, and the latter had been defeated, but not without terrible cost to their enemies. From the field arose the mingled cries of Turks and Balkans, the former appealing to Allah to send them succor, the latter to the Christian's God.

Two wounded Montenegrin soldiers lay side by side. One of them, whose [illegible] a rifle ball, sat up and, pulling a little flask from his pocket, was about to take the single drink it contained, when he saw the other, who seemed to be wounded unto death, looking at it longingly. A struggle arose within the man who possessed it. He would soon likely be carried off the field to recover from his wound, while the other gave evidence of being in a dying condition.

Both men craved the single dram that remained in the flask. To either it was more than untold wealth. But the possessor of the treasure could not withstand the look on the face of the other. Slowly, reluctantly, longingly, he reached out his hand and held it to his companion's lips, who drank it down greedily.

The latter closed his eyes for a few moments, then, seeming to gather strength, there came a regret that he should have been so weak as to accept a gift of what a fellow soldier needed for himself.

"Pardon," he said faintly, "the temptation was too strong for me; I couldn't resist it."

"You needed it far more than I. I will recover without it. It may be the means of saving your life."

"I would that I might live to reward you for your sacrifice, but I cannot; I am dying."

"Cheer up. Exercise your will power. Remember that there are those at home who love you and are looking for your return. This will pull you through."

"There is but one such person in the world—my wife—and she would prefer that I should never return."

"Do you mean it?"

"I do. She loved another. Fate deprived her of him and gave her to me. Our parents arranged a marriage between us. My heart was in it, but not hers. I have hated this man, though I have never seen him. I only know that he exists. But now, since I am about to die, all that has gone from me. I am even willing that my wife should be happy with him."

As he spoke the last words he passed into unconsciousness, while the attention of the other, hearing sounds of an approaching rescue party, was turned in another direction.

Darkness fell upon the battlefield, but only caused the cries of those lying there to sound more melancholy, as the whippoorwill sings saddest when the twilight has passed.

Lights appeared here and there, moving about from place to place as rescue parties relieved the wounded or carried them away to the hospitals. The man with the broken leg, supporting himself by an arm, looked eagerly at the lights, praying that some of them might come his way. A party drew near him and he called to them, but either there were too many such calls for them to heed his or he had not the strength to make them hear. At any rate they passed on, leaving him bleeding in the cold. He sank in a stupor, doubtless from loss of blood, from which he was aroused by a bright light which dazzled his eyes. Behind it was the dark figure of a soldier.

"This one is alive," said the man. "Bring a stretcher."

There was just enough animation in the sufferer to remember the companion to whom he had given his last drink of liquor, and he wondered if he still lived and would be carried off the field or would later be shoveled with the other dead into a trench. But with bodily weakness both our finer and coarser feelings are benumbed, and he did not even ask the question. He was carried to a hospital—or, rather, a depot for the wounded—where surgeons were at work amid hundreds of poor wretches who were awaiting their turn to be examined. Finally a surgeon approached him, looked at his leg and at once began to amputate it.

Louis Nadler when he left the hospital did so with the help of a pair of crutches. He had made his contribution to the grim god of war in a leg and was reserved to die a natural death, for his fighting days were over. He sought his home in a little mountain village of Montenegro, where, with other of war's wrecks, he was received thankfully that he had returned at all by those who were near and dear to him. He would sit by the fireplace telling his friends of the battles in which he had fought and the privations he had endured.

One day a young widow who had lost her husband in the war came from a neighboring village to see Nadler. As she entered the room his eye lighted, and he exclaimed:

"Marya!"

"Louis!"

She approached the maimed man, who started to rise from his chair, but she hurried to him and gently prevented him from getting up. Sinking on her knees beside him, she suffered him to draw her closer to him.

"Alas," he said, "you are now free, but I—I am a worthless cripple. You will doubtless marry again, for you are young and comely, and again I shall suffer the pain of seeing you pass to the possession of another."

"I will never inflict that upon you again."

"And I will not permit you to sacrifice a lifetime of comfort with husband and children for me. To be near you and not possess you would be a wretched existence for me. No. As soon as my wound permits I shall go away, perhaps to America, where they tell me that even such as I may earn enough to prevent his being a burden on any one."

"Louis, my life henceforth is yours. I shall take care of you and if necessary work for you. But that will not be necessary. My husband has left me a competency, enough to live the simple life to which we have been accustomed from our childhood. I have done my duty toward him so long as he lived, and now that he is dead what was his is mine, and I am sure he would not grudge me the comfort of sharing it with you."

Nadler made no reply. He was thinking of the words spoken by the soldier on the field of battle. "But now, since I am about to die, all that has gone from me. I am even willing that my wife should be happy with him." He recalled, too, the look on the man's face when he saw the flask containing that which would quench the horrible thirst and give him a little strength to bear his sufferings. And he rejoiced that he had conquered his own craving and bestowed the boon on his comrade.

Marya came often to see the maimed soldier, and while she rejoiced that she might minister to him he found in the ministrations of one he loved and who loved him a solace for his misfortune. His wound healed slowly, and since they were separated in their homes, her attendance upon him was inconvenient and difficult. In order that she might do more for him it was deemed better that they should be married and live under one rooftree. Some shook their heads that a widow of but a few months should marry, but older persons approved of the plan, and the pair were made one.

And now [illegible]ing on the battlefield, who had accepted his comrade's last drink. The same rescue party who had succored his wounded comrade, thinking him dead, passed on. Another party, accompanied by a medical officer, came, and the surgeon, placing his ear over the soldier's heart, found that it still beat. He ordered a restorative and the man removed to a hospital. There the soldier was revived, and when he had come to a condition to be questioned, an officer who was taking the names of the wounded asked his name.

The soldier hesitated. A faraway look was in his eyes, but the officer had no time to heed it.

"Your name!" he repeated impatiently.

"August Hehn."

The officer passed on, not knowing that the patient had not given the name that belonged to him.

Hehn, as he appeared on the hospital list, lay for weeks hovering between life and death. At last, pale and emaciated, he was discharged, not only from the hospital but from the army, and tottered toward his home. On the road he fell in with another discharged soldier limping along with his foot and head bound up, and the two journeyed together.

"I am going home," said the man to Hehn, "to my dear wife. I have done my duty by my country and have earned a reunion with her I love."

"I, too, am going home, to find—I expect—my wife with a former lover. I have doubtless been reported among the dead, since I gave a false name at the hospital."

"And what will you do if you find the case as you expect?"

"God knows!" replied Hehn.

When their paths separated the soldier said to Hehn: "Goodby. I hope that you will find that your wife has loved you and remained true to you."

"Goodby," was the reply. "I am prepared for the worst."

"Will you kill him?"

"I don't know."

Hehn tottered on, stopping at times by the way to gather a little strength or perhaps because he dreaded to know what he feared. He could not but envy his comrade who had gone on to the woman of whose affections he had no doubt. And so one evening as dusk was falling he approached the village wherein was his home. He waited on the outskirts until the inhabitants were all within doors, then went on and, coming to his own house, looked in through a window.

A cheerful fire blazed on the hearth, but there was no one in the room. Presently a woman entered. A cold chill came over the watcher's heart, for there was no sign of mourning in her apparel. She put some logs on the fire, then drew an easy chair up before it. Leaving her apartment, she presently returned, her hand on the arm of a man walking by means of crutches.

The soldier without uttered a stifled cry.

The maimed man was he who had given him his last drink—the drink he was mad for, the drink that saved his life.

Recently a ship arrived at an American port on whose passenger list was the name of August Hehn. In Montenegro lives his wife, who supposes him dead. Neither she nor the man she believes to be her legal husband knows that they owe their happiness to the sacrifice of a little brandy on the field of battle.

An addition to the Evansville building costing $150,000 will be erected. Representative Cox is allowed money for an addition to the New Albany building. Cullop gets a building and site at Linton; Adair a building and site at Bluffton, Cline a building and site at Kendallville. Barnhart gets a new building for his home town, Rochester. Rauch gets a handsome appropriation for a building at Huntington. Representative Korbly's name is not in the list, the proposition to enlarge the Indianapolis federal building not having been taken up as feasible.

CABINET JOB FOR DAVIES?

Wisconsin Man May Have Been Subject of Recent Conference.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 20.—Considerable mystery surrounds a visit here of Charles R. Crane of Chicago and Louis Brandeis of Boston, and a prolonged conference with Former Justice J. E. Dodge, now part owner of a local daily newspaper.

Though none of the parties to the conference would discuss the purpose of the meeting, it is said Justice Dodge recommended strongly Joseph A. Davies, campaign manager, for a seat in the cabinet.

Important Point.

"Would you die for me?" she murmured. "Gladys, darling," he answered, "And would there," she continued, softly, "be anything left for me after the undertaker's bill was paid?"—[illegible]

SUICIDE FOUND COLD ON MOTHER'S GRAVE

Takes Two Kinds of Poison to Make Sure Job.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 21. — Half buried in the snow which covered the grave of his mother in Lakeside cemetery, the body of Elwin J. Van Ness of Detroit was found by the police. He had taken morphine and cyanide of potassium.

Van Ness, who was employed as watch repairer in a Monroe avenue jewelry store at Detroit, came to Port Huron on the Detroit United railway. He went to the home of his brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. F. A. Howard.

He said he was not feeling well, but would go to the grave of his mother, who died about two years ago.

When he failed to return within a reasonable time the police were asked to seek him, and found him dead across his mother's grave. Beside his corpse lay an envelope containing several notes.

Van Ness was forty-two years old and had been in poor health and despondent for some time.

MACGREGOR RETAINS SEAT

Senate Turns Down Covert, Contestant in Twelfth District.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 18.—State Senator James B. MacGregor, the Democratic member from the Twelfth district, was indorsed by a vote of 22 to 9 and will retain his seat, in spite of the contest of Frank L. Covert, the Pontiac Republican.

Unquestionably the refusal of Covert to stand for a special election in the disputed Fourth ward of Ann Arbor, and MacGregor's immediate acquiescence in this proposal had its effect.

STOLE TO FEED FAMILY

Lansing Man Tells Story in Court and Is Released.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 20.—Daniel Pierow has been released on his own recognizance to appear in circuit court on a charge of burglary.

Pierow was arrested in a local meat market. He told the officers that he entered the store to secure food for his family, who were starving. As the man carried no weapons or burglar's tools his story was investigated and the officers found his wife and two children in desperate straits.

LANSING.— In order to fully protect the work of the state tax commission, now minus one member, the senate confirmed the appointment of Thomas D. Kearney and Orlando F. Barnes recently named by Governor Ferris.

TURK HAS DECIDED

Porte Will Firmly Refuse to Give up Adrianople.

ALLIES MAY RENEW THE WAR

Sultan Asks Powers to Make Representations to Balkan States with View of Bringing About Peace or Some New Understanding—May Consent to Loss of Some Islands.

ULTIMATUM TO TURKEY.

The Balkan allies, Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro presented an ultimatum to Turkey, giving the Ottoman government fourteen days in which to make a favorable reply to their demands, according to dispatches from Constantinople.

At Constantinople Monday the Turkish foreign minister, Noradunghian Effendi, submitted to the council of ministers a draft of the reply to the note of the powers. It is understood that it insists upon the retention of Adrianople for the following reasons:

First—Because the Bulgarian inhabitants are in the minority in Adrianople, not only in comparison with Moslems but as compared with other Christians.

Second—Because of the splendid defense of the garrison.

Third—The loss of Adrianople, containing the temples of Caliphs, would ruin the prestige of Islam.

Fourth—The loss of Adrianople, which is the gate of Constantinople, would endanger the existence of the empire.

Asks for "New Understanding."

"The porte therefore prays," continues the reply, "that the powers take consideration of the vital necessities of the empire and make representations to the Balkan states with a view of peace. Turkey sincerely desires to find a common ground of understanding and will even consent to fresh sacrifices."

Regarding the Aegean islands, the reply says Turkey refuses to abandon the islands near her coast, but is ready to continue pour parlers respecting the distant islands.

Noradunghian Effendi has instructed the Ottoman ambassadors abroad again to sound the powers with regard to Adrianople.

The superior council of war has handed the council of ministers a report on the military situation.

Turkey's decision will lead, probably, to the resumption of hostilities within a week.

LANSING—One of the biggest single appropriation bills ever introduced in the legislature made its appearance when Senator Francis King submitted a measure asking for $1,150,000 for good roads. Of this amount $60,000 is to be raised by taxation during 1914 and $550,000 during 1915.

LANSING—It is confidently expected that the eyes of every school child in the state of Michigan will be tested before spring. Superintendent of Public Instruction Wright has had furnished to every teacher a proper eye testing card with explicit instructions how to make tests.

DETROIT — The Reverend William Byron Forbush, pastor of the North Woodward Avenue Congregational church, has accepted the presidency of the American Institute of Child Life, an endowed corporation for educational purposes, with headquarters in Philadelphia.

POINCARE IS VICTOR

Raymond Poincare has been elected president of France on the second ballot. He will succeed Armand Fallieres on Feb. 18.

The contest in the national assembly, held in the ancient residence of kings, was attended with much excitement.

First there was talk of a duel between the premier and Georges Clemenceau, former chief of the cabinet. The incident arose over a letter sent by M. Clemenceau to M. Poincare, the contents of which was considered offensive by the latter. The prime minister sent Aristide Briand, the minister of justice, and L. L. Klotz, minister of finance, to act as his seconds and arrange a combat on the field of honor.

During the proceedings of the national assembly, however, M. Clemenceau made a satisfactory explanation and the incident was closed.

BANDIT KILLS DETECTIVE

Deed Is Climax of Chicago Crime Wave—Murderer Escapes.

At Chicago Detective Peter W. Hart was shot through the heart and killed by a man, later identified as Robert ("Teddy") Webb, whom he was seeking to arrest as an automobile bandit. The shooting occurred in the flat of Michael Cassello, where the detective had gone to obtain information about the bandit. Death was instantaneous.

The shooting of Detective Hart is the climax of the "crime wave" of the last four months in which robberies, burglaries, auto bandit raids and even murders, have completely stampeded the police department. Webb, the man who has been identified by pictures as the murderer of the police officer, is an ex-convict, wanted by the police as the fourth member of the auto bandit gang of which James A. Perry, now under arrest at the Hyde Park station, was the avowed leader.

CELLS AS TRUST CURE PROPOSED BY WILSON

Sweeping Plan to Crush Monopolies in New Jersey.

A program of proposed changes in the corporation laws of New Jersey involving prison terms for trust magnates, was announced by Governor Woodrow Wilson. Not only would it be a misdemeanor, under the proposed laws, to acquire a monopoly or interfere with freedom of competition but jail sentences are contemplated for those who promote or organize trusts. To effect these changes, seven voluminous bills have been drafted by Governor Wilson, Chancellor Walker and Judge Van Syckel.

The first of these bills provides for punishment not exceeding three years' imprisonment and a $1,000 fine for any corporation, firm or individual who may agree to any of the following:

To limit production or increase prices.

To prevent competition in manufacturing, transporting or selling any commodity.

To fix any standard or figure whereby prices to the public shall in any manner be controlled.

To make any agreement which shall directly or indirectly preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves, or any purchasers or consumers.

To make any secret or oral agreement, whereby the same thing is accomplished.

NEW HAVEN—While a railroad brakeman rushed madly down the track in a vain effort to flag a speeding Grand Trunk passenger train, two men leaped for life from a freight engine which had been caught in a frog while heading for the main track. The next moment the passenger train crashed into the stalled engine, and the lives of the two men, the engineer and fireman of the passenger, were snuffed out.

FISHER IS ACCUSED

Uncle Sam Oil Leases Are under Investigation.

CLAIM OIL TRUST IS FAVORED

Attorney for Members of Council Deposed by Interior Department Criticises Action in Rejecting Uncle Sam Oil Leases and Making Others—May Call Indian Chiefs.

At Washington, with Secretary Fisher and F. H. Abbott, Indian commissioner, in attendance, the house committee on Indian affairs continued its investigation of the charges and countercharges concerning the Uncle Sam company leases with the Osage council. Charges were made that the contracts forced on the Indians by Secretary Fisher were favorable to the oil trust.

Department Roundly Criticised.

T. J. Leahy, attorney for deposed members of the council, roundly criticised the department for rejecting the Uncle Sam leases and asserted that the seven members of the council ousted by Secretary Fisher did not know to this good hour the charges against them.

Secretary Fisher and Commissioner Abbott were accompanied by a staff of clerks from the interior department who bore voluminous documents which probably will be offered to sustain the action of the department and its statement that certain transactions in connection with the oil leases warranted the attention of the department of justice.

Mr. Leahy asserted the Indians still want the Uncle Sam company to have their oil lands.

Would Call Indian Chiefs.

Commissioner Abbott claimed during the interchange of views that the Indians would lose about $82,000 annually under the Uncle Sam leases on the theory that the Uncle Sam people offered royalties of one-eighth whereas the Indians "might receive one-sixth."

Mr. Leahy suggested that the committee summon every member of the old and new Osage council and expressed the belief the committee would find there had been no "corruption" of any kind, and that the Uncle Sam leases were advantageous to the Indians.

LANSING—The battle for statewide prohibition in Michigan is on. Representative Dunn of Sanilac county in the house introduced a concurrent resolution providing for the submission at the November elections of 1914 a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor. EDITOR TO PLEAD ROOSEVELT DRANK

Michigan Man Will Seek to Prove Charges Justified.

Marquette, Mich., Jan. 20.—George A. Newett, editor of the Ishpeming Iron Ore, who has been sued by Colonel Roosevelt for libel because he published a story in the late presidential campaign charging Roosevelt with drunkenness and cursing, will set up in his defense that his statements were true and will introduce evidence to corroborate them.

These plans were made known in the brief filed by Editor Newett's attorney, William P. Belding. The brief first recites that Newett published the statements in good faith believing them to be true and that as the plaintiff was then a candidate for the presidency of the United States it was the duty of the defendant to give the readers of his publication all the information within his power as to the character of the candidate who sought their suffrage. The brief then concludes:

"Defendant will further insist in his defense that at and before the time of publishing the words complained of the plaintiff had been and was guilty of the facts and acts charged and that the statement complained of was and is true in substance and fact."

CITIZENS ARM FOR BURGLAR

Jackson Is Aroused by Operations of Bold Thief.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 21. — Jackson has a bold, bad and a very elusive burglar, and despite the fact that he has been seen a number of times and has narrowly escaped capture on a number of occasions, he is still at large and is plying his profession.

The burglar has been confining his operations almost entirely to the Fifth ward of the city and has come to be known as "the Fifth ward burglar." Several homes have been entered in the last few weeks, but the hauls have not been large.

So bold is the thief he has made calls even before the occupants of homes retired for the night and while the lights were still burning.

On a number of occasions he has been seen peeping into windows and he has been chased for blocks only to escape. Many residents of the Fifth ward have secured shotguns, revolvers and other weapons and are waiting an opportunity to practice their marksmanship upon the marauder.

MUNICIPAL COURTING ROOM

Lansing May Establish It to Give Working Girls a Chance.

Lansing, Mich., Jan 20.—The city officials face a social problem that may result in municipal parlors for young women to entertain company.

Before the federal government issued contrary orders, the postoffice was the favorite trysting place of working girls and their escorts. From there the gallant knights led their sweethearts to the shadowy and well heated nooks and crannies of the city hall lobbies. Certain citizens objected to this and the modern Romeos were "shooed." But kind hearted officials have promised to come to the rescue and the municipal courting parlors are looming large.

"Why not?" says Mayor Reutter, who was undisturbed in his wooing in the fatherland.

VASSAR—Frank B. Moderow, who was a dentist in the employ of Dr. Ralph E. Watkins, was found unconscious on the floor of the office and was dead when medical attendance reached him. Death is supposed to have resulted from a fit of some kind. Moderow was twenty-eight years old and his mother lives in Reese.

Blind Leading The Blind

DESIRED PLACES IN SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

San Antonio, Texas, Jan 11, 1913

Dear Editor:

Strolling down Dolerosa Street, past the Military Plaza and today the Spanish quarter, I met Big Lee Panter, a former Pittsburger, but now of Texas.

This was not surprising, for we have met in various Texas cities, and on every occasion his chief aim and ambition was to show me the town and main points of interest.

And now after the usual effusive greetings, which were punctured by "Oh's, What's and Why's," he desired to show me the Alamo Plaza, Main Plaza, Market Plaza, Military Plaza and many other things including old missions, churches, etc.

'Twas the old story of the blind leading the blind, for we were both strangers and entirely ignorant of San Tone's streets and customs

The chief object of interest to all visitors seems to be the Alamo Plaza, and in my wanderings through these narrow crooked streets, dodging autos and street cars, which have a peculiar habit of appearing suddenly from nowhere, I ran across, or against, dozens of well dressed strangers who were inquiring for the Alamo or the Buckhorn.

The Buckhorn? "Why," said one loquacious Texan, "I'm the original buck who killed those bucks whose horns you see in the Buckhorn. Yes sub, sixteen hundred and sixty-six of 'em."

But I'm speaking of the Alamo.

Lee and I started towards it, as we thought, and after an hour's twisting and turning through alleys, across bridges, up hill and down dale, came out again on the Main Plaza.

With disappointment and determination, we stepped up to the ticket window of the Dixie Theatre, and there, to my surprise, was the familar form and face of my hill billy friend from the sticks, "Fatty" Parker.

"Hello, my luxurious friend!" I cried with joyous enthusiasm. "Hello, yourself!" he grunted with some curiosity "What are you doing so far away from Saleratus, and what is the trouble? You seem to be worrid."

"Woried is right," I replied, "We're looking for the Alamo Lead us to it." "Oh, bother the Alamo!" said he. "Come in and see the show. Three good reels today, and your credit is good."

Lee spoke up: "I'm full of reels now from following these streets. Nix on the show, unless your show has the Alamo." "Well," said Fatty smiling, "if your legs are still good, walk down one block, turn to the right, cross a bridge, and then...." "Come on!" cried Lee. "We're off again."

As we came to the bridge there stood a melancholy individual, gasing pensively at the banana plants along the San Tone River and babbling incoherently "can't find the Buckhorn. He's said the Buckhorn was ....." Lee stepped up and spoke kindly: "I'll tell you where it is. You go down ......" "Blast your directions!" broke in the sorrowful one. "I'll find it myself."

We started on, and wound up shortly at the open air restaurant of Jimmy, the French cook from Cork

"Jimmy!" we yelled together. "Jimmy, give us some Alamo!" Jimmy gave us a critical eye as if sizing up the condition of our minds and pocketbooks, as he ventured: "You want some chili con carne and enchiladas, I reckon. Huh? With Mother's bread and French-drip coffee?"

"No, No!" desperately. "We want some Alamo!" "Huh!" said Jimmy, "You crazy tourists give me more trouble than my money. You walk up ....."

"On again," said Lee, as we wend ed our tortuous way through crowds of tourists, Mexicans, Indians, and Negroes until at last we arrived at the far famed Alamo Plaza.

You've seen it?

I am ashamed to say that my friend and I did not view the ruins of the cradle of Texas liberty with as much respect and reverence as would be considered proper by a native Texan but this was due perhaps to our precipitous haste and ignorance of history and customs.

San Tone has been widely advertised as The City Beautiful, but I have been wondering if the Commercial Club didn't employ a charter member of the Ananias Club as a publicity writer.

The City Beautiful? No, no, Oscar.

I would say it is unique, bizarre, incongruous or chaotic, but surely not beautiful: for there is an entire lack of symmetrical, artistic beautification throughout the city unless one excepts the manner of planting flowers in the park and plazas.

But,—and yet, if San Tone lacks in the aforesaid, she certainly has one redeeming feature, a natural element that is worth more than Galveston's palms and oleanders, or Houston's sky scrapers and hustle, or Alvin's strawberries and silk socks. She has the pure ozone.

I might tell you of the city's altitude on the rolling plains, and the dry healthful climate; of the large army post, old missions and secret lair of Mexican insurrectos, of the excellent stores, theatres and handsome women but you have heard it all many, many times, and I am writing of the Alamo.

Around the Alamo Plaza and near vicinity are the large hotels, stores, restaurants and theatres, the coin separators whose operatives are graduates of the latest school of aviation,—price aviation. A florist pays three hundred a month rental for a small store, and a druggist is taxed five hundred per month for a corner on the Plaza And the people.

If you should ask me about the various industries supporting the town, I could say but little, although there seems to be vast area of Central Texas country and towns supplied from this point, and the manufacture of curios and heated atmosphere is much in evidence.

The art, or industry of entertaining the stranger within her gates, seems to be the most profitable, and I might mention four business institutions that are very numerous here and hard to beat.

These four are banks, hotels, restaurants and pawnshops, which are all patronized more or less by casual visitors before returning home.

Concluding, my old Pittsburg friend and I spent our first day in a strenous manner, returning at night to our friend "Fatty's" theatre for a little relaxation. "Oho!" screamed he of surplus adipose. "My friends in distress! Did you find the Alamo?"

"We sure did," wearily replying, "And now if you'll give us a bed for a the price of a show ticket we'll be glad to patronize you." "You're on," said Fat as he passed us the pasteboards. "Furnished rooms upstairs, Good night."

A few moments later as we prepared for slumber, I asked my friend: "Say Lee, where can I see you tomorrow about one o'clock?" "On the Plaza, of course," he replied. "Which plaza? The Main, Military or......?" "The Alamo," he answered with a grin

Very sincerely yours,
Sam Jay,

Four Great Sauces.

A Frenchman has declared that "man has created the culinary art. He does not eat like an animal—he breakfasts, dines and sups."

The French are particularly eloquent on the subject of sauces. Among their famous chefs are recognized four great sauces—Spanish, Veloute, Bechamel and German. The Spanish and Veloute were known as far back as the seventeenth century. In the eighteenth they were modified by the masters of cookery, particularly by Careme, who was called "the Raphael of the kitchen."

The Spanish sauce is composed of juices extracted from a mixture of ham, veal, chicken and pheasant. Veloute is similar, but is not colored. Bechamel is Veloute to which cream has been added, and the German sauce is Veloute plus the yolks of eggs.—Harper's.

WOMEN DO YOU WANT A GAS STOVE?

Husbands do You Want to Make Your Wife's Work Easy?

The question of Gas or no Gas comes before the voters of Tecumseh at a special election, to be held Monday Jan. 27 and it is hoped that every voter will be ready to vote on this question.

Especial attention is called to the women tax payers of the village, who are eligible to vote on this question. Be sure to register your names Saturday Jan. 25, that you may be qualified to cast your vote Monday, as this is a question that appeals directly to women and their comfort.

That all women are interested we cannot doubt, as the telephone bell has kept ringing in THE TECUMSEH HERALD office, each one fearing that the other will forget to register and vote.

This franchise imposes no tax upon the Village of Tecumseh, even the election expenses being paid by Messrs. Stipe and Cole. Remember, Register Saturday and vote Monday on the question "Gas or no Gas."—You are needed.

WANTED MIXED TEA.

How the Iron Duke Ordered It Served to His Timid Guest.

The reports of a revival in the consumption of green tea in England recall a story of Wellington, told in Horsley's "Recollections of a Royal Academician:"

"At Strathfieldsaye it was customary at breakfast time for the duke's favorite man servant to bring in a long tray with a number of small silver teapots, one for each guest. In those days people had their choice of black or green tea, and the duke, himself putting the tea into each pot, questioned his guests individually:

"'What do you take, sir, black or green?' in stentorian tones.

"On the particular occasion referred to his guests included the future Lord Denman, who had been consumed with nervousness ever since he had entered the house at the thought of converse with his distinguished host, and when the question was shouted at him as to black or green the poor youth hesitated, stammered, and when the question was put a second time with some impatience the reply came out with a rush at last:

"'I take it mixed, your grace!'

"The duke was taken aback at the unaccustomed answer, but in a moment roared out:

"'Take Mr. Denman two pots!'"

PRESENCE OF MIND.

A Woman's Cool Nerve In a Moment of Deadly Peril.

An Englishman in traveling through Ceylon was the guest of a dockyard official at Trincomalee.

"The dinner was excellent," he says, "but when it was about half over I was startled by hearing the wife of my host tell the native servant to place a bowl of milk on a deer skin near her chair.

"Although she spoke as calmly as if giving an ordinary order, I knew at once there was a snake somewhere in the room, for they prefer milk to anything else. As a hasty movement might have meant certain death, we all sat like statues; but, for all that, my eyes were inspecting every nook and corner, with a peep under the table. However, it was not until the milk was placed on the deer skin that the snake appeared. And then, to our amazement, a large cobra uncoiled itself from my hostess' ankle and glided toward the bowl, when, of course, it was immediately killed.

"But just fancy the nerve of the woman, though she fainted when the thing lay dead on the floor. How many could have remained motionless in such circumstances?"—London Tit Bits.

AN OLD CLOTHES MODEL.

Why the Poor Man Posed In the Rich Man's Garments.

"Of all queer jobs last night's was queerest," said the impecunious man. "About 5 o'clock I called on a rich man on whom I have a kind of claim and asked for a small loan. He said he had nothing to lend, but that if I would come up to his house about 8 o'clock he would give me a job whereby I could earn a couple of dollars. I went. The rich man sat before a pile of old clothes.

"'I am going to give away all these things that are not fit to wear,' he said. 'That is what I want you for—to find out which suits still look decent. I can't get much of an idea when they're on myself, but you've got a tidy figure, and anything that looks well on you will still pass muster on me, and I'll keep it.'

"I began to try on clothes. I turned and twisted while that man examined his stock. Finally he determined to send six suits to the Salvation Army. The rest he guessed looked classy enough to wear on rainy days. For my evening's work he gave me $2 and a suit of cast off clothes."—New York Press.

Rather One Sided.

Indefinitely Postponed.

"It's a time coming, my son, when there will be jobs enough in every administration to go around among those who want 'em."—Baltimore American.

PLAYING THE PIANO.

Present Day Methods From the Viewpoint of a Cynic.

The piano is one of our best known musical instruments. It was invented several hundred years ago and in its earlier incarnations was known as the spinet or the harpsichord and afforded eminent artists many opportunities to portray languishing ladies seated before it, says the Chicago Post.

The piano comes either as an upright or a grand. The grand is a large, flat proposition that takes up several hundred dollars' worth of room, while the upright has a nice smooth top on which bric-a-brac may be placed.

The piano is usually played by young ladies until the young man proposes It is also played by young men in tin pan song shops. In those places the youth, who has flowing hair and a discouraged necktie, allows a cigarette to hang from one corner of his mouth while he shouts a song from the other corner and uses the loud pedal exclusively.

In the old days, before women became advanced as they are now, it was considered quite some doings to play a piece on the piano which required the hands to be crossed. Nowadays the piano is fitted with a self playing attachment, and the young man caller feeds a porous plaster into it.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

The Farmers' Institute was held at Grange Hall Thursday January 23 with a fine attendance. The morning program was very interesting. The discussion being fine. The musical selections were exceptionally good.

A picnic dinner was the next feature, and was much enjoyed by all

Discussed by A. W. Mills and Mr. Beebee of Tipton Mr. Mills gave a very clear illustration of his methods and their results : Mr. Beebe followed in a witty and interesting manner. One argument used was that one should be educated along practical lines to succeed, and deplored the fact that the youth of the land had been neglected in this respect. He cited his own lack of education at an early day and showed how he had achieved success by most strenuous efforts

A collection came next and Mr. Wm. Wilson was called upon to sing which he did in a most pleasing manner singing "Hear them Bells" and as an encore, "Driving home the Cows" next in order came the awarding of prizes for ensilage.

GAS FRANCHISE ELECTION

The election next Monday should be of great interest to every householder in the Village Granting the franchise asked is without any expense whatever to the Village, and, if granted, will be the means of placing at every door cheap light, and fuel, cheap and most desirable especially for kitchen use. Opposition to this project can hardly be expected, and there certainly can be no occasion for opposition except for selfish motives. But it requires the affirmative vote of three-fifths of the electors voting to carry the question, and those favorable to the proposition SHOULD NOT FORGET TO VOTE, lest by their failure to register their wishes the franchise be lost. All qualified male electors are entitled to vote, whether tax payers or not. Women tax payers having the qualifications of electors, as to age, residence and registration, etc., are also entitled to vote.

MASQUERADE PARTY

Sixty-two couple of young and married folks attended the Masquerade party given in Witherell hall Tuesday night. The costumes were quite diversified and the clowns, indians, navys, elegant ladies, the pretty young lady (?) in pink, the country girls, grandmothers with their knitting, the grotesque old men, hob-nobbed together in a most friendly manner.

Service's Orchestra favored the company with most delightful music and the dancing was prolonged until a late hour. Rob Codling of Tipton called for the the circle two-steps. There were four prizes given. Paul Hunt, Mrs. Roy Pritchard, Ralph Smith and Guy Nemire being the lucky winners.

MERRY GO ROUND

The meeting of the Merry-go-round club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, Tuesday evening. Nine tables were played. Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Heesen uniting in carrying off the prizes. A very pleasant social evening was the verdict of those present. Light refreshments were served at the close of the games. Mr. and Mrs R. S. Moore will entertain them for their next meeting.

RESEARCH CIRCLE

The ladies of the Research Circle held a most delightful informal meeting at their rooms on Tuesday evening. There were about 60 present, many being invited guest. Mrs. Kendrick favored the company with two beautiful solo's. "Dreams only Dreams" and "O Calm still Night" in her most charming manner. Mrs. Milburn Keysor gave a short history of James Whitcomb Riley and read several selections from his writings. A spelling class was next on the floor and some fine spellers were developed.

A fine two course supper was then served after which an hour was spent in social chat, and could the hum and buz be put in the paper it would surely be entertaining. Everybody seemed to enter into the enjoyment of the evening.

LITCHFIELD MANURE SPREADER.

GUARANTEED FOR FIVE YEARS

Have you been in to see the new spreader? We want every farmer to examine the Litchfield Low-Down, as it is absolutely the best spreader on the market. The main frame has 6 hard wood cross bars, mortised and tenoned, and 7 steel rods, making body absolutely rigid, and yet spreader weighs but 1600 lbs. The Bull Dog-beater heel has long and short diamond steel teeth, on 10 bars and pulverizes and spreads the manure with great ease. The box, called the "No Choke," is nearly 2 inches wider at rear and the extra width is abrupt, thus making the packed manure loosen up as it reaches beater. FACT

Local Evidence

Evidence that can be verified.
Fact is what we want.
Opinion is not enough.

Here's a Tecumseh fact.
You can test it.

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it." (Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed at a later date he said: "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name in reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Hints for Housekeepers

Keep Foley's Honey and Tar Compound always on hand, and can quickly head off a cold by its prompt use. It contains no opiates, heals and soothes the inflamed air passages, stops the cough, and may save a big doctor's bill. In the yellow package. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

W. R. Fox, 195 W. Washington St. Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with similar results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Don't sneer at the Kansas City woman who paid fifty dollars for a husband. Women have paid that much for bulldogs that couldn't be taught to roll over in the presence of guests.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called

MRS. DONA M. MARTIN, of Auburn, Nebr., Route 1, Box 84, says: "I thought I would write you in regard to what your medicines have done for me. I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and left me fat and healthy. I feel like a young girl.

"If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

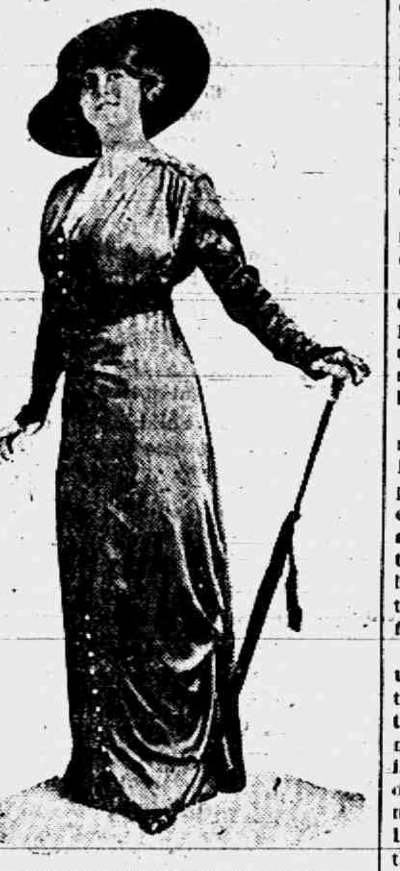
FASHION RUMORS.

New Things For the Spring.



DRAPED GOWN OF PRUNE SATIN.

The new spring blouses are a marked change from winter models. We have passed through various stages; we have worn white with a veiling, then net in colors matching the shirt, and last winter we arrived at colored slips with net transparencies in which the color was again repeated, though the foundation produced the kind of effect which we called fuchsia color and wore with blue or mauve, the blouse being of cerise with an overveiling.

This indicated a change, for fashion moves along certain lines which experience teaches one to calculate, and it was easy to believe that the frankly contrasting blouse, making no attempt to harmonize itself, would be next in succession. And so it has turned out.

A little while ago we thought this style of dressing hopelessly de mode and vulgar, but there was a time when we were attached to it and delighted in the changes it allowed us to ring on a modest wardrobe. With one good black satin skirt and half a dozen blouses any woman could be well and economically dressed, and the idea was good enough until we ran it to death and got thoroughly sick of it.

Whether smart women will take kindly to it again remains to be seen. The gown of prune satin illustrated is one of the draped spring models which are both simple and elegant.

NEW ZEALAND EELS.

Monsters That Kill Salmon and Drown and Eat Human Beings.

Eels can cause the death of a salmon of considerable weight by the use of strategy. One will obtain the grip between the dorsal fin and the tail and then hold on like a bulldog, while the unfortunate victim in vain throws itself backward and forward endeavoring to shake off its captor, until at length its strength is exhausted, and the eel proceeds to make a meal at leisure.

Worse crimes than these are laid to their charge in New Zealand. A great number of bathing fatalities had taken place at a certain spot, where the current ran with such strength that a powerful swimmer could only just stem it. It was a favorite pastime to have a tussle with the stream, but several times a bather disappeared before help could reach him, and when his body was found it was discovered that much of it had been eaten by eels.

The cause of the fatalities remained unknown for a long time, but at last it was discovered that while the swimmer was almost stationary in the rapid stream a huge eel would seize him by the foot or leg and drag him down beneath the surface. Eels attain an immense size in those waters, twenty to thirty pounds being no uncommon weight.—London Telegraph.

A Man Hater

Bitter Experience Made Her One

By MARTHA A. HARDING

My father died when I was six years old and my mother two years later. At my mother's death I went to live with my aunt. She had made an unfortunate marriage in her youth and had been divorced. Her husband was still living, and she did not marry again. One matrimonial experience was quite enough for her. But she possessed a fortune, and her husband, who was a lawyer by profession, was on the watch for any technicality that would enable him to get any of it. For instance, the laws of the state in which she lived required that the husband should join with the wife in conveying real estate. My aunt owned the house in which she lived, and her husband would not join in a deed conveying it unless she would give him half the amount of the purchase money.

My aunt did not wish to sell her house, but the matter opened her eyes to what she had to fear from her husband, especially if he outlived her. I was to be her heir, and she dreaded lest he should attempt to break any will she should make in my favor with a view to depriving me of my inheritance.

Her fears did not end here. Suppose I should have the ill luck she had experienced in making a marriage. The idea was horrible to her. Scarcely a day passed that she did not remind me of the dangers incurred in taking a husband and always ended by advising me to lead a life of spinsterhood.

These constant admonitions served to defeat the purpose for which they were intended. The quickest way to get a young person to do anything is to warn him or her against it. Youngsters wish to see "the folly of it" as well as their seniors. There is another adage that works in connection with this one. "Stolen fruit is the sweetest." I not only wished to marry because my aunt warned me not to do so, but I was ready to enter upon a love affair without her knowing it.

I was but seventeen when I met Charlie Edson, and he showed a predisposition in my favor. He was half a dozen years older than I and was considered a fine young man by all who knew him.

Nevertheless I question if our intimacy would have ripened into love had I not told him that my aunt was opposed to my marrying any one, and I expected to be an old maid. My aunt's action had the same effect on Charlie that it had on me. He began to make love to me at once, and I experienced the delightful sensation of eating stolen fruit.

This was enjoyable only for a short time. Love leads to matrimony, and the first thing I knew my delight was turned to worry. My lover, who was more farsighted than I, inferred that if I took a step toward marriage without my aunt's consent she might cut me off from my expected inheritance. I did not think she would do that, but the possibility of her doing it troubled me. Charlie was a clerk with a salary of $70 a month, and he at least had sense enough to know that marriage between us on such an income meant hard times ahead.

But when two persons are violently in love with each other prudence hides her face. After much tribulation we did what many youngsters have done before us to their cost. We went to a parson and got married, he alone knowing of the marriage. Then I went home and Charlie went home, and where there was worry before there was now misery.

It happened soon after this that my aunt's divorced husband attempted by process of law to get possession of a certain piece of property she owned by means of a paper he had induced her to sign when they were living together; or, rather, the attempt was to levy blackmail, since he offered to withdraw the suit if she would pay him a stipulated sum. This act so infuriated her, so filled her with horror at what she called the iron chains of matrimony that she sent for her attorney and made a new will, which prevented my getting possession of her estate after her death in case I was then married. Her object was to save me from the iron chains, and this was the only way she could effect that object.

No sooner had she made this new will than she informed me of the fact. Imagine my astonishment and my chagrin. My first impulse was to throw myself into her arms and confess, but I remembered that I had a husband with whom to consult, so I only said:

"Well, aunty, I suppose that makes me an old maid."

When I told Charlie of what had happened he was sick at heart, blaming himself for having deprived me of a fortune. But we were both young and full of vigor, and before the end of our interview we agreed that we would rather have each other than the fortune, and since we couldn't have both we were satisfied. Our financial outlook was not pleasing, but there is more zest in having a world to conquer than having a conquered world.

Our chief concern was what to do in the immediate future. If I confessed to my aunt what I had done she might tell me to go to my husband and suffer the consequences of my deception. We are all prone to put off an evil day, and Charlie and I concluded to keep our secret and live the lives we were living apart till such time as we could see our way to set up housekeeping in its simplest form.

It was a long while before my aunt recovered from the effects of her husband's attempt sufficiently to cease talking about it, inveighing against matrimony and an occasional remark to me:

"If ever I catch you listening to the poisoned words of any young rascal I'll turn you out of the house." But after awhile she ceased to get wrought up over it and in time not to speak of it at all.

Then the old lady was taken with an illness from which she was not destined to recover. She had been very good to me and loved me very dearly. I felt it my duty as well as my choice to devote myself to her comfort. While doing this it was impossible for me to meet my husband except at long intervals and then for brief interviews. My aunt was very exacting and kept me with her nearly all the while. Moreover, I would not for the world have her discover that I had repaid her kindness to me by rejecting her wishes for me and deceiving her in doing it. So anxious was I to save her this disappointment that I pretended to agree with the repugnance to marriage she had expressed and declared that I would never marry. In this falsehood my conscience was soothed by a mental reservation. What I meant was that I would not marry a second time.

I supposed that this satisfied my dear aunt, for she never again referred to the subject either generally or pertaining especially to me. But from this time forward I judged that she was chiefly concerned for herself, for she was failing every day, and the affairs of this world seemed to be receding further and further from her. For a week before her death she knew that her end was approaching and for the first time seemed concerned about leaving me to live alone.

One day shortly before her death she said to me: "You are looking pale and thin. I am wearing the life out of you. I wish you to go out this afternoon and not return till it is dark."

I protested that I was perfectly able to bear the strain and did not need an outing, but she insisted on it, and since she was in no condition to be opposed I assented. I was not sorry to be sent out and went at once to a telephone, where I called up Charlie, and we spent the afternoon together. I did not get back to the sick chamber till an hour after dark.

I was met in the hall by the trained nurse, who told me that my aunt was dead.

Notwithstanding that the event was expected I was shocked, especially that I was away when it occurred. I was doubly pained when the nurse told me that my aunt had called for me and seemed much disturbed that I had not left word where I was going. The poor woman seemed to have something of importance to say to me before she died that she would not confide to any one else.

The day after the funeral I took my aunt's will—she had turned it over to me soon after being stricken by her last illness—and in company with my husband went to her attorney to turn it over to him and confess that I was a married woman and could not inherit under its provisions. He looked at it, noticing its date, signature and other points with that method common to those of his profession, then, going to his safe, opened a drawer, and, taking out a document, brought it to us.

"I have a later will here," he said.

"A later will!" I exclaimed. "Surely that can't be. My aunt gave me this one when she was taken ill and cannot have made another."

"Nevertheless she did, and that on the afternoon she died. I was telephoned for and went to her immediately. This is the result."

He handed me a bit of paper, on which was scarcely a hundred words, leaving to me my aunt's estate without any condition whatever. I read it and handed it to Charlie. Then we both looked at each other—I through wet eyes—and Charlie took me in his arms.

"What do you suppose my aunt wished to say to me before she died?" I asked the lawyer presently.

"This will you have brought here," he replied, "disinherited you in case you were married. Your aunt wished me to draw a new will compelling you to marry in order to inherit under it. I suggested that it might complicate matters for you and result in turning her estate over to her husband. I therefore suggested the simpler form. I think that what she wished to say to you was that she dreaded leaving you unprotected; recalled what she had said to you about marriage, and hoped you would find a good husband."

"I have already found one," I replied, and my assertion turned out to be true. My aunt's husband endeavored to break the will on the ground that the testator was not of sound mind when the will was made and I had influenced her to leave all to me.

It was fortunate that I had a husband to look out for my interests, or I am sure my property would have gone either to the man my aunt most wished should not have it or to the lawyers and the chancery courts. Charlie made an admirable manager for the business, very sensibly compromising with the husband for a small sum in cash.

The moral of my story is "do not decide from a single experience," and the moral of my experience is "do not act clandestinely in a case of especial moment, if at all."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—The compensation insurance department of this state, which furnishes insurance for employers under the employers' liability act, is forcing the rates of the stock companies down, according to letters which the state department has received. One Detroit manufacturer wrote that a stock company has cut to the state figure, which is but 60 per cent of the schedule rates of the stock companies, to get his business. Another Detroit man wrote that a stock company offered to do the same thing with him, but he thought the state company was doing a good work and gave his business to the state.

BATTLE CREEK—A fierce fire which started early in the day in the Eldred block, a three-story structure in the center of the business district, spread to several adjoining buildings and caused a loss estimated at $200,000. Among the burned places are the Eldred block, the Hinman block, the Kapp block and the Rex theater. Jacob Weickgenant, dry goods, is the heaviest loser, the damage to his store being placed at $75,000. Foster & Gordon's shoe store and a restaurant also were destroyed. The losses are partially covered by insurance.

Lincoln's Chin Fly Story.

It seems that once a man was plowing with a very lazy mule. Suddenly the mule lifted its head, switched its stump of a tail and went across the field at a rapid walk and with most unusual energy.

Reaching the end of the row, there was a man on the fence. When the mule and man came up the fellow got down, walked over to the mule and hit him a slap on the jaw, at the same time remarking, "Well, I killed him that time!"

"Killed what?"

"Why, that chin fly."

"Well, you interfering fool, I wish you would mind your own business. That chin fly was the only thing that made this mule go."—Judge.

POSTOFFICES SMALL FOR PARCEL POST

Plans for Those to Be Builded Must Be Changed.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Negotiations have been started by Postmaster General Hitchcock to revise the architectural plans for all public buildings in which postoffices are located in order to provide ample space for the handling of parcel post business.

At the present time there are 174 public buildings under contract and 228 additional have been authorized by congress involving an expenditure of $50,000,000. The plans for these buildings having been prepared without regard for the establishment of a parcel post, it is necessary now to have changes made in their architectural construction.

There are at the present time 759 postoffices located in government buildings and in most cases it will be necessary to make alterations on account of the parcel post. In many instances the purchase of additional ground for the construction of annexes will be necessary.

KEEP SEWAGE FROM LAKE

Congressman Seeks to Prevent Pollution of Michigan.

Washington, Jan. 27. — Cities that pollute Lake Michigan waters with sewage will find themselves "in the same boat" with Chicago if congress passes a bill introduced in the house by Representative Evans of Illinois. The measure prohibits the deposit of waste matter in the lake.

With the exception of the flow from the Calumet river, soon to be reversed, Chicago drains no sewage into Lake Michigan and is the only community on the lakes which refrains from such pollution. Many of the other lake cities opposed Chicago's application for more water for its drainage canal. If the Evans bill should pass these communities would become applicants like Chicago for lake water for drainage purposes or be compelled to og to enormous expense in disposing of their sewage by other means.

WILSON FRIGHTENING FOREIGN INVESTORS

Such, at Least, Is Opinion of Zimmerman of Cincinnati.

New York, Jan. 27. — Eugene Zimmerman, father-in-law of the Duke of Manchester, who has been stopping with the duke and duchess in Ireland, returned by the Campania with a sheaf of opinions on municipal, national and international things.

President-Elect Wilson, Mr. Zimmerman said, was doing too much talking. He was frightening European investors in American securities; they were holding off to see what the president-elect was going to do. He would find that he could not teach the people his ideas even in the space of four years; he might be instructed himself on the subject of finance.

"I believe," said Mr. Zimmerman, "that all these investigations, municipal and national, that are going on, do not imply an awakening of civic conscience. Some of the investigators don't seem to know exactly what they are doing. The government ought not to make war on business enterprises and corporations that have helped the country. It is not true that the steel trust in its earlier history crushed out the lives of its workmen by making a twelve-hour shift. I know because I live in that district. The trust treats its employes better than the independent corporations treat theirs. I find that in England and Ireland our steel products are regarded as the best."

The bodies were found in several feet of water by St. Louis firemen, who entered the basement with smoke helmets and rescued four others who had been overcome.

The loss is estimated at $75,000. Scores of persons were rescued from a club room on the third floor, where a banquet was in progress. The dead are Joseph Cronies, Fred Ford and Lieutenant John Connors. Sidney Johnson, another fireman, was seriously injured. Two other firemen are missing.

SEEK REDEMPTION OF WHITE SLAVES

EXPERT STUDY OF PROBLEM

George J. Kneeland, Who Directed Chicago Vice Inquiry, and Abraham Flexner, Medical Examiner, Preparing Reports—Social Hygiene Organization's Fight on Social Evil.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

New York, Jan. 27. — Among the foremost men of the country who have given serious and critical consideration to the social evil with a view toward its humane and scientific abatement is John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Ever since he sat as foreman of the grand jury in New York about two years ago Mr. Rockefeller has been keenly interested in discovering a sensible plan for curtailing the white slave traffic. He was largely instrumental both financially and personally in the organization of the bureau of social hygiene, started with the deep and earnest purpose of thoroughly investigating the present conditions of the social evil and of eradicating them in so far as possible. Mr. Rockefeller now makes public the following interesting and important statement as to the origin, work and plans of the bureau:

"The bureau of social hygiene came into existence about two years ago as a result of the work of the special grand jury appointed to investigate the white slave traffic in New York city, which served during the first half of the year 1910. One of the recommendations made by it in the presentment handed up at the termination of its labors was that a public commission be appointed to study the social evil. The foreman of that body subsequently gave careful consideration to the character of the work which might properly be done by such a commission and the limitations under which it would operate.

"So the conviction grew that in order to make a real and lasting improvement in conditions a permanent organization should be created, the continuation of which would not be dependent upon a temporary wave of reform nor upon the life of any man or group of men, but which would go on, generation after generation, continuously making warfare against the forces of evil.

"Therefore, as the initial step, in the winter of 1911 the bureau of social hygiene was formed. Its present members are Miss Katherine Bement Davis, superintendent of New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford Hills, N. Y.; Paul M. Warburg of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; Starr J. Murphy of the New York bar and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. As the work develops new members may be added.

"One of the first things undertaken by the bureau was the establishment at Bedford Hills, adjacent to the reformatory, of a laboratory of social hygiene under Miss Davis' direction. In this laboratory it is proposed to study from the physical, mental, social and moral side each person committed to the reformatory.

"Arrangements were made, therefore, in the early part of last winter to secure the services of George J. Kneeland, who had directed the Chicago vice commission investigation. Since that time Mr. Kneeland, with a corps of assistants, has been making a thorough and comprehensive survey of the conditions of vice in New York city.

"At the same time the bureau was fortunate in securing the services of Abraham Flexner, whose reports on the medical schools in this country and in Europe are so well known, to study the methods of dealing with it in the leading cities of Europe.

"Based upon all of these studies, which will probably be published by December of this year, it is the hope of the bureau that there may be devised a practical plan for dealing with the social evil in New York city, a plan which public opinion can be brought to support."

REIGN OF TERROR BY YOUNG TURKS

FEAR THEY MAY LOSE POWER

Constantinople Reported as Virtually in State of Siege, with Italy Rushing Flower of Her Navy to Scene in Order to Protect Her Citizens in Realms of Sultan.

London, Jan. 27. — Constantinople is virtually in a state of siege, according to dispatches received by the peace delegates of the Balkan allies. The Young Turks, fearing the reins of power may again escape from their hands, are said to be arresting political adversaries right and left, searching houses and clubs and confiscating documents. They hope thus to break up all opposition.

The allies express the opinion that under these circumstances any excess may be expected.

Adding to the general terror, a heavy earthquake shook the Turkish capital. Whether there was loss of life was not disclosed in the dispatches.

Meantime the drafting of Turkey's note in reply to the powers on Balkan peace is delayed by the Young Turk government's inability to fill the office of foreign minister permanently.

Italy's Whole Navy Prepared.

With the alarming prospect in view the European powers are sending war vessels to reinforce the ordinary guard ships stationed at Constantinople. Italy especially is alarmed over the return to power of the Young Turks who were inexorable during the Libyan war.

The position of the 5,000 Italian residents of Turkey is regarded as so precarious that Italy has dispatched to Constantinople two of its best cruisers, the San Marco and Pisa, and the gunboat Archimede, which is prepared to land 500 bluejackets.

At the same time the admiralty has ordered the entire Italian squadron stationed in the Grecian archipelago to hold itself in readiness. The remainder of the Italian fleet is at Taranto, within easy call.

Greeks Battle at Janina.

A Greek army of 50,000, after five days of heavy fighting, is now advancing on Janina in a semi-circle. A hard effort is being made to capture the fortress, but the advance is difficult through mountain passes.

If the war is resumed this week the allies have agreed the offensive shall be taken by the combined Bulgarian, Greek and Servian forces against Adrianople and Tchatalja. The Servians will detach some of their troops to help the Montenegrins take Scutari.

Batavia, O., Jan. 27. — Vernon O. Lyttle, mail carrier on rural route No. 5, is the first to accept and deliver a live baby under parcel post conditions. The postage was 15 cents and the parcel was insured for $50.

The baby, a boy weighing ten and three-quarter pounds, just within the eleven-pound weight limit of the parcel post law, is the child of Mr and Mrs. Jesse Beagle of Glen Este. Mr. Lyttle delivered the parcel at the address on the card attached, that of the child's grandmother, Mrs. Louis Beagle, who lives about a mile from its home.

WABASH IS FALLING; DANGER NOW AT END

West Terre Haute and Taylorsville Folks to Return Home.

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 27. — The Wabash river began to fall after having reached a stage of 21 feet 2 inches. The danger point has been passed and the water is receding from the flooded districts, while the people of Taylorsville and West Terre Haute are preparing to return to their homes.

Several coal mines in Fayette township and Bunson in the Clinton field did not operate, as the miners refused to enter the shafts, fearing that the high water would entrap them. Those who did work, however, did not experience any drawbacks from the flood and no accidents occurred. All mines will work as usual in a day or two.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., Jan. 27.—Relief expeditions sent out by the citizens' committee and headed by Mayor J. H. Moeller to the Coon country of Kentucky, found more than 200 flood refugees living in terrible conditions, and in some instances almost dead from sickness caused by exposure. Thirty mounds were visited and on each from one to five families were found, surrounded by water and without food, shelter or fire. Some of the refugees have been surrounded by water for two weeks. A family consisting of a husband, wife and five children were living in the garret of a two-story house with the water threatening to engulf them. The refugees were brought here and are being cared for by the authorities. The river at this point registers forty-eight feet and is rising.

FIRE LOSS IS GREATER

Heat Warps and Weakens Girders of Anderson High School.

Anderson, Ind., Jan. 27.—That the loss entailed by the burning of the Manual Training High school will reach $60,000 is the opinion of the school authorities following a careful examination of the ruins. The north half of the building is almost a total wreck, while the remainder has been damaged by smoke and water.

It was at first thought that the damage would not exceed $40,000, but a careful inspection showed that all the steel girders in the north portion of the building have been warped by the heat. It was found that all the seats and desks in the assembly room have been warped and that all will practically have to be replaced.

Killed by Train Collision.

Duquoin, Ill., Jan. 27.—A southbound Illinois Central freight train crashed into an engine and caboose in the north yards here, killing Chas. Huddlester, a brakeman, and injuring Charles D. Brown, conductor, and Fred Hegler, a brakeman. Brown and his crew were in the caboose at the time of the collision.

Kill Eleven Americans in Sulu.

Manila, Jan. 27.—Captain McNally, two lieutenants and six privates of the Philippine scouts are reported to have been killed in Sulu in a fight with Igorrotes. Fourteen scouts were wounded.

Transit of Venus.

The transits of Venus came in pairs with an interval of eight years between them. A pair occurred in 1761 and 1769 and again in 1874 and 1882. The whole of the twentieth century will pass without another transit. Not until the years 2004 and 2012 will posterity have the opportunity of witnessing it. It was long supposed that transits of Venus over the sun's disk afforded the only accurate method of determining the distance of the sun, but latterly the speed of light has become the more favored method for that purpose.—New York American.

EMPLOYERS AND STRIKERS AGREE

80,000 Garment Workers to Resume Work in New York.

WAITERS' STRIKE COLLAPSES

I. W. W. Advises Followers to Make Peace as Best They Can and Grab Old Positions—Agreement of Clothing Makers Affects Only Portion of Those Now Out.

New York, Jan. 27.—After conferences beginning on Saturday evening in the rooms of the Bar association and continued at the Hotel Imperial, between committees of the United Manufacturers' and Merchants' association, the locals involved in the strike of the United Garment Workers of America and the contractors, a settlement of the garment workers' strike was reached by which the questions of wages and hours of labor were fixed, all other matters to be settled by arbitration. When the strike against the members of this association and the contractors is called off, the conferees said, nearly 30,000 of the strikers on men's and boys' garments who are employed in the shops and factories of its members will return to work.

Certain Bodies Not Affected.

This settlement will not affect those who are on strike in the shops and factories of the members of the National Clothing Trades association, the Associated Boys' Clothing Manufacturers of Greater New York or the American Clothing Manufacturers' association, all of which have decided to stand out for the open shop and refuse to deal with the union or any but their own individual employes.

By the terms of the settlement agreed to week workers receiving less than $12.50 a week will get a 10 per cent advance in wages; those earning more than $12.50 a week and less than $15 a week will receive an advance of 7½ per cent and those receiving $15 a week and over will receive an advance of 5 per cent. The hours of the week will be reduced from the present average of [illegible] to [illegible] hours a week.

With these points settled and also the terms on piece work it was decided that the other demands, such as the abolition of the subcontracting system, more equitable division of work during the dull season and free power and working tools be left to a special arbitration board after the strike is called off.

Hotel Workers' Strike Collapses.

The general strike of the hotel workers, which was promoted and nursed by the agitators of Big Bill Haywood's organization, the I. W. W., collapsed. The strike leaders admitted that the fighting spirit had oozed out of their followers and that within forty-eight hours waiters, cooks and others would be scrambling for their old jobs.

As the strike faded after three days of window smashing, of assaults on nonunion waiters and of noisy demonstrations, there was less work for the police and for the private guards by whom most of the hotels and restaurants were heavily guarded. At the dinner hour Sunday only one riot was reported. This took place outside of the Ritz Carlton.

"Meybe dey have got him by der pound. How did they come to took him?" asked his friend.

His Last Stake

A Story of Monte Carlo

By EDITH V. ROSS

Peter Orloff was a young Russian who inherited an estate and 200,000 rubles, into the possession of which he entered when he was twenty-one years old. He concluded before settling down on the estate to take 5,000 rubles and visit Rome, Berlin, Paris and other continental cities. So as soon as he had arranged his affairs for his absence he started for Berlin, from whence he went to Rome, then Naples, where he sailed for Genoa, and a short time after his arrival at that port was in the attractive winter resort, Nice.

He had left behind him a fiancee, Sonia, the daughter of a neighbor, and long before the time set for his return he felt inclined to go home. But his betrothed was spending some time in St. Petersburg, and if he went home he would find her absent. He felt that it would be better to remain away for the appointed term, at the end of which the wedding was to take place. Therefore, tiring of Nice, he concluded to run down to Monte Carlo.

On the evening of his arrival he dined, then sauntered over to the pavilion where gambling was going on. At that hour but few persons were playing, and there was little to interest him. He felt bored. He had a mind to go back to Russia. He would find Sonia at St. Petersburg and might enjoy himself there with her far better than spending his time alone in foreign lands. He came to a resolution to start on his return trip the next morning. This would give him but one evening to get away with.

He asked one of the croupiers at the gambling table at what hour the play would be in full swing and was told it would not be for another hour. To pass the interval he concluded to bet a few francs. He covered several of the numbers and won on two and lost on one. He repeated the bets and again won more than he lost. When he had gained on his third bet he began to be interested.

At 10 o'clock he had quite a pile of winnings before him. He looked up from it to the faces about him and saw that while he had been playing the throng had been gathering. So intent had he been on the game that he had not noticed their coming. He counted his winnings and found enough to pay his expenses to St. Petersburg and keep him there till it would be time to return to his home and the wedding.

Then it occurred to him that it would be nice to win enough more to buy a present to take with him for Sonia. He would go by way of Paris and doubtless see many pretty things there from which he might select something to please his betrothed. He laid 10 francs on the table and won. Then he lost. After that he won quite a good deal, when he struck bad luck and lost nearly every bet he made. At 2 o'clock in the morning he had lost all the ready money he had with him.

The next morning instead of starting for home he drew 1,000 francs on his letter of credit and went to the gambling pavilion to recoup. He played all day and when evening came had won back his losses to within 20 francs. Then another streak of bad luck struck him, and by midnight he had lost the 1,000 francs he had drawn in the morning.

Within a few days Orloff had sunk what remained of the 5,000 rubles he had put aside for his journey and had drawn on his funds at home for 100,000 more. With this acquisition he won and lost considerable, for he played high. Week after week passed while he was seen constantly at the gaming table.

Meanwhile the time for his return and his wedding came round, and he did not appear to claim his bride. He wrote her that he would be unavoidably detained. Not having the heart to give the real reason, he said that he was ill and that his doctor had advised his remaining in the genial climate of the Riviera till spring had appeared in Russia. In order that his sweetheart might not know that he was at Monte Carlo and suspect the true cause of his lingering abroad, he sent his letters to Nice for mailing.

Sonia was naturally very much troubled. Had she any one to attend her she would have gone at once to Nice. It would not be considered proper for her to go alone to join her lover, so for awhile she waited, hoping that his health would improve and his doctor would consent to his return to Russia.

Then one day she heard that Peter had been making heavy drafts on his funds at home and had mortgaged his estate. She delayed no longer, but started at once for the Riviera. These drafts had caused her to suspect that her lover had been caught in the maelstrom of Monte Carlo, and she determined at starting that if she did not find him at Nice she would go at once to the gambling resort.

One night Orloff staggered into the pavilion with 50 francs ($10) in his pocket, the last of all he possessed in the world. He had drawn and [illegible] the money he had inherited and had mortgaged his estate for all it was worth. He was really ill from disappointment and despair, if from no other cause. After playing a couple of hours, in which he had won and lost, he found himself with two gold napoleons, these being the original $10 with which he had sat down in the beginning of the evening. He placed them on a square which, if it won would bring him in five times his stake; then, placing his elbows on the table and shading his face with his hands, he waited the loss of his last coins.

He won. Without changing his position he left his winnings ($50) on the same place and won again ($250). A third time he won and a fourth. He showed no excitement, sitting perfectly still, his hands covering his face, so that it was not plainly visible. When he had four times left his stake and his winnings on the same square and won every time the fact attracted the attention of every one at the table. At the fifth winning all present left off betting, every one watching the pile before him with intense interest. When he had won six times in succession the manager called upon him to take up his winnings, for the bank would not accept the risk another time.

At this juncture a lady appeared at the main entrance to the room and hurried to the table. She approached it on the opposite side to which Orloff was sitting and, hurrying around, laid a hand on his shoulder.

"Peter!"

No reply.

"Peter!"

The gambler sat mute, immovable. The game was stopped. Every eye was turned to him and the lady standing over him. Taking his head in her hands, she raised his face so that the light shone upon it. It was ghastly.

"He is dead!" came from several of those standing about the stable.

The girl gave a shriek and would have fallen on the floor had she not been caught in the arms of a lady beside her.

"A doctor! A doctor!"

A gentleman who had been watching the game advanced to Orloff, who still sat in his chair, held upright by one of the croupiers. A way was made for the gentleman, who took Orloff's wrist between his fingers, then put his hand on his heart.

"It beats faintly," he said.

Meanwhile the girl, who had fainted, revived and, seeing the unconscious figure before her stiff and stark, was about to pass again into a swoon when the lady who held her said to her:

"Courage, my child; he lives."

This enabled the girl to get a new hold upon her faculties and, throwing her arms about Orloff, she pleaded with him to live for her sake. Presently he opened his eyes and, seeing the girl in whose arms he was clasped, said faintly:

"Sonia!"

Orloff was carried from the pavilion, Sonia walking or staggering, supported by another, beside him. The two were then driven away. A heap of money lay upon the table, which neither of them seemed to remember. The proprietors of the gambling house gathered it, counted it and sent it to Orloff's hotel, where it was delivered to the landlord, who gave a receipt for it and locked it in his safe. Orloff was placed in charge of a nurse, though Sonia also attended him. Just before dawn she retired and sought sleep.

The next day Sonia went in to see the patient and found him stronger, but very gloomy.

"Return to Russia," he said. "Our wedding can never take place. I have lost all I possess."

"Oh, Peter, but you live!"

"Yes, I live. It would be better had I died."

There was a long silence between them. They knew that a marriage under the circumstances could not be. In Russia in the circle of landed gentry among whom they had lived the property settlements before marriage were indispensable.

There came a knock at the door, and the landlord entered.

"Is monsieur," he asked, "sufficiently recovered to attend to a little business?"

"Yes," was Orloff's reply. "You refer to your bill, I suppose. You must give me time."

"Not at all. Last night I receipted for 781,250 francs on monsieur's account. I do not care to keep so large an amount in my safe over another night and would be obliged if monsieur would have it removed to a bank."

"What does monsieur mean? It is known to all at Monte Carlo that he won six times at 5 to 1, the amount of his winnings being as I have stated."

"Why do you mock me?" cried Orloff, starting up.

"It may be that monsieur became unconscious after placing his stake on the table, and is not aware of the remarkable run of luck that followed. Had he won once more his winnings would have been between three and four million francs. The bank was wise not to permit another such bet."

"Great heavens! Is this true?"

"Monsieur may see the funds for himself."

"Surely, I will see for myself," said Peter. Springing from his couch and following the landlord downstairs, he stood with him before the hotel safe. The landlord swung open the door, and there in the bottom of the safe was a pile of gold pieces that filled the young man with wonder and delight.

"Take it," said the landlord. "I do not care to be responsible for so much money. A bank is a better place for it."

A fortnight from that time Orloff had removed the incumbrance he had put upon his estate, and there was a wedding at the home of his fiancee, made doubly joyful by the escape he had had from ruin. The story of his loss and gain is one of the wonderful episodes of Monte Carlo related there.

SHADOW OF THE MOON.

Probably the fastest motion that man can perceive with his eyes is that of the shadow of the moon across the earth in a solar eclipse. This rate is practically that of the moon in its orbit, which is about 2,000 miles an hour. This is roughly half a mile a second. Now, if a person were to be stationed on a mountain whence he could see for some miles he could actually watch the approach of the shadow and keep his eye on its edge. Of course the shade would cover the whole landscape for any one person.

From the testimony of many men who have witnessed the phenomenon in such circumstances it is a terrible and awe inspiring spectacle. Thus Forbes of Turin: "I confess it was the most terrifying sight I ever saw. As always happens in the case of sudden, silent, unexpected movements, the spectator confounds real and relative motion. I felt almost giddy for a moment, as though the massive building under me bowed on the side of the coming eclipse." Another view is described by Langley: "The bright cloud I saw distinctly put out like a candle. The rapidity of the shadow and the intensity produced a feeling that something material was sweeping over the earth at a speed perfectly frightful. I involuntarily listened for the rushing noise of a mighty wind."

There are, of course, many velocities greater than this that occur on the earth, which, too, are measurable, such as the speed of light, which is 186,000 miles a second, and the speed of molecules of hot gases, but they are not directly perceptible to the human vision. —Lawrence Hodges in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Bright Guide.

It was a party of visitors seeing the sights in Pittsburgh that finally entered the conservatory presented to the city by Mr. Phipps. The curator while showing them around was called away on business and left the visitors in charge of one of the clerks. They came to a beautiful statue which was admired immensely. It was of translucent marble. He pointed out the excellences of the statue, told the name of the sculptor and showed it from every viewpoint. One asked, "Alabaster, isn't it?" "No," he said, "Venus."—Argonaut.

COAST TO COAST

Four Years Experience as a Marine

BY WM. M. OLDS

It was a clear day when we left the Golden Gate, but it was rough and stormy two hour out at sea, most of the time till we reached Honolulu, the only sign of life on this trip were schools of flying fish and now and then a sea bird flying low among the waves. It was a lonesome trip I ever had.

On Thursday Jan. 14th. we were in the tropic seas where there are no cold rains or rough seas. The next morning the sunrise was to beautiful to discribe.

Before reaching Honolulu we passed between two solid bare rocks one about 100 feet across and about 400 feet high, the channel is thirty miles wide.

We anchored out side the harbor until the inspecting officers came aboard ship and while we were waiting dozens of pure white sea gulls flew around the ship and upon the calm blue sea. The native fishermen with their straw hats, bare feet, light clothing, the green mountains and the harbor in the distances made a scene to interesting to seem true in January, it seemed like a sweet dream.

These Islands are known to be the healthiest place in the world. they are ten degree cooler than Cuba or any place else in the same latitude, the sun is always shining. I never saw it rain but once when the sun was not shining. The islands are called the paradise of the Pacific, but when I saw the Phillipines, China, Japan,, Guam and Fermosa, I called these the Paradise of my cruise......

I lived in a Marine Camp called Camp Very, it was located on a very large field of sand, near the shore just outside of Honolulu, It was a beautiful place and a healthier place for a soldier could not be found anywhere in the United States service.

I left the beauty of those Islands on the U. S. army transport Sheridan on the evening of Nov. 14, 1910 with sixty four other Marines and started on my long trip to the Phillipines farther over the Pacific ocean to the west.

A large crowd was at the dock to see us off for the Phillipines and the Hawaiians brought long strings of colored flowers called Hawiian leis and are given to the people on every ship that leaves the harbor as a farewell greeting. As the ship moved out from the dock the H. I. band played "Michigan My Michigan."

EGYPT'S GREEN SUN.

A Phenomenon That Was Commented Upon by the Ancients.

The appearance of a green light at sunset was noticed and commented upon by the ancient Egyptians and more particularly so because in the clear air of Egypt the tints of sunset are peculiarly distinct.

As the sun there descends nearer and nearer to the horizon and is immensely enlarged and flaming it suddenly becomes for an instant a brilliantly green color, and immediately a series of green rays suffuses the sky in many directions, well night to the zenith. The same phenomenon appears at sunrise, but to a smaller extent. Sometimes, just as the last part of the sun's disk vanishes, its color changes from green to blue, and so also after it has disappeared the sky near the horizon often is green, while toward the zenith it is blue.

This was alluded to in Egyptian writings. Day was the emblem of life and night that of death, and the nocturnal sun, being identified with Osiris, thus rendered Osiris king of the dead. The setting sun was green; therefore Osiris, as the nocturnal deity of the dead, was painted green. The splendid coffins of the high priests of Ammon frequently depict the green sun, and the funeral deities are all colored green.

There are innumerable instances in the Egyptian relics of representations relative to death being colored green. The practice undoubtedly arose from the green tints of sunrise and sunset. The green sun disk is referred to 5,000 years ago in Egypt. This is the earliest known human record of an astronomical phenomenon.

Horse Butchers In France.

French horse butchers are obliged to display a signboard showing the kind of meat they sell and are not allowed to trade in any other sort of meat except that of mules and donkeys. They sometimes try to pass off horseflesh as that of donkey's on unwary customers, because the latter is considered to be more delicate in flavor and therefore more choice.—Ex

"Why, no. What happened?"

"And you think he was hurt in his car. Well, he wasn't. He was hurt by a tree about ten feet ahead of the car. If he'd been able to stay in the car he'd never have been hurt."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

East Indian Theaters.

Many East Indian theaters keep their performances going until 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning. These dramatic orgies are not, says the Times of India, however, due to the length of the plays, as in Chinese theaters, but to the fact that the tramcars do not begin running till 5 o'clock. As the spectators gather from distant villages and have strong objections to paying gharry hire, they expect to be entertained until the trams start.

TWO QUEER ANIMALS.

But the Hook Tail Bear Put One Over on the Sidehill Creeper.

Paul Smith, the famous Adirondack guide and story teller, once met his match. There was an Englishman, supposedly with the proverbial English sense of humor, who went to Smith's for some deer shooting. The morning after his arrival he started out with a gun alone. As he left the camp Paul told him to beware of the "side hill creepers."

"What's a side hill creeper?" asked the Englishman.

"Well," said Paul, "it's an animal that lives on the side of a hill, and as its right legs are long and its left legs short it can only run on sloping ground. They are very ferocious, and if one starts after you you must run up or down hill, as on account of its deformity it cannot catch you when you do that."

The Englishman shouldered his gun and went out. About night time he returned. The guide said to him, "Well, I see you dodged the creepers, all right."

"No, I met one," said the Englishman.

"Yes?" said Paul. "How did you get away from him?"

"I ran uphill," said the Englishman.

"You shouldn't have done that. You could make better time running downhill."

"I know it," said the Englishman, "but you see I met a hooked tail bear, and I just naturally had to run uphill."

"How's that?" asked Paul.

"Well, you know when a hooked tail bear gets started running the only way he can stop is to wrap his hooked tail around a tree. If I had run downhill he could have stopped, but when I ran uphill why every time he hooked his tail around a tree he just tumbled over backward, and so I got away."

A Settler.

"Yes," said Mr. Cumrox earnestly, "but what convinces you that the duke loves our daughter deeply and devotedly?"

"The fact," replied his wife icily, "that he is willing to accept you as a father in law."—Washington Star.

A POEM

I now am taking up my pen
To answer Robert Burns,
To forget it I've sincerely tried
But it constantly returns
Back in his day it must have seemed When'er a child was born
It was decreed by nature's law
That man was made to mourn.

But now that unjust system
That has worked this cruel wrong,
Will be displaced by justice
Which will break the slave's last thong:
That held him to the master
Who has treated him with scorn,
Through all the bygone ages
But he shall no longer mourn.

If a man be young and in his prime
And in manhood's active might,
He must be useful to his kind
Or to support he has no right.
Every man should earn his bread
Be it rice, or wheat, or corn,
By stealth he has no right to eat
And make his fellows mourn.

If we exact one penny from a man
For which service is not given,
The millenium cannot be attained
Nor an entrance into heaven.
So mortals all in every land
No matter where they're born,
Must justly deal with all the world
Lest they make their fellows mourn.

The sword is swiftly passing
And the pen takes now its place,
To emancipate from pole to pole
The entire human race.
Until this work is finished
We must strive for those unborn,
And leave for them a better world
Than that which made us mourn.

Let us not shirk our duty
But enlist for the glorious fight,
To transplant unjust systems
And usher in the right.
It is not bad men, but systems
That are clearly all outworn,
Which have made our fellow mortals
Weary laden mourn.

It is the unjust land laws
That make men drudge through life,
And desert their helpless offspring
And a care worn weeping wife
But when justice holds her sway
And injustice is spurned with scorn
We'll no longer think 'tis nature's law
That man was made to mourn.

Now in conclusion let me say
I'm enlisted for the fight;
To take all unearned values
Which will set unjust things right.
The government then can operate
And earn no man's just scorn,
And prove it was not nature's law
That made our fellows mourn.

Michael Eckart.

Deserving of Sympathy.

"I am the mother of 21 children," declared a woman at Tower Bridge police court, who was alleged to be an habitual drunkard, "and I have always made my children's clothes, mended their boots, and cut their hair." "We all sympathize with you," remarked the magistrate, Mr. Cecil Chapman.—London Daily Mail.

BURNING WOMEN ALIVE.

A Punishment That Was Abolished In England In 1790.

The horrible punishment of burning women alive seems to have existed in Saxon England, but perhaps only in the case of slaves. Under the Norman rulers any woman, bond or free, who killed her husband was burned alive, and the same punishment for this crime and also for high treason and even for coining and other minor offenses continued or arose from time to time through the second and third periods until it was abolished by act of parliament in 1790, the last actual execution of this kind having, however, taken place six years earlier.

The whipping of women for various offenses continued even later. Public whipping was not abandoned until 1817, and cases of private whipping occurred as late as 1820.

There can be no doubt, we think, that the savage human instinct of cruelty had something to do with the barbarous punishments above mentioned. As the old Roman public longed for the carnage of the circus, as the Spanish populace crowded to the auto-da-fe in the flourishing days of the inquisition, so the lower (perhaps not only the lower) strata of English nationality took delight in witnessing tortures which in all probability were devised and kept up partly for their entertainment. Judge Jeffreys in sentencing a woman to be whipped is reported to have said:

"Hangman, I charge you to pay particular attention to this lady. Scourge her till her blood runs down. It is Christmastime, a cold time for madam to strip. See that you burn her shoulders thoroughly."—Cornhill Magazine.

RURAL EGYPT.

One of Its Quaintest Spectacles Is a Native Wedding.

However modernized Cairo is or will become, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, rural Egypt remains the same today as it has been for countless generations. One of the quaintest sights out in the country is a native wedding. I was fortunate in seeing two of them, one from a train and the other while walking near the village of Heliopolis, which is the site of the ancient city of On, mentioned in the Bible.

The bride and bridegroom were completely screened from the public gaze by a canopied arrangement on the back of a camel. It looked like an immense ottoman adorned with a cover illuminated by gorgeous patterns. This camel was followed by the bridal party, all women, seated on a long train of camels; each camel supporting two women.

The great, clumsy creatures (the camels, not the women) were almost enveloped in immense rugs, on the top of which apparently a feather bed had been deposited, and on this the women squatted, giving vent every few moments to a prolonged shrill trill, which I gathered was intended for a festive song. Altogether the incongruity of the spectacle was exceedingly comical.

AMUSEMENT

"BABY MINE" KEPT AN AUDIENCE ROARING

The second appearance of "Baby Mine" at the Croswell Opera House in this city last night was as pleasing as it was the first time it came this way. A good sized audience laughed over the funny situations through two hours. They had a fine time with Alfred and Jimmy and their wives, who got into more mixups than is usually allowed in two supposedly well regulated families. The company is an excellent one and the scenery the best.—Adrian Daily Telegram, Friday January 24.

The above piece reproduced from the "Telegram" shows what Adrian people think of this big comedy which is claimed to be one of William A. Brady's best productions. The company comes here exactly the same as played Adrian and with the same people and scenery that played the Garrick theatre, in Detroit, a short time ago. They carry a special car for their scenery and effects, carrying all of their own furniture and everything used in the production.

The best of plays could not succeed unless presented by a capable company of actors. In the present instance William A. Brady (Lt'd) has provided a cast of uniform excellence in whose hands "Baby Mine" is safe for all time. J. A. Bliss rotund as of yore, and whose every appearance is the signal for a gale of laughter that lasts so long as he is on the stage, which is most of the time, continues to play the part of luckless Jimmy Jinks, who in his efforts to please everybody makes a mess out of the entire undertaking. Surely in Jimmy Jinks is found a living refutation of the asseration that nobody loves a fat man; for to see J. A. Bliss as he portrays the part is to like him, and the further he goes the more satisfying his work becomes.

Playing Zole, the harumscarum wife, is a young woman for whom a bright future can safely be predicted. Nanon Welch, according to her own admission, played her first professional part as Zole Hardy, who resorts to the adoption of a child from an orphanage as a means of coaxing her husband back home. Miss Welch brings to the character a charming personality, winsomeness, vivacity and untiring energy. Her work shows at all times a thorough understanding of the requirements, and the ability to fulfill them in a most satisfactory manner. It is an altogether pleasing portrayal.

"Baby Mine" will be at the Bradley Opera House, next Friday evening, January 31.

Do Women Want to Vote?

OF COURSE THEY DO, IF THEY ARE ALLOWED TO.

Yesterday Jan 27 was the day that votes were cast on "Gas or no Gas" for Tecumseh. An unusually large vote was cast the total being 429. 69 women registered of which number 49 voted, most gratifying. 95 per cent in favor of the franchise., 60 per cent being the number necessary to carry.

Those women who were not eligible to vote, doubtless used their persuasive power with the male portion of their families in the right direction, as almost every voter was there.

We know of one who would have liked to vote, but was not allowed as the members of the board with many a chuckle told her she was not eligible

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it." (Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed at a later date he said: "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name in reference."

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

W. R. Fox, 195 W. Washington St. Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with simular results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

MISSISSIPPI LEVEE BREAKS

Torrent 200 Feet Wide Rushing Through Crevasse at Beulah, Miss.

Vicksburg, Miss., Jan. 27.—A torrent 200 feet wide is rushing through the crevasse in Beulah levee, about 100 miles north of here, on the east bank of the Mississippi river and the water is rapidly inundatng the lowlands, destroying crops and forcing hundreds of families to the highlands.

A crevasse at the place last spring, when the river stage was considerably higher, flooded approximately 1,225 square miles. The engineers engaged on the work estimate that before the flood recedes at least 1,000 square miles of plantations and swamps will be inundated.

Fifteen hundred men, about 400 of whom are state convicts, are working day and night to "tie" the ends of the break, but despite their efforts it is slowly widening, the rushing water causing the ends of the levees to cave and crumble.

LITTLE THINGS.

The streams of small pleasures fill the lake of happiness, and the deepest wretchedness of life is the continuance of petty pains.

The Golf Caddie.

The earliest known use of the appellation "caddie," and then called "cadie," is to be found in the London Morning Penny Post, when George II. was still on the throne and the "Forty-five" was in very immediate popular remembrance. News from Scotland had it that "one Duncan Grant, a discharged soldier, who has passed in Edinburgh sometimes as a street cadie," had incurred a heavy penalty for a rather trivial swindle in a transaction over herrings. "He was to be taken from the Tolbooth and "put in the Pillory, to stand for the Space of an Hour, with half a Dozen Herrings about his Neck, and thereafter to be banished the City of Liberties for ever."

It was a rough sort of making the punishment fit the crime which some irate golfers would desire to revive for their caddies even in this more humane age.—Westminster Gazette.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called

I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and left me fat and healthy. I feel like a young girl.

If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

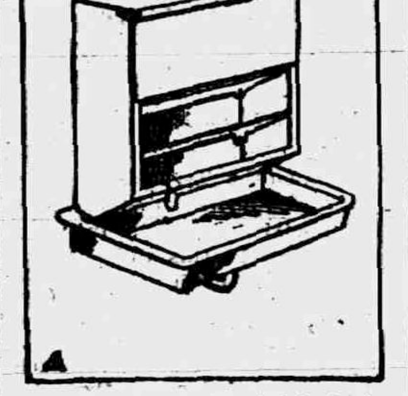
HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Cabinet Device For Spraying Hot Water on Dishes.



An effective dish draining device has been patented by a Maryland man. As designed it necessitates a separate sink and spigot, but it may be modified to use in the ordinary kitchen. A cabinet has several slanting racks of longitudinally spaced rods mounted in it. Above these is a spraying apparatus. The dishes are lined up along these racks and the water turned on from the spigot above. As it passes through the spray the water is distributed all over the dishes and drains off through the bottom of the cabinet into the sink. The advantage of this device is that scalding water can be used for draining without burning the fingers of the person drying the dishes, and, as experts know, the hotter the water the cleaner the dishes and the easier to dry.

Kitchen Helps.

Saucepans should be filled with cold water and a small lump of soda as soon as finished with.

If starched clothes become wet with rain on the line do not take them down. Allow to remain till dry, and they will retain their original stiffness.

When boiling clothes place an unpeeled lemon, cut into slices, in the boiler with the clothes to boil. This will remove all stains and make the clothes beautifully white.

To stiffen muslin dresses dissolve a tablespoonful of gum arabic in three quarts of water. Use instead of starch, dry, sprinkle and iron in the usual way.

Starch should be mixed with soapy water. This will prevent the iron from sticking and will give the linen a gloss.

Ned Bromley's Assurance

He Got Into His Own Trap, but Got Out of It

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Ned Bromley was sitting in a trolley car beguiling a long ride by looking up at the signs opposite. Ned was a good natured, devil-may-care sort of fellow, always ready to crack a joke or put himself out to do any one a favor. Lowering his eyes, he saw an elderly gentleman sitting opposite him looking at him, Ned thought, rather disapprovingly. As Ned read his thoughts they were something like this:

"The young man opposite, judging by the fashionable cut of his clothes, is passing that age when his tailor is his most intimate friend. He looks as if he would swear at the least provocation and probably gambles."

Of course, Ned made this up, but the fact remains that disapprobation was plainly marked on the gentleman's countenance. Ned, who was full of Old Nick, was minded to shock the man. Leaning forward, he said confidentially:

"I know a place where there's a small game going on. I wouldn't mind taking you around if you like."

The man gave him a withering look, turned, showing as much of his back as possible and made no reply. Ned took the rebuff good naturedly and was thinking how to follow up his shocking process without running the risk of being turned over to the police when the gentleman pushed the button, the car stopped, and he got out. When Ned next turned his glance to where the gentleman had been sitting he saw a fat wallet lying on the seat.

"That comes of no button on the hip picket," said Ned, who had once lost a pocketbook from that cause; and, taking up the wallet, he left the car and ran after the owner. Unfortunately, the man was not to be seen. The next thing to be done was to examine the contents to learn if there was any address within. Ned came upon a singular bit of information. He found a card on which was written: "This is the body of Archibald Crane, president of the —th National bank. In case of accident, illness or death telephone the bank, also my house, No. 742 Lincoln street."

"How easy it is," mused Ned, "to read character from the appearance. Any one would know that was just the kind of man to put such a notice in his pocketbook. But what's this?"

From another division of the wallet he took some bank bills folded together. There were five of them—three twenties, a fifty and a ten, in all $120. There was another roll of ones and twos, making up $7 more.

"I reckon I'll give the old gentleman a chance to worry a bit," mused Ned. "I'll telephone tomorrow at his home after he's gone to the bank or to the bank after he's gone home. Perhaps I'll get some fun out of the old crank after all."

So he pocketed his find and thought no more about it till the next morning, when he fancied the man he wanted was not at home; then after looking in a telephone directory he called up Mr. Crane's residence. A very soft feminine voice asked, "What is it?"

"Is Mr. Crane at home?"

"No; he's gone to the bank."

"Perhaps you had better call up the bank and ask if he is there."

After some questioning as to the cause of this suggestion the lady concluded to do as advised, after which she called the telephone number that Ned had given her. He was waiting and said:

"I didn't wish to scare any one, so I asked you to call up Mr. Crane to assure yourself that he is all right. I've found his body."

"Found his body! My goodness gracious!"

"Oh, you know he's all right."

"Yes."

"Well, what shall I do with his body?"

"What does all this mean? Who are you?"

"I'm Edward Bromley."

There was a pause when the voice asked where Mr. Bromley was, and he replied that he was at the University club and asked whom he had the honor of speaking with and received the information that he was speaking with Miss Hester Crane, Mr. Archibald Crane's daughter.

"Well," continued Ned, "I've found a pocketbook with about $120 and a card giving instructions what to do with Mr. Crane's body if found dead or something."

"You don't mean it?"

"I certainly do."

"I know papa is a bit peculiar, but I didn't think he would put anything like that in his pocketbook."

"I'm in a quandary about the return of the money."

"How so?"

"Well, I saw Mr. Crane sitting opposite me in a trolley car looking at me rather severely. My neck scarf didn't seem to please him or a snake ring I wore on my little finger. I thought I'd shock him and asked him if he'd like to go where a small game was going on."

A ripple of laughter came over the phone at this, then the reply, "You couldn't have done anything more calculated to turn papa against you."

"That's just it. Now, supposing he knows that I have his portmonnaie, 10 to 1 he'll think I picked his pocket."

"How can he assume that if you return everything just as you found it?"

"Oh, he wouldn't remember just how much there was in it, and he'll be sure to think he had more than he did have. You see, I wouldn't like to take any risk. To be arrested as a pickpocket would be awful, even as one whose conscience led him to deliver up the goods he had stolen."

"It is complicated. At least it appears to be so. I can readily understand your timidity in the matter."

Now, Mr. Bromley's timidity was all balderdash. He was figuring to hear that sweet voice near by and see if the face and figure were as attractive as he pictured it.

"I might give the pocketbook and its contents to you," he said, "without meeting your father; then he wouldn't recognize me for the man who sat opposite him and asked him to go to a gambling house. Do you see?"

"Yes. That would be a very good way out of it. You might send it to me."

This broke into Mr. Bromley's calculations. It occurred to him that he might as well send his find to Mr. Crane direct. But Ned's wits were sharp enough for the occasion.

"I wouldn't like," he said, "to surrender the property to any one without being sure of what I was doing. You see, I stand in a delicate position. If I knew I was delivering the goods to the owner's daughter I would feel all right about it. I wouldn't even ask a receipt."

"But you don't know me."

The matter was now getting where Ned wanted it. He availed himself of the opportunity without hesitation.

"I would trust any woman with so sweet a voice with untold wealth."

A pleased "Te-he!" came from the other end of the wire and immediately the reply, "Well, you may bring it if you like."

"When?"

"I suppose you prefer to come when papa is not at home?"

"Certainly. I wouldn't meet him for anything."

"Papa goes to the bank a little before 9 in the morning and comes home about 2:30."

"In that case I would better make the return tomorrow morning, say about 11 o'clock."

"Very well; I will be happy to—I mean I will receive it at that time. But what am I to do about the reward?"

"Oh, the reward is in permitting me, a stranger, to return the pocketbook to you in person. I am very anxious to see if your face is as charming as your voice."

"There you will certainly be disappointed. I mean—rather, I don't mean—that my voice is charming—there, you've got me all mixed up."

"Never mind; I shall have the inestimable happiness of seeing for myself."

There was more of this before the receivers were hung up, but so much in the same vein that it would become tiresome through repetition. The next morning at 11 o'clock Mr. Bromley rang the bell of 742 Lincoln street, a handsome stone front residence, and sent up his card. When the young lady came into the room he stood mute with admiration. But his eyes were anything but mute. Indeed, his gaze was such as to make the young lady lower her eyes, but it was nevertheless gratifying.

It is necessary to pass over a few months in the thread of this story, when, Mr. Bromley and Miss Crane having become avowed lovers, found it necessary to let the lady's father into the secret that she desired to marry a man whom he was likely to recognize as one who had offered to show him a small game. They put their heads together in an attempt, among other things, to discover a device to prevent the old gentleman's recognition of his would be son-in-law. The effort was a failure.

"There's only one way to meet the case," said Ned at last.

"What's that?"

"Cheek."

"What do you mean?"

"I'll declare I never met your father before in my life."

Since there was no other way out of the matter Ned arranged to call when the "body of Mr. Crane" was at home, which Ned had not done before. He carved out a new pair of whiskers, had his hair curled and put on a pair of eyeglasses. Moreover he wore as different a suit of clothes from those he had on when he first met Mr. Crane as possible. When introduced to the old gentleman the latter, looking at him scrutinizingly, said:

"Your face is familiar to me, sir."

"I hope you haven't met that fellow who looks so much like me and is always getting me into trouble," Ned broke out. "He's a stool pigeon for a gambling house."

"That's the man," replied the other. "He had the impudence to ask me to go with him to his villainous place."

"What shall I do about it? If the thing goes on much longer I won't have a shred of character left."

Miss Crane went to the window, making a great effort to repress her laughter, while her lover discussed with her father the question as to whether the law could be made available to protect the former against a man of bad character who resembled him.

Notwithstanding the success of this daring stratagem Ned afterward occasionally caught the old gentleman looking at him with an expression indicating that he wasn't quite certain but that he was the man he had met in a street car. However, Ned married Miss Crane, and there was one thing his father-in-law never suspected—that Ned was the person who had returned his lost pocketbook.

NOT READY TO DISSOLVE

Steel Trust Directors Laugh at Reports of Voluntary Dissolution.

New York, Jn. 27.—Judge E. H. Gary and other directors of the United States Steel corporation declared in the most positive terms that the managers of the company had no intention whatever of developing a plan for its voluntary dissolution.

The denials were made after it had been widely bruited about Wall street that the testimony of William E. Corey, former president of the company, had impelled the officers or directors to make terms with the administration.

TREED BY MOUNTAIN LION

Montana Lad Has Both Legs Frozen, but May Live.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 27.—For fifteen hours eleven-year-old Frank Engstrom of Georgetown, a mining camp near Anaconda, was treed by a mountain lion a few nights ago while the thermometer registered thirty-five degrees below zero. Later the little fellow was brought to Butte and two frozen legs had to be amputated in an effort to save his life.

The surgeons hope to pull him through, but the boy pleads that he would rather be dead than a cripple.

BOUND TO HAVE PEACE

England Protects Parliament from Possible Damage by Suffragettes.

London, Jan. 27.—Owing to the threats of the suffragettes as to what they will do in case the amendment of Sir Edward Grey to the franchise bill is rejected today, the police took extreme precautions to preserve order about the parliament buildings. Two thousand constables are concentrated at Westminster, and there are 100 mounted men.

There is a big crowd, drawn by hope of fun with a lot of women who have no interest in the franchise bill. If any rioting should occur the police will promptly clear parliament square.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 28.—George W. Dickinson, of Pontiac, former state railroad commissioner, who retired from that office January 15, takes entire charge of the Michigan State Agricultural society as the result of his re-election as general superintendent and appointment as general manager January 21.

Mr. Dickinson had just completed his term as state railroad commissioner, having been appointed by Governor Fred M. Warner in 1907, when the Michigan railroad commission was formed, and had charge of the physical matters coming before that body. He formerly served the state fair as superintendent of transportation and was elected as general superintendent in 1912. The new superintendent and manager of the state fair succeeds J. E. Hannon in the latter position, who resigned to accept a position with a big hydro electric power company in the west with Detroit headquarters.

"ARSON TRUST" ARREST

Head of Insurance Adjusting Firm Charged with Conspiracy.

At Chicago A. B. Frankel, the head of the public fire insurance adjusting firm at 9 South LaSalle street which bears his name, was arrested on charges of extortion and conspiracy to defraud in connection with the investigation which is being carried on by First Assistant State's Attorney Frank Johnston into the so-called "arson trust."

The warrants were sworn out in connection with the fire at the Spring City hotel in Waukesha, Wis., and an alleged attempt to extort money from Thomas H. Jones, the proprietor of the place. The latter lives in Dodgeville, Wis.

Following the arrest of Frankel, he was taken to Judge Scully's court, where a capias was issued. He was later taken to the county jail in default of $25,000 bonds.

THE PARCEL POST

System Proves Big Advantage to Small Shippers.

BOURNE MAKES A STATEMENT

Author of Law Says Half a Million Dollars Were Saved During First Fifteen Days of Its Existence—Not a Hardship to Overworked Letter Carriers Either.

Not only has the parcel post saved to the people in the first fifteen days of its existence more than $500,000, according to Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., author of the law, but it has not proved a hardship to the overworked letter carriers.

Senator Bourne announced that reports from forty-one leading cities of the country, which produce almost half of the postal revenues, showed that in the twelve working days between Jan. 1 and 15 a total of 5,094,027 outgoing parcels were dispatched at a cost of $395,286, or about 7.7 cents a parcel.

Saving in Twelve Days $547,508.

"Under the postage rates previously in force, 1 cent an ounce," said the senator, "the postage would have been an average of 18½ cents a parcel, or a total of $942,394.99, thus showing a saving to shippers of $547,508.12 on twelve days' business. It should also be remembered that the usual minimum charge of express companies is 25 cents a parcel, whereas the average charge on the parcel post packages was only 7.7 cents.

Average is 28 to the Carrier.

"It is also worthy of note that although the business was large, it was distributed through a large postal organization so that no congestion has resulted. The postoffice clerks in these forty-five cities have handled an average of only twenty-eight parcels each a day, this including both incoming and outgoing parcels. The total number of parcels delivered these cities makes an average only nine and one-third parcels carrier a day."

KILL NAZIM PASHA

Shot During a Demonstration in Constantinople.

MINISTRY FORCED TO RESIGN

War Party Furious Over the Terms of Peace Agreed to by the Ottoman Government — Mahmoud Shefket Pasha Succeeds Klamil Pasha As Grand Vizier of Turkey.

TO RECALL PEACE ENVOYS

London hears that the new Turkish cabinet has decided to recall the Ottoman peace delegates from London, according to a dispatch from Constantinople. The Turkish government is said also to have requested its ambassadors at Vienna and St. Petersburg to return to the Turkish capital.

Enver Bey, leader of the Young Turks, was appointed chief of the general staff of the Turkish army.

At Constantinople, Turkey, Nazim Pasha, the former war minister and commander of the Turkish army, was shot dead during demonstrations which proceded the resignation of the cabinet.

The ministry resigned at the behest of the war party, which was furious at the terms of peace agreed on by the government.

Enver Bey and Talaat Bey had given explicit orders that no blood should be shed but Nazim Pasha's aid de camp fired from a window of the porte at Enver Bey and his companion and they returned the fire.

Their bullets killed Nazim Pasha himself.

Ministry Forced to Resign.

The events leading to the coup d'etat are described as follows:

Talaat Bey visited Klamil Pasha, the grand vizier, in the morning and urged him to resign. Klamil refused to reply, and the cabinet council continued to discuss the draft of the reply to the powers' note.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon Dejelal Bey, a Young Turk leader, accompanied by five mounted officers, arrived at the sublime porte. At the same moment several hundred persons suddenly gathered and unfurled a flag, evidently by preconcerted arrangement.

Then Enver Bey, mounted on a white horse, appeared, accompanied by Klazim Bey, who was formerly ambassador at Washington, Halil Bey, and other staff officers. Dismounting at the doors of the porte, he asked to see the grand vizier, whereupon the gates of the porte were closed.

Klamil Pasha Gives Resignation.

Memduh Pasha, commandant of Constantinople, stood at the door and refused admission to any one except Enver Bey and Talaat Bey. They entered the council chamber and declared that the ministry must resign.

Klamil Pasha thereupon wrote his resignation and handed it to Enver, who proceeded to the palace.

To succeed Klamil Pasha, Mahmoud Shefket Pasha, formerly minister of war and commander of the constitutional army which dethroned Mahmed V. as sultan was appointed grand vizier.

A dispatch from Constantinople says Enver Bey, the new chief of the general staff of the Turkish army is at work restoring order in the city following the killing of Nazim Pasha.

The Turks are said to hope peace negotiations may be resumed under a compromise, in view of a change in their government.

The council of ministers sat to discuss the reply they will make to the note of the powers and it is believed this reply, while insisting on the retention of Adrianople by Turkey, will point to Thursday's demonstration as a real manifestation of the national will.

The associations represented were: Illinois Grain Dealers' association, Illinois Shippers' association, Illinois Grain Producers' association, St. Louis grain exchange, Peoria board of trade.

RIGID RULES FOR PICTURE THEATERS

Senator King Has Bill for Their Safety and Regulation.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 27. — Senator Francis King has introduced a bill to place all moving picture theaters under state control and subject them to uniform conditions in every city and village. The bill provides for state inspection and also for a license system that will pay practically the entire expense of inspection; in fact, would probably give the state a nice little chunk of revenue in addition.

The act goes into specifications governing theaters very minutely, all being designed to furnish absolute safety. That their enforcement would result in a lot of carpenter and other work in the theaters throughout the state is apparent.

In brief, the bill provides that in cities under 10,000 population a license fee of $10 per year shall be paid; 10,000 to 20,000 population, $35; 20,000 to 50,000, $50; 50,000 to 100,000, $75; 100,000 and over, $100.

No moving picture shows may be located on other than the main floors of buildings, and none may be operated in building that are used in part for residence, lodging or factory purposes. Rows between aisles must not have more than fourteen seats, and rows with wall ends must not have more than seven seats. There must be eighteen inches of door space for every 100 persons that can be accommodated and eighteen inches in width of aisle space for every 100 persons, but no aisle must be less than three feet in width. If balconies are used there must be a door with equivalent stairway space for every 200 persons that can find room in such balcony.

The projecting or moving cabinet must be of concrete, steel or iron, but wood may be used if wood is overlaid with abestos and asbestos with sheet iron. All apertures in the cabinet [illegible] drop covers or doors hung on the inside by easily fusible material. There are a mass of other regulations, all aiming to provide safety.

PTOMAINES NEARLY KILL

Six Persons Have Narrow Escape from Death in Jackson.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 27.—Six persons narrowly escaped death from ptomaine poisoning. The prompt arrival of a doctor probably saved their lives. David E. Berry, 111 Eaton street, purchased some beefsteak, and he, his two children, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon and Miss Veda Dixon partook of the meat at supper.

During the night they were al taken violently ill. A doctor was summoned and after a time all except Mrs. Dixon were out of danger. Mrs. Dixon's condition is serious. Mrs. Dixon is a daughter of Mr. Berry.

AGED RECLUSE IS DEAD

Niles Woman Is Reported Rich, but Wealth Cannot Be Found.

Niles, Mich., Jan. 27.—Miss Mary Cannon, eighty-two years old, who led the life of a recluse, was found lying on the floor of her home after the chief of police had forced an entrance. She was taken to a hospital, but died ten minutes later.

Miss Cannon was reputed to be wealthy, but no one knows where her wealth is. She was afraid of banks and is supposed to have hidden the money about the house or buried it in cans in the yard.

LANSING—After Governor W. N. Ferris had refused to reappoint Thomas P. White of Escanaba as a tax commissioner, Auditor General O. B. Fuller named White as inheritance taxer to suceed Robert H. Lane of Midland.

HIGHWAY TOUR IN WESTERN MICHIGAN

Plan Is to Arouse Interest in Road Improvement.

Traverse City, Mich., Jan. 27.—The Hon. Frank Hamilton, the Grand Traverse vice president in the West Michigan Good Roads association, proposes an inspection trip over the West Michigan lake shore highway for the early summer. The general features of his plan call for a careful examination of the highway from the Indiana line to the Straits of Mackinac. Two or more autos are to start northward from the state line at a prearranged time, making an important city or village in each county and in each case the original party will be joined by two or more autos filled with county road officials, supervisors and such others as are interested in the establishment of the lake shore highway.

The counties that will be crossed are Berrien, Van Buren, Allegan, Ottawa, Muskegon, Oceana, Mason, Manistee, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Antrim, Kalkaskia, Charlevoix and Emmet. At Mackinaw City a "better roads" meeting will be held and a suitable program carried out. On the return journey the representatives of the several counties will drop out as their respective counties are reached.

The road men of each county will be asked to complete as soon as possible the unfinished miles across their counties and in cases where there are two good highways it will be possible to use one going and the other returning.

WANT TO USE OLEO

Heads of State Institutions Groan at Butter Bills.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 28.—Last year the various state institutions used 383,862 pounds of butter, at a cost of $104,862. The heads of most of these institutions recommend the repeal of the law prohibiting the use of oleomargarine.

They say the oleo is superior to much of the butter they get, would save the state thousands of dollars each year.

Child Killed by Train.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 28.—While playing with her dog Irene Upton, ten years old, chased him across the Grank Trunk track while a passenger train was backing into the Bridge street depot. She was ground to death undre the wheels.

Judge John H. Grant Dead.

Manistee, Mich., Jan. 28.—Judge John H. Grant, a member of the board of regents of the University of Michigan, was found dead in bed.

LANSING — State Representative I. H. Catlin will introduce a bill to repeal the mortgage tax law and to place the taxation of mortgages on the old basis. The bill if it becomes a law will not, however, affect the mortgages taxed under the specific system, as it cannot be made retroactive, in the opinion of the attorney general, who has been consulted relative to the bill. There is a great deal of sentiment in favor of the repeal of the present law with which many state officials have found much fault.

UNITED STATES AIDS SUFFERERS IN FLOODS

Army Quartermaster Sent to Evansville District.

Captain Elliott of the United States quartermaster's department has gone to Evansville, Ind., to take charge of the flood rescue work in the lowlands of that vicinity and is expected to do much in the way of handing out food and supplies to the refugees.

General reports from the flood district are encouraging. The Ohio, Cumberland, Mississippi and Wabash rivers continue to rise at various points and the work of repairing and strengthening the levees continues unabated.

From Evansville, Ind., come more reports of rescue work and sad tales of families who have lost heavily in the flood. The lowlands in the vicinity of Evansville are still awash and the chamber of commerce of that city is doing everything in its power to relieve the suffering by giving out food and clothing.

Shawneetown, Ill., and Cairo, Ill., continue to report high water and from Cairo comes news of the serious condition of the roadbeds of the railroads that cross the lowlands. Several trains have been crossed from the schedules and it is feared that a large district will be entirely cut off.

Many families have been found marooned in their houses throughout the flood district and relief expeditions are being sent out from Evansville, Ind., Mount Vernon, Ind., and several other points to bring the flood sufferers to points of safety.

Water has flooded the country to such an extent that the Cotton Belt railroad was forced to cut out all traffice between Birds Point and Maiden, Mo.

TWO LEGISLATORS INJURED

The doctors in Chicago attending Frank J. Ryan, Illinois representative and Democratic candidate for speaker of the house, who was injured with twenty-two other persons in the wreck of the Illinois Central Daylight Special at Melvin, pronounced the legislator to be out of danger.

Mr. Ryan sustained severe and painful injuries and a broken leg.

Reports from the Provident hospital were that Mrs. Lucile Hawkins probably will die as the result of injuries she suffered in the accident.

Mrs. Hawkins was crushed under the car. Several of her ribs were broken and her spinal column injured.

Representative E. D. Shurtleff, former speaker, and Harry Woods, secretary of state-elect, suffered minor bruises.

Lovejoy, of Ann Arbor; J. F. Devoy, of Milwaukee; Clyde Leavitt, of Ottawa, Can.; William G. Howard, of Albany; William B. Piper, of East Tawas; J. H. McGillivray, of Oscoda, and Junius E. THE CHINESE JUNK

A Curious Craft It Is, With Eyes Painted on Its Masts.

SOME TOPSY TURVY METHODS

The Crew's Quarters Are Aft, Not Forward, and John Blandly Sets His Course East South and Tells You the Wind Is Blowing From West North.

The origin of the ancient old world junk, like all things Chinese, is involved in some obscurity, but its first model seems to have been a Chinese conception of some huge marine monster. The teeth which are usually shown in all the terrors of ferocity on the bow denote the mouth. Long boards running aft from the bow, both to port and to starboard, represent the awe inspiring jaws. The sails are fins, while the tail waving aloft, an appendix which all properly constituted dragons of the sea must certainly have, is denoted in the high stern. But most of these characteristics have lost much of their significance in recent years with the one exception of the eyes, which are always painted on the masts. Captain John is loath to part with them, for, as he warily exclaims:

John Chinaman, shipbuilder, when he takes a notion to build one of his junks does not bother himself much about plans and specifications. Give him the model. Then he will lay his lines off on the floor or on an open space of ground and build his ship as he goes along by the simple rule of thumb. Considering the result he has attained, he is no doubt convinced of the superiority of his method over every other. Fir, teak and pine are the woods he uses in his construction.

The seams of the hull are caulked with rattan shavings and "payed" with a cement of oil and gypsum. The whole of the hull is well tarred, while the upper works are smeared with wood oil. Then comes a final coat of paint—green, blue, white, red—in fact, any color but yellow, which must be reserved for the many flags the completed ship will carry to proclaim her nationality.

When it comes to equipments, they seem antiquated compared with the ones we employ. The windlass is an elongated, barrel shaped roller extending across the broad bow, on either side of which is arranged a series of fixed spokes bearing a strong resemblance to a wheel without a tire. From this is hung great teakwood anchors with iron bound flukes and cables of coir or bamboo rope. This ingenious contrivance is capable of being operated by either hand or foot.

In the way of sail the style depends on whether you are in north or south China. Among the northern Chinese a long mainmast carrying short lug sails is found. In the southern country the sails are generally of woven mat strips sewed into a single sheet and provided with yards at the top and bottom. The bamboo ribs crossing it serve to keep the hoops on the mast in place and enable the boatmen to haul the sail close on the wind. This mainsail is the chief dependence, though sometimes a "driver" is placed on the taffrail and a small sail near the bow. But bowsprits are not considered at all necessary by John Chinaman.

In the matter of rigging we find John quite familiar with everything he requires. Halyards, sheets and braces are used as with us. His blocks, though larger, are not as shapely and are fewer in number. Clumsy as the rudder appears, it is so contrived as to require little effort to manipulate it, for wily John has understood the principles of a balanced rudder and centerboard for centuries. The inboard end resembles just what it is intended to represent—a huge oar handle—and is so cunningly rigged with guys and whips that it makes our own stiff jointed wheel and short helm a poor alternative.

His compass card is stationary. The needle swings on its pivot and points contrarily to the south pole. With twenty-four divisions and some 2,000 minor points or degrees on this faithful guide, John insists on referring to his course as E. S. or the wind blowing from the W. N. How he would disarrange such complex compass bearings as E. by N. ¾ E. or N. W. by N. ¼ N. can be left to an imagination sufficiently vivid to embrace such a calamity.

In the arrangement of his ship John again exhibits his consistency by beginning wrong end foremost—that is, considering the matter from our viewpoint. His provisions are carried above deck and aft instead of forward and below. The crew eat and sleep near the stern. The passengers are accommodated in the forward end.

In China there is no Plimsoll mark and no government inspector ready to check off the number of passengers as they go aboard. Neither is there any instance upon such requirements as life belts, fire appliances and lifeboats. When everything is ready John starts forth on his voyage feeling safe in the happy possession of his pratique or clearance papers, whereby he is commanded to refrain from many practices. These include about everything from smuggling to the carrying of stinkpots. This pratique also commends his soul to the gods and bids him an affectionate farewell and wishes for a safe passage.—Norman W. Browne in New York Post.

It never occurs to fools that merit and good fortune are closely united.—Goethe.

Games For Children's Parties.

Do not choose an elaborate game for a children's party. You must not, for instance, have one which involves the use of a song or speech, as many of the children will not know the words and consequently will feel "out of it." A clever game of the "sit down and think" kind may be very good for grown people, but it merely bores the little ones and makes them cross and tired.

Appearances Deceptive.

"Who's the thin little man with the melancholy expression?"

"That's Hummer, the poet, who wrote the beautiful verses with the refrain, 'Life is what you make it—you can make it glad.' He suffers from chronic dyspepsia."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Good Advice

"Do you think that it is possible to remedy the most common memory fault in one lesson, as this firm advertises?"

"Surely. Don't borrow, and then you won't have to forget the persons who loan you money."—Buffalo Express.

Los Angeles

MRS FRANK ANGLEMIRE TO HER FATHER H. B. ROBERTS

The following letter received by H. Brant Roberts from his daughter Mrs. Frank Angelemire is published by request and will be found very interesting.

Los Angeles, Cal.
Jan. 18, 1913

My dear papa and sister:

Well here we are at last after one of the most delightful trips I ever had in my life. We were due at 8:30 this a. m. but were one hour late. Mr. Clark (Leon) meet us, and you cannot know how glad we were to see some one we knew here, when every one else in car 31 had friends and relatives to meet them. Leon brought us right to the Natick House where we are to stay until Monday, when we will move into our own home, rent $25.00 a month. Leon and Frank went out right after dinner house hunting and they have just returned with the news about our new house. It is a Bungalow 3737 Baldwin Ave. about twenty minutes ride from the heart of the city. Electric lights, gas, kitchen, dining room with china closet built in the wall, living room, bed room, a lovely bath with hot and cold water and a large clothes press. Best of all there are two date palms in the front yard and a park right across the street from us. Our bungalow is right on the corner and has both front and back porch. Frank says the furniture is lovely and what do you think a piano so I will have you send my music after we get located.

We are right in the heart of the city and I have seen nearly every nationality of the globe since sitting at my bed room window waiting for Frank to return so as to write you then. This is like State St. in Chicago, traffic very much congested all of the time and I never knew there were as many autos as I have seen since I came here.

I thought we would be simply exhausted after our long trip but we are all just feeling fine. Leona was so good on the cars and there was not an upper berth taken on the trip. Our porter was very pleasant fellow and gave all good service. We all slept fine in our berths which are very clean and upholstered in willow. I would never pay the difference between tourist and Pullman in order to travel Pullman, but I should never take lunch again as those Harvey eating houses along Santa Fe are simply fine and so very reasonable. A four and five course meal for .75 cts and it is elegant and every thing is served beautifully and immaculate as far as cleanliness is concerned. Say if I were home tonight I would hold the floor worse than Blanche does when she comes down from Grand Rapids.

The people in our car were very congenial and we were like one large family. There was a woman detective from New York in our car, a widow lady from Bay City Mrs Puscey that we all fell in love with, Miss Kusch the daughter of the Chi Milwaukee and St. Paul. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hill and son, a real estate man coming here to make his home, Mr. and Mrs. James Cairns of Toronto Canada, two gentlemen that Frank met and became acquainted with, a Mr. Fisher who is a miner and a railroad man and his wife and baby who came here from Kansas City. They live at Glendale, but I do not remember their names.

The rainy season is now on here but it was beautiful when we reached here this a. m. It was rather chilly at San Barnideno when we had breakfast there this a. m. but it is right at the foot of the San Bardidena Mts. Oh the mountains are grand! I am awed by by them. I can never see enough of them. If I can just get up into them they have excursions into them at very reasonable prices.

6:00 p. m. We are going to supper now so will finish when I come up and I will tell you what we have for supper for 25 cts. 6:30 Back again and so well filled I feel stuffy. We had soup, baked potatoes, beef steak (one order enough for two) sour krout, warm home made biscuit, (bread) coffee, and ice cream and cake.

We passed by the orange and lemon groves. They are loaded with fruit and of course some of the groves are entirely killed by the frosts and some not touched at all. The news papers reports have been greatly exagerated. We passed by acres and acres of grape vineyards also. You would think to look at the trimmed vineyards that it was just a nursery. The trimmers were at work as we passed along. They cut off all the vines and there is nothing but a little bush about a foot high left. This spring the new shoots start and they are the ones that bear the fruit. Those old branches that they trim off will not bear.

The grape season starts in July and lasts until November. The pepper trees are beautiful and we saw them from Pasadena into Los Angeles although the date palms are my favorites. I will get cards as soon as I can find my way about, and send them so that you may see what they are like, I think the most beautiful ever. You know they bear dates too, when you have two together, one will not bear alone. The encaliptico tree of course is the tree as that grows to the desired size in eight years then they cut them back and they grow again in five years. The lumber is very much like mahogany when polished and is the most used of any here. Orange farmers plant large groves of them around their orchards to be used as a wind brake and a protection against frosts. We saw most of this in Pasadena. It is a beautiful bungalow you ever saw in your life. Of course the trees being so green make it look more beautiful, and shrubs, you could certainly indulge your taste here in that line papa.

We are going to the beach tomorrow so in my next letter, I will tell you about that. You can address any mail to 3737 Baldwin Ave. as we will be there for the present. I am so anxious to get into my trunks to see if every thing carried O. K. I will also tell you more about the bungalow in my next letter.

This Hotel has 500 rooms with a restaurant to one side. I do not think the street traffic will annoy me in the least tonight. I am going to retire for the night. Hope to hear from you in a few days. Worlds of love, hugs and kisses to you both. I am as ever your loving daughter and sister,

Bertha.

BY YOUR FINGER TIPS ARE YOU KNOWN

Identification by the finger tips is the new system adopted by several banks in Toledo. This plan is for the benefit of those who cannot write. In place of "John Doe (x) his mark" or for those whose penmanship may be identical with someone else who possibly learned from the same copy book.

The paraphernalia for this system was supplied by John F. Rees of Rochester, N. Y. and is identical with that used by the police department in identifying criminals.

The fingerprint system was adopted this week by the National Bank of Commerce and the Security Savings Bank of Toledo with registered simple signatures will be prints of the first three fingers of the right hand. By these fingertip signatures kept on record by banks it is believed that doubtful checks may be instantly proven valid or worthless by comparing the impressions.

Out of $4,000,000,000 only two simular impressions have been discovered so far. The Chinese were the first to inaugerate the fingerprint system and have used it for ages.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville Mills Celebrate 50th Anniversary

WEDNESDAY JAN. 29

Wednesday Jan. 29, 1913 between forty and fifty of the old neighbors and friends celebrated the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Granville Mills at their pleasant home in Macon. Mr. and Mrs. Mills have kept themselves in touch with the times and are never more happy than when visiting with their friends and we know of no couple who could better enjoy life, as the word "old" has never touched them as yet. Mr. Mills driving his auto and Mrs. Mills interested in the up to date fads of Angora cats and moving picture shows etc.

A most sumptious five course dinner was served. The high esteem in which the couple are held was shown by the gifts that were given them among which was a beautiful china cabinet, a gold clock, salad spoons and two lovely boquets of flowers in handsome vases. Gatherings of this kind bring so much pleasure both to the guests and the host and hostess. May time deal so gently and kindly with them both that they may have many more happy meetings with these friends.

The surprise was complete and Miss Florence was quite overcome with these tokens of friendship. A musical treat was given, Miss Lola Brown giving several exquisite piano selections and Miss Ruth Kimball of Clinton gave four most charming vocal solo's. A most delicious three course supper was served later and the meeting was pronounced one of the most delightful of the season.

SUCH IS FAME

It is said that the estate of Will Carleton, Michigan's own poet, is valued at only $5000. There are a number of manuscripts still to be published. Surely he did not write for gains, but because he had the love of the work in his heart. His estate was left to a nephew, Norman F. Goodrich of Brooklyn, and his will was made just the day before his death, which occurred Dec. 18, 1912.

Woodrow Wilson's Speeches on Business and Government

Governor Wilson has always possessed, in very rare and enviable measure, the gifts of public speech. He made a number of excellent speeches during the campaign. But it may be said with some assurance that he has never spoken with such wisdom and power as in a series of addresses since his election and his return from the month of vacation in Bermuda. Three speeches are so notable, in their expositions of the relations between business and government in the United States, that they ought to be put in some form which would make them available for careful study. The first of these, early in December, was a speech before the Southern Society in New York. The second was delivered in the city where he was born, Staunton, Va., on his fifty-six birthday, December 28. The third was a speech before the Commercial Club at Chicago, on January 11. The condensed reports have wholly failed to do justice to these remarkable addresses. In the case, for instance of the Chicago speech, the New York newspapers printed a meager column or so of telegraph extracts, while the Chicago Tribune gave six columns to the unabridged speech. These discourses are in perfect temper, and cannot be said to contain any attacks upon the so-called "captains of industry." But they show with a wealth of convincing analysis, what economic freedom really means in point of principle.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for February.

Not Yet.

A bard who makes "fine" rhyme with "mind" has won a prize in a "poetical" contest. Nevertheless, we are not yet convinced that "poetical" contests are the most ridiculous things in the world.

Return Engagement of

GRAUSTARK

The management of the Bradley Opera House takes pleasure in announcing a return engagement of "Graustark" for Thursday February, 6. The great success scored by Graustark when presented here last season should induce theatre goers to fortify themselves for its coming engagement by securing reserved seats in advance. The seat sale opens Tuesday morning at Hay's Bakery.

The same standard of excellence applies to "Graustark" this season at last and the management wishes to assure his patrons that the company appearing here is Baker & Castle's eastern company and is the same one which played at the Lyceum theatre, Toledo, a few weeks ago.

Scenically "Graustark" is the most ambitious offering of a romantic nature now on tour. Especially telling is the first act, showing the Hotel Regengetz at Edelweiss, Graustark, in which the electrical effects are unusually well arranged, while the throne room and bed chamber of the princess are in keeping with the costuming and general atmosphere of the play.

JOHN R. FOWLER

For a number of years Mr. Fowler has been in very poor health, but until the last few months has been able to be out among his friends. He served in the Civil War, and was a member of Beers Post G. A. R. Three children survive him, Mrs Orr of Tecumseh, Mrs. Harry Gridley of Adrian and Dr. Walter Fowler of Kalamazoo, and three grandchildren, Ralph Orr of Arizona, and Josephine and Seymour of Tecumseh. The funeral was held from the home Thursday afternoon, Rev. Whitney officiating. The G. A. R. had charge of the closing services, paying their last token of respect to their brother and friend.

Would you pay 10c per week for a Power Washer?

A White Lily Power Washer is guaranteed for 5 years. They sell for $25.00 which makes the weekly cost less than 10c. Can you afford to be without one.

A LILY WHITE POWER WASHER will last, with slight repairs twenty years. If a man, for an expenditure of approximately $25, could take a big kink out of his work for twenty years, how long would he let the kink stay? Let the hod-carrier's wife ask him how long he would carry the hod if he could buy an engine for $25 that would carry the hod for him. Ask any man if he would give $25 to have one of the worst tasks done for half of a working life-time. All men would give the same answer. A man would stop at nothing short of safe-blowing to get the money.

As a matter of fact, men have machinery to do all kinds of work; and if they had to do the washing the first machine they would buy would be a WHITE LILY POWER WASHING MACHINE.

The WHITE LILY POWER WASHING MACHINE is constructed of the very best materials throughout, and is absolutely guaranteed for five years

One of the best features of the WHITE LILY POWER WASHER is the fact that the wringer and washer will operate at the same time, and while one tub full is being washed, another can be rinsed, blued and rung out, and hung on the line.

FACT

Local Evidence

Evidence that can be verified
Fact is what we want
Opinion is not enough
Opinions differ.
Here's a Tecumseh fact
You can test it.

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it." (Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed at a later date he said: "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name in reference."

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

W. R. Fox, 195 W. Washington St Noblesville, Ind., says: "After suffering many months with kidney trouble after trying other remedies and prescriptions, I purchased a box of Foley Kidney Pills which not only did me more good than any other remedies I ever used, but have positively set my kidneys right. Other members of my family have used them with similar results." Take at the first sign of kidney trouble. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Don't sneer at the Kansas City woman who paid fifty dollars for a husband. Women have paid that much for bulldogs that couldn't be taught to roll over in the presence of guests.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

DETROIT — After making charges that the Western Union Telegraph company failed to deliver to him telegraphic "tips" from his father that officers were looking for him and warning him to flee, John Worley of Chatham County, La., who was arrested here about a year ago on a homicide charge, has brought suit for $1,000 damages against the telegraph company. The suit was brought in Alabama, was disclosed here by the receipt of requests for evidence to be taken here. Worley and a companion were charged with killing a negro to get his automobile.

Deadlock Break in Sight.

A break in the legislative deadlock at Springfield is looked for very soon by Governor-elect Dunne. Mr. Rapp whom he has indicated would be an acceptable speaker, probably will be chosen.

BATTLE CREEK—While he was on his way home from school, Melvin, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Binder, fell in front of a Grand Trunk train. KALAMAZOO—To teach tuberculosis patients and care properly for them the Kalamazoo anti-tuberculosis society has hired a nurse who will spend her time in caring for white plague victims in this city. She will instruct afflicted ones how to fight the disease, and will care for them when necessary.

PORT HURON—Two big railroad freight cars were derailed, a baggage coach was caved in and the cab covering of an engine was demolished when passenger train No. 6 of the Grand Trunk railway sideswiped a freight train in the local yards. No one was injured.

LANSING—After being given fair trial in chapel, a student of Wells Hall was given forty hours to leave the campus when found guilty of having gone to President Snyder to relate certain things that resulted in the expulsion from the school of two students.

FLINT—Word has just been received here that Percy Bartlett, who jumped a $200 bail some months ago while waiting trial on a statutory charge, has been sentenced in London, Ont., to eighteen months for forging two checks.

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * *." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

MRS. MURREN.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes MRS. G. M. MURREN, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

JUDGING A SINGER.

A Case Where Prosaic Fact Jarred Romantic Fancy.

"While we were stuck on a mud bank," writes the author of "Panama," "one of the deckhands, who looked like an Italian, was enlivening his job of stitching a patch on a pair of overalls by singing the duke's song from 'Rigoletto.' And he sang it well. He had a rich baritone. His voice evidently had not been trained, but he sang true. Sitting there on a packing case, beating time against it with his bare heels, he threw into his singing a large measure of the airy nonchalance, the very spirit of the song, that is so often lacking in the performance of professionals.

"'Now, listen to that!' the captain said. 'That's the real Latin for you. Music born in him. I don't suppose he can read or write. But once, when he was a little shaver back in Italy, his father took him to the opera in Naples, and he heard some great artist sing that, and he remembers it still—sings it down here in the jungle, without any accompaniment but his heels, a lot better than an English or an American university man could sing it with an orchestra.'

"'Let's get him to tell us about it,' I suggested. The captain called him up and asked him where he was born. 'New York,' he said. 'Mulberry street?' I asked. 'Sure.' 'Where did you learn that song?' 'Oh, that? That's a Caruso song. I learned it out of a phonograph!'"

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Its Two Great Archibshops and Its Two Legislative Bodies.

The highest office in the Church of England is held by the archbishop of Canterbury, officially known as primate of all England in distinction from the archbishop of York, who is simply primate of England. The jurisdiction of the latter extends over the province or county of York, which includes ten dioceses in that part of England from the Humber to the Dee and embraces the Isle of Man as well.

The rest of England is under the jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury. That dignitary, however, as primate of all England, is supposed to possess a certain authority over the church in the whole country. He takes precedence on all public occasions not only of the archbishop of York, but of all the nobility save the immediate members of the royal family. He crowns the king, but the queen is crowned by the archbishop of York.

The church has two legislative bodies called convocations, which attend to ecclesiastical matters. Each convocation, that of York and that of Canterbury, contains two houses. The upper house is composed of bishops and other dignitaries, and the lower house is made up of deans, archdeacons and delegates who are elected whenever a new parliament is chosen.—Harper's Weekly.

The Limb and the Law.

John Moran was summoned to the police court for committing a breach of the peace, but when his name was called he did not appear. A friend attended, however, and stated that Moran could not come, having broken his leg. The magistrate, being somewhat suspicious, sent a policeman to Moran's home to inquire, and the constable found Moran seated at the window, apparently in good health. "Have you broken your leg?" asked the policeman "I have," replied Moran. "How?" "With a hammer." "Let me see the leg!" "It's out in the woodshed. Go and look at it," said Moran. The policeman found a wooden leg in the woodshed, mended it and then took Moran to the court.—London Globe.

Constantinople.

The Turks first captured Constantinople May 29, 1453. At that time the city was the sole remnant of the great eastern empire of the Romans. Before 1100 the Turks had possession of the once Roman territory in Asia and ruled as far as the straits before the city of Constantinople. The first sultan to cross over into Europe was Amurath I., who occupied Adrianople in 1300. During the ensuing ninety years the Turks overran southeastern Europe and eventually overcame the desperate resistance of the Greeks and Constantinople fell.

THE PERFECT GIRL.

She Is Miss Elsie Scheel, Student at Cornell.

The most nearly perfect physical specimen of womanhood just now is Miss Elsie Scheel, a student in the college of horticulture at Cornell university. According to Dr. Esther Parker, medical examiner of the 400 coeds in the university, Miss Scheel is not only a young woman of great strength, but in her physical makeup there is not a single defect.

Miss Scheel, who is a light haired, blue eyed girl whose very presence bespeaks perfect health, is twenty-four years old, weighs 171 pounds and is five feet seven inches tall. Her normal chest measurement is 34.6 inches, waist 30.3 inches, hips 40.4 inches. She is very fond of outdoor sports and walking. Her hobby is motoring, her favorite sport basketball, and she is an ardent suffragette. She is much interested in horticulture, but if she were a man she would study mechanical engineering, as she likes to work about an automobile.

She eats but three meals in two days and almost always goes without breakfast. She does not believe in eating mechanically. Her favorite food is beefsteak. She doesn't care about delicacies and has no liking for candy. She has never taken a drink of tea or coffee in her life and keeps regular hours. She says she has never been ill and doesn't know what fear is. Girls would be happier if they got over the fear of things, she says.

Spanish Women's Hands.

The hands of a Spanish woman have a classic beauty, and their movements are incomparable. Such hands cannot be described; they can only be admired. When they manipulate a fan or roll a cigarette, when they raise a skirt or arrange a mantilla, it is always done with infinite grace. A Spanish woman alone knows how to use her hands as they truly should be used.—New York Sun.

INGENIOUS PRISONERS.

They Won a Pardon For Their Daring Attempt to Escape.

Among the prisoners in the French convict settlement of New Caledonia were two marine engineers who not long ago received a pardon—strange as it may seem—for making a daring and ingenious attempt to escape.

Living together in the same hut these men were engaged for years in digging a secret tunnel from their hut to the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a chamber in which, with pieces of driftwood and little bits of steel and iron smuggled into the hut, they fashioned a boat, the metal being at first used to make tools and afterward to form bolts and rivets.

Then with infinite pains they built an engine to propel the boat, and after laboring mightily for seven years they completed their task.

Everything was ready except the provisioning of the vessel, when they were betrayed by a fellow convict to whom they had confided their plan. But so impressed was the French commandant by their marvelous energy, skill and patience that he managed after a year to obtain a pardon for them.—Pearson's Weekly.

Woman's World

Miss Rogers Only Woman Cartoonist.

MISS LOU ROGERS.

A signature rather new in the cartoon world is that of "Lou Rogers." When this name first began to appear in the corner of breezy, up to the minute cartoons seen in newspapers and magazines the public, and particularly that part of it composed of brothers of the caricaturist cult, began to wonder who this man Rogers was.

Great was their amazement when the truth leaked out that a woman was the power behind the pen—a tiny little woman at that, at least in physical proportions, but with a brain stuffed full of original ideas that any arrived cartoonist might envy.

And the wonder was heightened when it became known that this young woman up to a few years before her work appeared had spent most of her life in a Maine lumber camp, where her father was employed. The force and meaning of a cartoon had never been explained to Miss Rogers. To the lumberman they were merely funny pictures caricaturing a subject or situation, but the "girl of the Limberlost" sensed them and determined to make her impressions of current events known to the world through the cartoon medium.

How to get enough technical art knowledge to reproduce these ideas on paper was the problem.

That this training has been gained one has only to see the work now being accomplished by this plucky girl.

Miss Rogers is an ardent suffragist, and many of her best cartoons are to be found in magazines published by the cause.

MARRIAGE AS IT IS TODAY.

Women Too Busy With Interests Outside the Home.

Since all time the happiness that attends a marriage has been uncertain. Men and women expect so much and often give so little. Disappointment is all too common, for the average young individual expects perfection and finds poor human nature.

"No man is a hero to his valet," runs the bitter old French proverb. It is perhaps as hard to be a hero in the eyes of the woman a man has married five years after marriage. Familiarity breeds contempt. It is hard to laugh not once, but many times, at the same jest, at the same old story as our mothers did. In the present day that is not even attempted.

Most women and a great many men only try to please before, not after, marriage, and so marriage is not as happy as it used to be.

Marriage formerly among women was looked upon as a profession. Now it is only an incident, and an incident that need not continue unless it means sugar and spice and all that's nice to the woman, for her home is often the last place where a wife is to be found.

The modern woman is often so busy that she cannot live at home. She must sell roses for hospitals, organize relief for strikers, slum among the destitute and leave her husband and children to look out for themselves.

This is not quite for the happiness of the world, because the right center of a woman's life is her home, and when that is vacant the cupboard of the affections becomes bare. Remember, after all is said and done, it is the man who works for the woman. It is he that toils for the bower and for the comforts of his wife. It is therefore not only foolish, but not fair, if, when he returns home, the bower is always empty.

In Full Charge of Lighthouse.

The only woman in the United States in full charge of a seacoast lighthouse is Mrs. E. A. Fish of Point Pinos, near Pacific Grove, Cal., who has received a letter of commendation for her twenty years' faithful service from the chief of the lighthouse service, together with a medal bearing the inscription "U. S. L. S." and "Efficiency." She has been in charge of the Point Pinos light since the death in 1892 of her husband, who was head of the department of history and physiology in the University of California.

BATTLE CREEK—With his aged father as his attorney and an uncle, also a prominent attorney, as his bondsman, Leslie Powers, son of James M. Powers, was admitted to bail of $1,000 when arraigned on a charge of burglary. With Martin Madin and Jay Davis he is charged with breaking into a billiard room and stealing $35.

Unfeeling.

"My husband is a brute," said the excitable woman.

"Have you been scolding him?"

"Of course I have."

"Ah, I supposed he talked back and used harsh language."

"Worse than that! He yawned!"

Misled.

Mrs. Gadsby—I'll get even with Mrs. Gabble. Mrs. Glibby—What has she done to you? Mrs. Gadsby—She told me that Mrs. Guffy wasn't at home, so I hurried over to make a call on her, and she was at home after all.—Exchange.

AMBASSADORS IN HOPE OF PEACE

Think Negotiations May Yet Be Resumed.

TURKS ASK PEACE WITH DIGNITY

Ottomans Claim to Have Made Many Sacrifices in Order to Secure Settlement, but Will Not Accept Terms Too Humiliating or That May Produce Internal Dissensions.

London, Feb. 3.—The ambassadors of the powers met and later notified their respective governments that the sense of the meeting was that the Turkish reply to the powers' note afforded a possible basis for resuming peace negotiations. They suggested bringing this view to the attention of Bulgaria, but any attempt by the powers toward a reconciliation of the belligerents is hampered by the fact that only the day remains before the armistice ends.

The Turkish delegates have received instructions from their government to renew the declaration to the representatives of the powers and to the British foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, that Turkey desires peace and has made great sacrifices to attain this object, as well as to show deference to the powers' wishes, but cannot be expected to accept terms wounding her dignity and causing internal disorders.

Republicanism in Turkey.

A tendency toward ultra-republican ideas is developing in the military party in Constantinople, according to a dispatch from the Turkish capital. The Ottoman government is said to show an inclination to make concessions to this faction.

A last attempt to prevent a resumption of war in the Balkan peninsula is being made by the representatives of the powers at Constantinople and Sofia, according to information received by the ambassadors.

In the meanwhile everything has been made ready for a renewal of hostilities. The members of the Bulgarian peace delegation have received communications from the front in which General Savoff asserts that the army surrounding Adrianople is one of the most efficient ever gathered together. He asserts that every detail for the storming and capture of the city has been carefully prepared.

Commends Spirit of Rivalry.

The general commends the spirit of loyal rivalry between the Servian and Bulgarian troops, who in almost equal numbers invest the fortress. Bets are freely offered among the besiegers, he says, as to which nationality will be the first to enter Adrianople and plant on its walls the victorious flag of the allies.

It is asserted here that the Montenegrins and the Greeks have received assurances that Russia and France will support their retention of Scutari and Janina if they succeed in capturing them while the Bulgarians are taking Adrianople.

King Nicholas of Montenegro on the one side, and Crown Prince Constantine of Greece on the other, declare that they will take the fotresses by storm or lose their lives in the attempt.

Should any fresh proposition to prevent renewal of war give promise of success the allies will now put as a condition not only the cession of Adrianople and the Aegean Islands, but also the surrender of Scutari and Janina to Montenegro and Greece.

President Ryan Is Released.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Iron Workers' union, and convicted dynamiter, has been released from the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan. Bond in the sum of $70,000 for the labor chief's release, pending the adjudication of his appeal from the trial court, was approved by Judge Baker, presiding in the United States circuit court of appeals.

ROBERT WEBB

Bandit and Murderer Suspected of Bold Chicago Train Robbery.

$89,000 IS THE LOOT OF LONE TRAIN ROBBER

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Eighty-nine thousand dollars was obtained by the bandit who held up and robbed the "Stockyards Special" Friday night within two blocks of the loop.

Figures given to the police for the first time by Pinkerton operatives fixed this sum as the amount of the train robber's booty, placing the crime among the most notable robberies ever called to the attention of the Chicago police.

In all, the bandit got $9,000 in cash and $80,000 in checks, the operatives told Lieutenant Michael Gallery of the North Desplaines street station. Most of the cash and checks were lost by firms at the stockyards, whose receipts were being transmitted to downtown offices or banks.

The police were told to make a special search for Robert "Reddy" Webb, the notorious auto bandit who shot and killed Detective Peter Hart a short time ago, and Frank "Trilby" Thompson, the bandit convict, who recently escaped from Joliet penitentiary. The descriptions of the bandit given by the trainmen in some particulars tally with those of the two crooks.

SINGLE TERM FOR PRESIDENT

Senate Passes Bill Making Term Six Years Instead of Four.

Washington, Feb. 3.—By a vote of 47 to 23—one more than the necessary two-thirds—the senate adopted the resolution for an amendment to the constitution providing for a single six-year presidential term. Following is the text of the resolution as adopted:

The executive power shall be vested in a president of the United States of America. The term of office of president shall be six years, and no person who has held the office by election or discharged its powers or duties or acted as president under the constitution and laws made in pursuance thereof, shall be eligible to again hold the office by election.

WATER FRONT OF SAVANNAH BURNS

Wharves and Storage Warehouses Are Consumed.

LOSS MAY REACH $1,500,000

Yamacraw Section, Densely Populated and Composed Almost Exclusively of Wooden Structures, Is Saved by Firemen, as Is Newer Part of City—No Fatalities Are Reported.

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 3.—Practically a half-mile of the most valuable portion of Savannah's water front was raked by fire that did probably a million and a half dollars' worth of damage, and for several hours threatened the city with the most serious conflagration it has experienced in many years. The magnificent wharves of the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation company's warehouses, filled with freight just brought into port by steamers from Baltimore and Philadelphia, were quickly turned into a ruined mass by the flames. Large storage warehouses filled with many articles of value were wiped out by the fire in a short time.

Losses Are Heavy.

The heaviest losers are the Ocean Steamship company, which owned the docks under lease to the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation company, the American Steel Wire company, which had an immense storage warehouse filled with its products intended for distribution to many points in the south, the Conlin Tin Plate company, which also has a distributing point here, and the Crane company, large dealers in plumbing supplies, the Atlantic Coast Line railroad office, with valuable records was also destroyed. The Planters' rice mill, a few blocks from the center of the conflagration, went up in smoke with the river front property. The burned area extends from a point just west of West Broad street to the canal which divides the docks of the Ocean Steamship company from those of the Merchants' and Miners.'

Yamacraw Section Saved.

A block away from the center of the fire lies the section known as Yamacraw, a densely populated part of the city made up largely of wooden houses. It was realized early that if the fire reached this section, the loss would run much greater than it did, and the efforts of the firemen were therefore directed largely to saving this section and keeping the flames from spreading eastward toward the newer portion of the city. In this the firemen were successful.

There were some minor casualties during the fire, but no fatalities.

PENSION AGENCIES GONE

Hereafter Veterans Will Be Paid by Check from Washington.

Washington, Feb. 3.—When Dr. A. H. Thompson, a long time employe of the pension bureau, took the oath of office today as disbursing officer the pension agencies that had existed for years passed out.

Hereafter all pensions sent to veterans will be forwarded from Washington by check. Eighteen agencies are abolished under the consolidation reform and their clerical forces have been established here. The reform was provided for in the last pension appropriation bill.

Girl Is Acquitted of Arson.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 3.—Barbara Gladys Arnold, the sixteen-year-old nurse girl, was acquitted of the charge of having attempted to set fire to the Windemere hotel.

STUDENTS PLOT TO STAMPEDE PARADE

Washington, Feb. 3.—Scampering rats and mice are counted on by college students to stampede the suffragist parade on March 3, and the unusual demand for rodents was explained when the plot, that has spread through virtually every college in the capital, was learned.

The collegians intend, it has developed, to post their forces along the length of Pennsylvania avenue and, at a prearranged signal, dash into the marching line with handbags or parcels containing mice, shaking them out in the street. They anticipate the greatest display of hosiery and lingerie ever seen.

When the plot was uncovered the suffragist leaders were dismayed. Appeal to the police has been made and Commissioner Rudolph has promised protection. The police, however, cannot make arrests until after the mice have been liberated, and the women fail to see that arrests will remedy the situation.

"It's just perfectly horrid," said a blonde suffragist at national headquarters today, shuddering at the prospect. "Of course, I'm not frightened, but there are so many timid women. And, besides, a mouse is a mouse."

Flourish of Knife Used in Assault Frightens Witness Away.

Elwood, Ind., Feb. 3. — Frightened when his attorney picked up the large shearing knife with which the defendant had been struck, and flourishing this before the jury in an effort to show how it had been used, Stelos Venos, a Greek who was appearing against Nathan Robbins, arrested on charges of assault with attempt to kill, dashed from the city court room and has not yet been found.

EXPLORER COMES TO SEE CHICAGO

Captain Amundsen Again Discovers Windy City.

BLUBBER AND RAW FISH FEASTS

Discoverer of North Magnetic Pole, Northwest Passage and South Pole Is Being Gorgeously Entertained by Western Scientists and Geographers While on Lecture Tour.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Captain Roald Amundsen, having discovered the magnetic pole, the Northwest passage and the south pole, has now discovered Chicago and been welcomed by the natives with appropriate tribal ceremonies.

Captain Amundsen, who is making a lecturing tour of the United States and collecting gold medals that have been struck in his honor, sledged into town Sunday at noon and made his headquarters at a local igloo. There was a blubber luncheon at a club as a propitiary offering by Professor Henry J. Cox, chief medicine man of the weather bureau. Later the Blackstone hotel igloo was lighted up in the explorer's honor and the Geographic Society of Chicago performed a dinner ceremony and talked about the south pole, St. Louis and other distant lands.

Explores Union League Menu.

Today, at the Union League igloo, Oscar H. Haugan, Norwegian consul, assisted the distinguished one in an exploration of the menu card and this evening there will be more blubber and raw fish at the Congress hotel by the Chicago Norske Klub.

Monday evening at the Orchestra Hall igloo, Captain Amundsen will lecture on the "Discovery of the South Pole," with colored slides and motion pictures. The crowning ceremony of the Chicago exploration will be the presentation of the "Society medal" by Henry Chandler Cowles, president of the Geographical Society of Chicago.

Will Be Second Medal.

Captain Amundsen is the first to receive this medal, the second struck for the society. The "Helen Culver Gold Medal" was presented to him in 1907 for his discovery of the Northwest passage and the magnetic pole. Lieutenant Shackleton, Lieutenant Peary, Professor Chamberlain and Sir John Murray have also received this honor. With the discovery of the south pole a second medal became necessary.

After the lecture ceremony and tribal gathering Monday night there will be a reception in the foyer of Orchestra Hall igloo and a second reception following at a local club.

PANIC IN PICTURE THEATER

Two Women Killed and Over Twenty Hurt in New York House

New York, Feb. 3.—Two women were killed and more than a score of men, women and children were badly hurt in a panic at the Houston Street Hippodrome, a moving picture concern, at 113 East Houston street. A blind, unreasoning panic at the shout of "Fire" swept an east side audience of 800 out into the entrance way to the showhouse where they clutched and tore and trampled upon each other.

The fire itself, the quick flash of a moving picture film, was out in three minutes. The operator himself had smothered the blaze that was the cause of the death of two before the firemen could fight their way through the terrorized crowd to his assistance.

INAUGURAL PARADE PLANS ANNOUNCED

There Will Be Eight Divisions in Procession.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The organization of the inaugural parade was announced here by Major General Leonard Wood, the grand marshal, in a preliminary report. There will be eight grand divisions, each in charge of an army officer as division commander.

The first division will be made up of the regular military and naval forces, commanded by Major General W. W. Wotherspoon. In this division will be the cadets from West Point and the Annapolis midshipmen. The militia organizations from the states will form the second division, in which will be included the various military schools. A battalion from Culver Military academy of Indiana will form the personal escort of Vice President-Elect Thomas R. Marshall.

The various civic organizations will be in the fourth division, which also will contain most of the Democratic organizations, of which many will be present.

The make up of the remainder of the division has not yet been determined, but one of them will contain the large number of Princeton students who will escort the president elect from his home to the capital on March 3. In this same division probably also will be men who were members of Governor Wilson's class at Princeton, and who are to be in Washington on the evening of March 3 for the Princeton smoker. It is said nearly 150 graduates of the class of '79, Governor Wilson's class, will b present.

UNCLE NOAH'S FREEDOM

A Lincoln Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Huccome yoh ain't said nuthin to ole marse about it?" demanded Aunt Hessa as she tossed a smoking section of hoecake on to her husband's plate.

Uncle Noah sighed and shook his white, woolly head. "I dunno, Hessa. Somehow I can't git de right inspiration to 'proach de kunnel on dat subject."

"Den I s'pecs I's got to go alone. Dis norf is a col' place in winter, I's been hearin', an' it'll be mighty lonesome for dis nigger woman widout her husband 'along wid her. I'll ketch de brownkitis er somethin' er nuther an' die! Do yoh reckon dey buries de dead nigger folkses up dere, Noah?" Hessa's voice ended in a plaintive moan.

Noah shivered. "Of co'se dey buries everybody ... only what's de use of goin' if yoh's so suah yoh'll die? What's de matter wid Virginny fo' awhile?"

The old man almost ducked under the table at the flaming wrath in Hessa's eyes. She pointed a scornful finger at him.

"I knowed it—I knowed it! Yoh'd ruther stay heah in slavery den to go norf an' be free an' earn sights of munney an' some day be ridin' in yoh own kerridge. Dey's big wages foh black folkses up dere, an' I'm goin alone tomorrer ef yoh's too chicken livered to come erlong too!"

"I'd like to go mightily, Hess, only I dunno whut de kunnel an' ole miss will do widout us," protested Noah weakly. "Now, de kunnel has only one arm left"—

"Shucks!" exploded Aunt Hessa impatiently, and forthwith she proceeded to convince her wavering husband that, although they had both been born and raised on Colonel Partidge's plantation and had lived happily all through the years of a kind master's supervision, now that President Lincoln had proclaimed that all slaves should be emancipated on and after the 1st day of January, 1863, it was their bounden duty to take advantage of the liberty that had come to them and hasten northward to the land of plenty of money.

All the other slaves on the Partidge plantation had run away during the colonel's absence on the battlefield. Only Uncle Noah, the family butler and Hessa, the cook, had remained faithful. But relatives who were preparing to take advantage of their newly acquired freedom were working upon Hessa's feelings.

* * * * * * * *

Colonel Partidge and his wife sat in the small study adjoining the sitting room. It was a warmer room and more easily heated by the pine logs in the wide fireplace. Outside it was crisp and cold, with a light fall of snow on the ground. Within the study it was warm and cozy and comfortable. There was a crimson glow over the polished mahogany tables and chairs and over the rows of books on the shelves. The heavy damask curtains and table covers had vanished. They were serving as blankets for soldiers in the Confederate army.

"What are you thinking about, Richard?" asked Mrs. Partidge after awhile. She was knitting woolen socks for the soldiers, and her delicate white fingers worked as willingly as they had ever done on dainty embroidery. She was a woman past middle age, and the strenuous time she was passing through was leaving its blighting imprint upon her. She had sent three sons to the war and had received them back again—to be buried in the family tomb. Her husband had gone forth strong and hale and vigorous, and he had come back minus one arm and quite broken in health, with old age pressing heavily upon his grief smitten heart. With the desertion of his slaves the revenue from his plantation dwindled to a mere pittance.

If Uncle Noah and his wife had not remained faithful it would have gone hard with the Partidges. The old butler had not scorned to become man of all work about the place, and in addition to the little vegetable garden he maintained there had been one cow salvaged from the large herd that once grazed on the pastures.

"What are you thinking of, dear?" asked Mrs. Partidge after awhile.

The colonel looked up from his sad contemplation of the hissing fire.

"I was wondering what we would do if Noah and Hessa should decide to go away," he answered quietly.

"Oh, Richard, have they spoken to you?" Mrs. Partidge's gray eyes filled with tears.

He shook his head. "No, but Blythe says that nine of his negroes are going tomorrow, and one of them told him that our Hessa and Noah were going too."

"Without a word to us? Richard, I hardly think they would do it," faltered his wife.

"It is their right, Catherine. Perhaps they are afraid to speak to me. I wish they would go openly. I want to give them something for a new start in life. They are old, Catherine, just as we are, but they are as innocent children in the face of the world they will meet. But"— The colonel bowed his white head and covered his eyes with his hand.

There was a heavy shuffling step in the hall, and the two looked up to see Hessa's lumbering form filling the doorway. Her black fingers nervously smoothed the crisp folds of her white apron, and the snow turban that surmounted her dusky face shook tremulously.

Something in the old servant's attitude—something in the frightened uncertainty of her round face—revealed to the colonel and his wife the nature of Hessa's errand. It had come at last—the final blow—the desertion of these two faithful retainers.

"Come in, Hessa," said Mrs. Partidge gently.

"Scuse me, Marse Kunnel," she said hurriedly, "but tomorrow am de day when Marse Linkum pernounces all niggers free and ekwill—and—Noah and me am goin' norf!" She hid her face in her apron, and there was a convulsive movement of her fat shoulders.

"Do you want to go, Hessa?" asked the colonel quietly.

"We gotta go, ole marse!" she wailed. "We's free, an' we gotta go. Dey's all goin' tomorrer mohnin'."

"Very well, Hessa. Wait a minute, please."

Colonel Partidge opened a drawer in the mahogany desk and drew out a canvas bag. He emptied its contents on the table, and Hessa's eyes snapped at the pile of gold pieces.

The colonel carefully counted the gold into two piles and, gathering one into a heap, tossed it into the canvas bag and knotted the string around it.

"Hessa, here is a sum of money for you and Noah. It is half of what I have got. Take good care of it, because you will meet many dishonest people who will try to take it away from you. You have both been faithful servants. Nay, you have been friends to me and my family. Nay, even more than that, Hessa—you have been one of us. If there is anything we can do, if there is anything you want to make you comfortable, let us know. Come and bid us goodby before you go." The colonel's voice broke queerly.

Hessa was standing there, staring from master to mistress. The bag of gold pieces hung limply from her hand. She looked frightened, but some impulse within impelled her to go on.

"I's mighty sorry, but we's gotta go. I's cooked up a sight of vittels, Miss Catherine. Dey's a roll, ham an' fo' this an' dis ... an' Noah he's toted all de wood inter de cellar an' filled all de wood boxes an'—er—"

Hessa suddenly vanished, and presently they heard the outer door close loudly.

They did not look at each other after that. The blow had fallen.

The great clock in the hall chimed 8 and 9 and 10 and 11. The colonel sat with his eyes fixed on a book, but not once during the hours did the turning of a leaf break the silence. Mrs. Partidge knitted unceasingly, only pausing to unravel her work and reknit the skipped stitches.

Just after midnight there was the noisy rattle of wagon wheels on the highway, accompanied by negro voices lifted in song and excited chatter. It was undoubtedly the freed negroes on their way north, and they were going to stop for Hessa and Noah. There must have been several box wagons, for there was a din of confusion outside the Partidge gates. Then there came loud talk from the negro quarters, and the colonel and his wife heard Hessa's commanding tones raised above the tumult.

After awhile the wagons went away, and all sound ceased. Even the neglected fire had dwindled into soundless breaking embers, and the candles were burning low. It seemed as though an end had come to everything.

"Catherine!" said the colonel kindly.

"Richard!" Her voice trembled as their eyes met. Her hands flew up to her face, and her tears fell unrestrained. The colonel knelt beside her, his one arm around her slender shoulders.

"They were all we had left that made it seem like old times," she sobbed.

"I know, I know," he soothed gently.

It was some time before they looked up to see in the dying candlelight Hessa's great bulk in the doorway. Over her shoulder peered Noah's rolling eyes.

"Ah, Hessa, you have come to say goodby?" said the colonel, lifting his frail wife to her feet and leading her to the emancipated slaves.

"No, no, Marse Kunnel; we come ter say 'Howdy', all over agin! Huccome dem niggers stopped heah, but Noah an' me we couldn't go away an' leabe yoh an' Miss Catherine!"

"Dis am all de home we got in de worl'. Dere won't any place eber look jes' lak dis yere one," sobbed Noah, sinking to his knees beside Hessa and laying the bag of gold at the colonel's feet.

"I guess dat Marse Abe Linkum didn't mean us niggers to break our hearts goin' norf, so I guess he won't care so's we's happy. Noah, yoh lazy ole nigger, yoh mend de fiah an' make a blaze in de bedchamber while I gits moh candles an' makes a milk punch. I declare ef it ain't tomorrer mornin' already!" Hessa scolded everybody back into smiles once more.

As they went to their cabin after beloved master and mistress were abed and sleeping Noah pinched his wife's fat arm.

"Ole woman, yoh's free! Does yoh feel any diffe'nt?" he demanded doubtfully. His own face beamed contentment.

Hessa shook her arm free. "Oh, go erlong, do, Noah! Whut time I got to be t'inkin' erbout foolishness when I dunno ef dere's any eggs fo' waffles in de mohnin'?"

Formation of Worlds.

There are two hypotheses in reference to the condition of the matter of the universe at the moment when science begins its discussion of the formation of the worlds. Both these agree that the matter was in a nebulous condition. As Professor Young says: "This does not assume that matter was created in a nebulous condition. As the egg may be taken as the starting point for the life history of the animal, so the nebula may be taken as the starting point for the life history of the planetary sistem." On one theory the nebula was in the form of a heated gas; on the other, it was a cloud of cold meteoric dust. This latter many astronomers think is more likely to be true.—Scientific American.

Clever Feat.

The girl was talking to the ex-college man.

"And what are you going to do now that you have completed your education?" she asked.

"Oh, I think I'll live on my income," he answered airily.

"I am disappointed in you. Live on your income, indeed! Why don't you do some great deed to show the world how clever you are?"

"My dear young woman, if I succeed in living on my income it will be the cleverest deed any man ever accomplished."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He Got on Deck.

A sailor who had landed after a long voyage, and having been paid off, called a cab, threw his luggage inside and jumped on top himself.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the astonished cabman, "but you should get inside and put your boxes on top."

"Steer the craft ahead, Jarvey. Passengers always go on deck and luggage in the hold," was the reply from the top.—London Tit-Bits.

Able Officeholder.

"I understand that you once sang in a glee club."

"Yes," replied the great politician. "And I want to tell you when a man with a voice like mine can hold a position in a glee club it shows that he is some officeholder."—Los Angeles Listener

COAST TO COAST

Four Years Experience as a Marine

BY WM. M. OLDS

We were fourteen days sailing over the thirty-four hundred miles between Honolulu and Guam. With in twelve hundred miles of Guam we entered into what is called the regions of the calms, this place is a little less than nine hundred miles across, it ends about three hundred miles east of Guam. We were nearly three days going through this place, and the sea there is always like a mirror hardly a ripple ever disturbs the surface of the water. We arrived at the Island of Guam Sunday morning just after daylight. The Isle is the smallest possession of the United States. Agana is the name of the largest town. The United States has a marine post there with one hundred marines which is one company. One hundred got off the ship there to relieve the one hundred that had been there nearly two years. It is one of the two loneliest Islands in the Pacific ocean because it stands with no other Islands near. We stayed all day Sunday at the harbor.

Our ships started on the balance of its trip to the Phillipines Islands at sunset that night, and a beautiful sunset it was, a line of gold reached across the blue water from the sun and a few clouds above turned into a red flame and then quickly disappeared into darkness. We got in Manilla bay and anchored about 1:30 on Friday afternoon. The ship anchored in forty two feet of water about one mile and a half from the harbor. We only laid there about thirty minutes while the Manilla docters inspected the ship. I stayed in these Isles eleven months, while I was there in the rainy season of 1911, there was more rain and wind than there had been in six years. The season of rain and wind is always called the typhoon season, and the wind often blows down houses, up roots trees and does great damage.

On the twenty-four of October there was a a message came from headquarters that the American interests in China needed more protection, for the Chinese forces were destroying villages and taring up railroads. So, five companies of marines left on the Rainbow that same night, went to Manilla, and all the next day loaded up the ship with stores and food enough to last the five hundred men for three months. We were nearly a day and a half going past the Isle of Hormosa, which is three hundred miles long and one hundred wide. There is one hundred miles of water between the Island and the coast of China, one half of the Isle belongs to Russia, and the other half to Japan.

We entered the mouth of the Whangpoo river on the morning of the first of November, after being at sea a little over six days. We went up the river fifteen miles to the city of Shanghai, which stands part on one side of the river and part on the other. The river at Shanghai is one fourth of a mile wide and our ship anchored about in the center. A company of marines would land in the city from our ship one day each week to drill, and to show the Chinese troops that we were there and ready to do any duty that we would be called upon to do. A guard of twenty men went each day to the cable station that receives messages from the cable station at Guam, to keep the troops from interfering with any thing there.

For the Children

Last summer there was a baby parade at Jersey City, and among its many beautiful and interesting exhibits was Master John Lamon, who masqueraded as a hodcarrier. John was one of the hits of the parade. Indeed, he created more laughter than anything else in line. Since then John and his hod have been in demand for numerous entertainments in which children took part. So recently as Christmas John appeared at a costume show given by a settlement house in New York, and needless to say he was hailed with delight by all beholders. John is a good natured lad and is pleased whenever he can contribute to the happiness of others. Doubtless he and his hod will be seen many times this winter in his comical makeup.

Amazing.

The scientists tell us, as the result of study of a paleolithic skull, that primitive man was able to think before he was able to speak. How times have changed.—New York Tribune.

AMUSEMENT

WHAT THE TECUMSEH PAPERS HAVE SAID ABOUT "GRAUSTAK"

"Graustark" Was Well Received

"Graustark" is certainly a name to conjure with among the people of Tecumseh, judging by the audience that greeted its first appearance here on Wednesday evening. It was the largest audience we have ever seen gathered in the Opera House at anything but a home entertainment.

From start to finish the pretty, romatic play was well rendered by the excellent company and the whole performance was clean, entertaining and wholesome. Its dramatic intensity seemed to grow with each scene and the players were called before the curtain time upon time by the appreciative audience.—Tecumseh News Feb. 17, 1911.

GRAUSTARK

A fine audience on Wednesday evening attested their appreciation of the play "Graustark" which was presented in a most delightful manner. Every character was well taken and carried the audience with them through the many thrilling passages. The Americans were fine types, and did honor to their country.

The costumes were most exquisite as became royalty and the beautiful scenery gave an added charm to the play.

The whole evening was one of deep interest and it was with regret that the audience saw the curtain fall on the last scene.—Tecumseh Herald, Feb. 17, 1911.

The great success scored by Graustark" last season should induce theatre goers to fortify themselves for its coming engagement, Thursday February 6, by securing seats as early as possible! Seat sale opened at Hay's Bakery, this morning. The same standard of excellence appiles to "Graustark" this season as last. A complete carload of scenery being carried for the production.

Laugh and Grow Fat

"BABY MINE"

They play at the Opera House Friday evening "Baby Mine" was started with a laugh which was continued to the end when the curtain went down with a ha, ha, ha.

The audience seemed to be an appreciative one and in fine humor.

The Orchestra at the beginning was cheered to the encore which they well deserved, as they did excellent work each and every hit of the evening received a round of applause.

Every part was so well taken that it would be hard to distinguish among the four principle characters the favorite, even the babies took their part well and here was a place where "Everybody loved a fat man" Jimmy surely was enjoyed by all. Zoie certainly was gifted with versatility both as an actress and an acrobat. The proud young father and devoted friend Aggie were great favorites with all, "Baby Mine" will always be welcome in Tecumseh.

Graduate of the School are holding positions as superintendents of hospitals, sanitariums, teachers of nursing, leaders in nurse missionary service and other important places of trust.

Horse's Long Fast.

A horse recently passed fourteen days in a cave in Oklahoma without food or water and, although it lost 300 pounds in weight through the fast, it quickly recovered after it was rescued. The cave was concealed by planks and these broke as the horse walked across. The owner supposed that the horse had been stolen, and its presence in the cave was discovered by chance.

Never!

"Poets," bubbled the dreamy eyed young versemonger, "are born, sir, and not made." "Great Jehosaphat!" exclaimed the long suffering editor in amazement, "and did you suppose any one would want the credit of making 'em?"

CURIOSITY

Newspaper Printed in Cherokee Language

A relic of the past in the shape of the Cherokee Advocate of August 27, 1890 reached the Tecumseh Herald Office this week.

The Advocate was published every Wednesday morning at Tahlequah Cherokee Nation Indian Territory. In the directory column we find the Cherokee Creek, Choctaw, Chicasaw, and Seminole nations, reported with their chiefs and principal officers.

The third page is printed entirely in the Indian language. A noticeable feature of the fourth page is nearly four columns devoted to advertising the sale of stray property in the different districts and nations.

The paper is 20x25 inches with nine columns and is quite a curiosity as compared with our later papers. On the Indian Page while some of the letters were similar to ours yet most of them were character letters. In one sence it is an up to date paper it having no patent inside being all home print. It had a long Washington letter. The paper was sent to Miss Jennie Owen by her cousin Lynn G. White of Alva Oklahoma who edits Review-Courier in that city.

POPCORN FARMING

Saturday February 15th at Anderson Brothers Store Tecumseh will be held a meeting for getting at the facts of Popcorn raising. Five thousands bushels of popcorn was marketed at Brooklyn by the farmers in November 1912 and the quick cash and profit has made many double the acrage and some ten times over for 1913 planting. Do not fail to get in on the ground floor for there will have to be a limit on the number of acres signed.

W. M. Kelly and R. D. Howell will explain all the facts and have the pleasure of referring you to Anderson Brothers, Farmers State Bank at Brooklyn and Jackson City Bank.

The moment the corn is weighed you get the money and do business with people right in the neighborhood.

Raising "Cavies."

There's a man near Providence who makes a good living by raising "calves"—that is to say, guinea pigs—for medical schools and biological laboratories. The demand for the cavie is such that prices run about on the level of those for chickens.

Nightmare.

Nightmare is a peculiar form of bad dreams considered worthy of special name, being usually accompanied by a sense of extreme uneasiness or discomfort, like a weight on the chest or stomach, with imagined impossibility of motion or speech and other distressing feelings. It is due to disturbed circulation in the chest or in the brain, which, in turn, is due to imprudent eating of late or hearty suppers.

Martin A. Zimmerman Chief Engineer of Waterworks

Passed Away at the Home of Lavern Pratt. Aged 50 Years

MONDAY FEBRUARY 3, 1913

Martin A. Zimmerman one of the well known characters and favorite among the business people in the town passed away last evening at 5 o'clock. Only since December has he been unable to fulfill his duties at the Waterworks, where he has been a most faithful and efficient engineer for the past five years. Previous to that he was the owner of the Handle factory which he operated for about 14 years. He was a man loved by all his friends, generous hearted to a fault. The kindnesses and acts of courtesy that he has done that have never been told would fill a book. His hearty laugh and jovial salutation will be missed by everyone. These traits of character give a silver lining to dark cloud of death. He was a member of the Eagles and Masons.

He leaves a wife and two daughters, a mother and two brothers.

A private funeral will be held at house Wednesday morning. Funeral services at 10 o'clock at St Peters Episcopal church under the auspices of the Masonic Fraternity. Rev. F. Hewitt will officiate, burial in Brookside cemetery.

NOTICE

All Masons are requested to meet at the Masonic Temple at 9:30 Wednesday morning, and go from there to the Episcopal church for the funeral of M. A. Zimmerman

SUDDEN DEATH

"In the Midst of Life
We are in Death."

Mrs. Laura Odessa Gilman, wife of B. F. Gilman passed away suddenly at her home, Saturday evening. She had seemed in her usual health, and had been up town shopping during the afternoon. After eating her supper she played on the piano for awhile until she and her husband were called to the kitchen, on her way she exclaimed, "I can't do it, I am dying," and fell into his arms in an unconscious state. Dr. Jones was called at once, and she rallied from this attack only to suffer another, which proved fatal. Dr. Conklin was also called, but she passed away just as he entered the door.

Mrs. Gilman was young to go, being only 29 years, 6 months, and 28 days old. A husband and three small children aged 10, 8 and 4 years, are left to mourn her loss. A mother and several brothers and sisters also mourn her loss. The funeral was held today, with prayer at the house at 11:30 a. m., and at the M. E. church in Ridgeway at 1 o'clock p. m. Burial in Ridgeway.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Starley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Mrs. S. S. S., Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Tanning Rabbit Skins

To tan rabbit skins with the fur on lay the skin on a smooth board, the fur side undermost, and fasten it down with tacks. Wash it over first with a solution of salt and water, then dissolve two and a half ounces of alum in one pint of warm water and with a sponge dipped in the solution moisten the surface all over. Repeat this operation every four or five hours for three days. When the skin is quite dry take out the tacks and, rolling it loosely the long way, the hair inside, draw it quickly through a large smooth ring until it is quite soft, then roll it the contrary way of the skin and repeat the operation. Skins thus prepared are useful for many domestic purposes.—London Mail.

In a Perfume Factory.

Musk is perhaps the most valuable and delightful of all perfumes, yet the refiner, as he opens the musk pods, must wear thick cloths over mouth and nostrils, so repulsive is the odor that the pods emit. Indeed this odor inhaled for any length of time causes nosebleed.

Civet, kangaline and ambergris have in small quantities a delicious perfume, but in large quantities they smell so abominably as to give the worker nausea.

The hawthorn blossom is delicately sweet, and perfumers prize it highly, yet a roomful of hawthorn blossoms smells like a charnel house. This, too, is true of the tuberose.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Explaining What a Snob Really Is.

"Uncle Roy, what is a snob?"

"A snob, Eddie, is a person who inherits a great deal of money, goes abroad and buys himself a veneer of culture, returns home and poses as a connoisseur of something, and goes round calling his poor relations 'parvenus.' Why do you ask such a question, Eddie?"

"Because I heard Donald's big brother talking about you this afternoon and he said you were a snob."—Kansas City Star.

Perhaps She Was Skeptical.

"Just my luck."

"What's the matter now?"

"I promised my wife I'd be home at 10 o'clock last night."

"And couldn't make it, I suppose?"

"No; I got in at just 9:45, but she was sound asleep, and I failed to get credit for it."—Detroit Free Press.

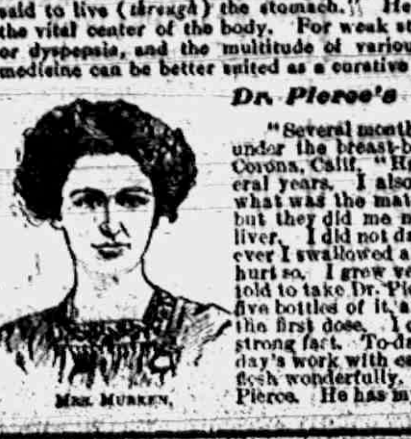
NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * *." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.



MRS. MURKEN.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes MRS. G. M. MURKEN, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

A Little Lump

It Became an Important Factor in a Man's Life

By EDWARD L. STANTON

I believe that the two most desirable blessings one can have are youth and health. There is a third that is equally important, though much more apt to be ignored—that is, absence of worry. I have had an experience in the last of the three, or its reverse, which is the subject of this story.

If ever a child was born into the world in a perfectly normal condition I was that child. I grew to manhood without an ache or a pain and seeing others taking medicines and consulting doctors I would say to them, "Get your mind away from your aches and pains. Don't worry and you will be as well as I am. As for the doctors, they are only good for serious matters; in small sicknesses they are humbugs."

One morning when taking my bath I discovered a small lump on my right side. I rubbed it and pulled at it, and I didn't like it at all. For three days I tried not to think about it, then gave up the task and went to a doctor famous for the treatment of all sorts of "growths." I waited two hours for a consultation, during which time I was in an increasing state of terror.

"Doctor," I said when admitted to the consulting room of the great specialist, "a little lump has come in my side. I fear it bodes something serious."

The doctor directed me to remove sufficient clothing for him to make an examination. After he had finished he spent some time putting away the implements he had used, but said nothing. I inferred the worst, and it was the worst that he finally communicated to me.

"That lump," he said, "is a malignant growth which we medical men call"—he gave a long Latin name which I didn't remember five minutes—"and my duty is to tell you that if you have any affairs that need to be settled you had better go to work upon them."

I sank down in a chair and covered my face with my hands. The doctor remained silent. Presently, notwithstanding the shock under which I suffered, I remembered that an anteroom was full of patients who were waiting to consult the great man, and I proceeded to make certain inquiries.

"How long have I to live, doctor?" I asked.

"I don't know. The records of such cases as yours have usually proved fatal within three to four months."

"Shall I suffer much?"

"No; the disease will eat into an artery, when the end will be painless."

I could think of no other information that I would need, so, rising from my chair, I staggered out of the room, giving place to the next patient, who was to gain comfort or despair from the eminent specialist. He sent me a bill of $100 for telling me that I had but four months at most to live, but under the circumstances the money was nothing to me, and since the doctor was living at the rate of $30,000 a year it was a good deal to him.

For the first week after learning my doom I gave myself up to meditation upon my fate. At the end of that time I made up my mind that it wouldn't need a malignant something or other to kill me or four months in which to do the work. I was preying upon myself at a much more rapid rate. I resolved to throw off the mental octopus that had me in its clutches and make the most of the brief period that remained to me.

I had $100,000 in 6 per cent bonds, worth $150,000. There was no relative who needed the money, and I resolved to spend the most of it in purchasing whatever would keep my mind off my coming demise. I would need company—some one to be with me most of the time—and cast about for an associate. I would spend a part of my time with a man friend and the rest with a woman friend. For the man I chose Arthur Atherton and for the woman Adele Sturgis, with both of whom I was on familiar terms. I told them that I proposed to spend $100,000 within four months and that in consideration of their devoting their time to me for that period I would divide the remaining $50,000 between them. Atherton was out of business at the time and had no fortune. He looked very sympathetic when I made my proposition, but I thought he was trying to conceal a good deal of happiness. In a third of a year he would earn $25,000 besides enjoying luxuries that wouldn't cost him anything.

As to Adele, she said she would think the matter over. After doing so she told me that she would accept my proposition with an amendment that the amount I would spend should be reduced by $25,000 and added to the amount of her portion. Furthermore, this portion was not to be given to her, but left to charity by will.

This did not seem to suit the requirements of the case, but Adele was the only girl I knew that I thought would be able to lift me out of myself, and I assented. I began by meeting Arthur about 9 o'clock every morning and spending the time with him till about 1 in the afternoon. We played billiards and went wherever anything interesting was going on. Later in the afternoon I took Adele out in my car, and two or three times in the week we would go either to the opera or the theater. The other evenings I would spend mostly with Arthur or with any one I happened to find to go about with me. Besides this I gave theater parties, dinners, suppers—in short, took in far more ways of diverting my mind from my trouble than I could catalogue.

But, despite all I could do, my doom hung heavy over me. One afternoon when I was with Adele I gave way to the gloom within me and confessed that I was not gaining much from the money I was spending. There was a real sympathy in her face when she replied:

"There is another way of getting out of yourself which you have not tried."

"What is it?" I asked eagerly.

"Interest yourself in the welfare of others."

"I never thought of that. Do you suppose it would work in my case?"

"I think it would help you."

We were riding in my car, and a boy stood on the sidewalk with newspapers under his arm he was trying to sell. His feet were bare; his shirt was open in front for want of buttons and for a profusion of tatters; his coat and trousers were torn. I drew up near him and bought a paper, handing him a five dollar bill. He looked at it despondently, thinking that he would lose the sale of a paper, for he could not change it.

"Never mind the change," I said, and as we moved away I saw him look at the bill, at me and at the bill again, while the expression on his face was a delight to me.

"By Jove!" I exclaimed. "It works first rate. I'm going back to get the poor little chap and do some more of it."

I returned to the boy, took him into my car, and we drove to a store, where I spent money for clothes for him as lavishly as I had been spending it on myself. I couldn't keep my eyes off the expression of wonder, of delight, that perpetually hovered on his features. I didn't know what he needed, but Adele did and thought of many things that would add to his comfort.

"Now we must take him home," she said when he was warmly dressed, and, loaded down with packages, we went to the car and presently drew up at a tenement house, where we astonished his mother and his brothers and sisters by presenting him to them in his new habiliments. I had a roll of bills in my pocket, which I distributed among the children, left a check for the mother, and Adele and I drove away, followed by the blessings of the family.

I had often returned to my room at midnight to feel the doom that hung over me by contrast with the gayety I had experienced more keenly than before going. The evening of my new departure I spent with Adele, listening to plans she prepared for more giving the next day, and when I went to bed felt greater relief than at any time since I had learned that I must die within the year. For the first time since I heard the announcement I went to sleep with no room for it in my mind for thinking of the happiness I had created.

I need not repeat the details of my charities, of which this was the beginning. I gained something in strength as well as spirits. I could not see that the lump that was to kill me was increasing, and I hoped, that I might be permitted to live the full time the doctor had allowed me. One thing I noticed—I had less use for Arthur Atherton and more for Adele Sturgis. I spent my mornings recalling the pleased expressions of those I had benefited and my afternoons going about getting rid of my money with Adele. The evenings I usually spent with her, talking over our charitable work for the next day.

One night when I was going to bed I looked at my lump. It was appreciably smaller. I felt of it, and, whereas it had been hard, it was now soft. I wondered if after all the great specialist had not been mistaken in my case. The next morning I went to him again. He examined my symptom, and I saw at once by his expression that it was not as he had expected. I saw also that what he was thinking about was how he should admit to me that he had been mistaken without injury to his professional dignity.

"This lump," he said at last, "is what I told you in the first place. But," he waited a moment before going on to give me time to be impressed—"but it is a variety that is harmless. I think it will subside."

I had a $100 check in my pocket ready for him and, handing it to him, got out as quickly as possible, fearing that he would change his opinion again before I could make an exit. I flew to Adele to announce the good news, and when I did so I met with the astonishment of my life. She tried to congratulate me, but words would not come. Then her relief found vent in tears, and before I realized what I was doing I had taken her in my arms and was soothing her.

"You have taught me how to forget death as well as to live," I said to her, "and if you consent we will together pursue happiness as we have begun it. Thanks to you, more than half of my fortune remains, and we will lay out a certain part of our income to be given to those in distress."

There are blessings in disguise which we cannot control, but there are also blessings we can control. Every act of loving kindness is such a blessing to ourselves, though we are apt to consider it a sacrifice and fail to see it in its true character. The most fortunate expenditure I ever made was the fee I paid the great specialist for telling me to prepare for death, for in preparing for death I prepared for life. Besides, he was instrumental in giving me my dear wife.

RESORT HOTEL IS BURNED

Aiken, S. C., Feb. 3.—The Park in the Pines hotel, Aiken's famous tourist hostelry, was burned to the ground. There were many narrow escapes, and for a time some of the guests were in imminent danger of being cut off in the upper rooms, but all of the forty-four guests were gotten safely out of the burning building. Most of the guests were compelled to leave their personal effects behind. Colonel A. E. Dick, manager of the hotel, was overcome by the dense smoke and was rescued in a semi-conscious condition.

In a few hours all that remained of the Park in the Pines was a mass of smoking debris.

The hotel was the property of a Mrs. McArthur of Detroit, Mich. It was built in 1903 at a cost of about $160,000. The loss on the hotel, together with the loss of jewelry and other personal property of the guests will, it is estimated, run the total loss up to a quarter of a million.

EDWARD F. DUNNE

DUNNE INSTALLED

Democrats Now Control Affairs in State of Illinois.

HEAVY SNOWFALL AT CAPITAL

Ceremonies of Inauguration Begin with a Parade—Oath of Office Is Administered in the House of Representative by Chief Justice Frank K. Dunne—Luncheon at Mansion.

FORMER DEMOCRATIC GOVERNORS.

Edward Coles, inaugurated 1822.
Ninian Edwards, inaugurated 1826.
John Reynolds, inaugurated 1830.
William L. D. Ewing, inaugurated 1834.
Joseph Duncan, inaugurated 1834.
Thomas Carlin, inaugurated 1838.
Thomas Ford, inaugurated 1842.
Augustus C. French inaugurated 1846 and 1849.
Joel A. Matteson, inaugurated 1853.
John P. Altgeld, inaugurated 1893.

At Springfield, Ill., Monday, inauguration day for the Democracy saw the capital city in the grip of the biggest snowstorm of the season. Governor-elect Edward F. Dunne and other state officers-elect did not let this dampen their ardor. They were up bright and early.

The stage was set for them to get in and play their respective parts. Twenty years has elapsed since Springfield witnessed a Democratic state inaugural such as this. It was away back in 1893 that John P. Altgeld as a Democrat took the oath of office.

The New State Officers.

The newly elected officers are: Governor—Edward F. Dunne, Chicago; lieutenant governor, Barratt O'Hara, Chicago; secretary of state, Harry Woods, Chicago; auditor of public accounts, James J. Brady, Chicago; treasurer, William Ryan, Jr., Danville; attorney-general, Patrick J. Lucey, Streator.

Springfield was filled to overflowing and the hotels played to capacity business. There was an army of personal admirers of the new governor here, as well as the army of job hunters and "hopefuls." The Dunne family of nine children and Mr. and Mrs. Dunne was the central group in a this mass. The crowd was estimated at 10,000. The "H. and H." County Democracy held a spotlight.

The Inaugural Ceremonies.

The officers-elect and the retiring officers, with the exception of Governor and Mrs. Deneen, congregated at the St. Nicholas hotel at 10:30 o'clock in the morning with their wives and seated in their carriages, reviewed the inaugural parade, composed entirely of civic organizations and mostly from the city of Chicago. Dropping in at the rear of the line, the officials were driven through the downtown district to the executive mansion.

Here Governor and Mrs. Deneen entered the carriage occupied by Governor-elect and Mrs. Dunne and the parade resumed the march, which finished at the north entrance to the state house.

Oath of Office Administered.

Proceeding to the third floor of the capitol, the officers and their ladies were joined, in the state library, by the justices of the supreme court and their wives. The inaugural party then proceeded, the ladies first, to the house of representatives. In the presence of the members of both branches of the assembly, and as many guests as could be packed into the chamber, the oath of office was administered to the incoming officials by Chief Justice Frank K. Dunn.

Governor Deneen then made a brief farewell address and was followed by Governor Dunne, who delivered an inaugural address.

TAKES NO CHANCES ON BILL "JOKERS"

Gov. Ferris Submits Every New Measure to Two Attorneys.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 1.—Governor Ferris is not depending upon his own interpretation of the legislation that is being presented in the house and senate in order to determine just what the measures presented stand for or bring about.

He is receiving copies of every bill submitted and is submitting them to two attorneys, leaders of the state bar, and men in whom he has confidence. They are not now connected with politics, but have had wide political experience and the governor will receive from them individual opinions as to the actual import of all bills.

This course the governor is pursuing in order to protect himself from signing any bills that may contain the little "joker" now much feared and still more talked about.

"I have been a schoolmaster all my life," said the governor, commenting on his actions with reference to bills. "I do not pretend to stack up against the politicians nor the work of skilled lawyers. I will not name the men to whom I submit the bills and neither knows who the other is. Their service is distinctly legal and I propose to guard myself with their knowledge."

LOSES ON FAKED MORTGAGE

Kalamazooite Victim of Man Who Forges Banker's Name.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 1.—As a result of the cleverest forgery ever performed in this city, Charles McGinn, a retired farmer, living on Asylum avenue, lost $3,500 in currency on a worthless mortgage. A man who is entirely unknown in this part of the state is the person who obtained the money.

The forger has been in the county several weeks and had become thoroughly acquainted with the principals of the affair. After arranging with William Cobb of Schoolcraft to purchase the latter's property, he visited Cashier Charles Stuart of the Schoolcraft State bank, informing him of the intended purchase. In some manner he obtained a copy of the bank official's signature and a bogus mortgage.

HURT ON RAILWAY TRACK

Two Are Struck by Engines and One Falls from Cab.

John Stanlacke was struck by a Grand Trunk engine, hurled through twenty feet of space and rendered unconscious when he failed to hear the warning blast of a locomotive in the local yards. His skull was fractured and he was otherwise seriously injured.

KALAMAZOO — Two little children of five and eight years, brought about the remarriage of John Vanderschaff, an Otsego milk dealer, and Cora Vandershaff in this city. The parents of the children were divorced in Allegan county seven months ago, and according to the terms of the decree, the mother was given the custody of the children. Both children missed the father, and often asked the mother when their papa was coming back to them. Christmas eve the two little ones knelt by the side of the bed and asked that their father might be brought back to them as a Christmas present from God. When Christmas morning came and the father was not present as he had been in former years, both children began to cry. The mother immediately wrote to the father, and as a result the two were reunited and married.

MAN DIES IN FIRE AS CROWD GAZES

Loses Life When He Dares Flames for Hidden Gold.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 4. — The headless body of William French, an old colored man who lived alone in Saline, lies in an undertaking establishment in that town with no kith or kin to claim it.

French went down town in the evening and, when he returned to his home, it was to find it in flames. He rushed to his neighbors for help and then tried to enter the house through the kitchen, disregarding the efforts of his neighbors to dissuade him.

He is thought to have had a considerable sum of money hidden in his bedroom just off the kitchen, and that he had started to go after it. He reached the kitchen table, standing in the middle of the room, and there stood with his hands on the table, as though resting.

By that time the flames were so fierce that no one could reach the old man and he burned before the eyes of hundreds of horrified spectators, his head being entirely burned off, but the body, though burned from the shoulders to the feet, still kept the standing position.

When the flames subsided sufficiently and only one wall of the kitchen stood, neighbors got a rake and got the body out. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

NOW WITH DEAD SPOUSE

Potterville Woman Is a Suicide When Husband Dies.

Potterville, Mich., Feb. 4. — Just a week after the death of her husband, Mrs. D. E. Knipe, fifty years old, died from the effects of codeine, taken with suicidal intent at the bedside of her dying spouse a week ago.

As the body of the woman who had been in a comatose condition since her act was removed from the bed a quantity of cyanide of potassium was found concealed between the mattresses, leaving no doubt as to the woman's intention to make sure of her death in case the codeine failed.

Federal Officer Charges Man With Postoffice Job.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 4. — Deputy United States Marshal Tobias has returned from Isabella county, where he arrested a man giving his name as Devitsky, and about fifty years old on a charge of robbing the postoffice at Posen, Presque Isle county, five years ago. Tobias left Devitsky in the Saginaw county jail.

Devitsky has been living as a hermit in a wild part of the county about ten miles from Mt. Pleasant.

BELLEVUE STATION BURNS,

Hose Is Frozen and Firemen Unable to Stop Flames.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 4. — For the reason that the hose was frozen as a result of the fire that destroyed the residence of G. G. Pellegrom at Bellevue, late Saturday night, the fire department was powerless to check the flames that started from an over-heated stove in the Grand Trunk depot.

The first fire caused a loss of about $1,500. The depot was burned to the ground and a number of valuable records were destroyed, the loss being between $2,000 and $3,000.

YIELDS TO ALLIES

Turkey Is Reported Ready to Cede Adrianople.

SCUTARI ALSO ABOUT TO FALL

Unless Turkey Yields to the Balkan Demands the Allied Armies Will Attempt to Drive Her Completely Out of Europe—What Osman Nizami Pasha Says of Outlook.

The London Times says a report among some of the Balkan representatives says the porte has telegraphed to Sofia offering to cede Adrianople on the conditions laid down and that Bulgaria is ready to accept. This report has not been confirmed at the Bulgarian legation here, but it is considered credible.

Bombardment of Adrianople began at 7 o'clock at night and a small skirmish occurred at the Tchatalja lines. Bulgaria has turned a deaf ear to the remonstrances of the powers and unless Turkey yields to the Balkan demands the allied armies will attempt to drive her completely out of Europe.

Scutari on Point of Surrender.

According to a dispatch from Belgrade, Scutari is on the point of falling. It is reported that the Turkish commander has sent two representatives to the Servian commander to propose the capitulation of that town.

Dr. Daneff, head of the Bulgarian delegation, in an interview in Paris, said he had promised Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, that if the Turks immediately accepted the allies' conditions the latter would make peace, but whatever happened there would be no further armistice.

To Fight Like Wild Animals.

Osman Nizami Pasha, the second Turkish delegate, will leave London to resume his ambassadorial duties at Berlin. He said that because of information received from military sources he believed the allies underestimated the condition of the Turkish army and would find themselves confronted by a redoubtable enemy—the best Musselman warriors, veterans from Arabia, who had fought under Izzet Bey, and tried soldiers and good marksmen lately engaged in Tripoli under Enver Bey and Fethy Bey. He added:

"That ambassador was right who predicted that if driven to despair the Turks would fight like wild animals."

Murderers from other counties than Cook were freed as follows: Tucker Kallard, Knox; Gustave Menkhausen, St. Clair; Joseph Ellios, LaSalle; Sanford Pruitt, Hardin; Jesse Koser, Carroll; Robert Munn, Montgomery; Fred Perkins, Johnson; Thomas Bundy, LaSalle.

The Other Way.

"If I were younger," said the rich old man, "I believe I might win you for my wife."

"Yes," replied the cold beauty, dreamily considering his sixty years, "or, say, fifteen or twenty years older."—Philadelphia Press.

A Girl's Wild Midnight Ride

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horseback at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds, which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disease," writes W. R. Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption, and I gained 87 pounds." Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

Good Roads

By Horatio S. Earle, Father of Good Roads in Michigan

I am for "Good-Enough Roads" whether it be calf-paths or broadways, —roads that are good enough for the amount of their traffic only.

I am for an equitable division of the cost of building and repairing good roads.

A transporting machine is composed of power, wagon and road. If the power and wagon are good and the road bad, the whole machine is of little use.

Through roads are local roads in every locality as well as through roads for all the townships, villages and cities they connect. Good through roads would be of great benefit to our state, so valuable, as to make it wise to build them. But we must not go road-crazy and raise the money to build these highways in any but a safe, sane, equitable way.

It isn't right for all of us to buy good roads for a few to use, for if it were, then we should also buy the power and the wagon for a few.

Remember—there are more "wheelbarrowists" than automobilists. The "wheelbarrowists" have not asked the state to buy wheelbarrows or wheelbarrow roads for them and this should be kept in mind when the tax is being levied to build good roads.

Remember, also, that the "wheelbarrowists" have to pay the whole first cost of paving their streets in Detroit, Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Kalamazoo, Jackson, Lansing, Marquette, Houghton and in all the other cities of the state; also that the state reward road tax is now an extra tax on them but the present amount is not sufficient to prove a hardship and they have willingly paid it.

Also in most of these cities they pay in addition to the state reward road tax—a county road tax and no part of either tax is used to pave streets.

Now it may seem strange that "Good Roads" Earle should object to any plan that would raise money to build good roads—but strange or not strange, he will if the plan is unfair.

To pay all the cost out of the state treasury to build through good roads is unfair, it is collecting money from all to build roads for a few and is wrong.

To cease taxing automobiles locally and place a specific tax on them and put this money in the state treasury to build through roads is nothing less than highway robbery.

Approximately over half of the automobile in Michigan are owned in Detroit, then Detroit would be paying one-half the cost of building through roads.

Detroit pays over one-fifth of the taxes of the state and so one-fifth of the state reward road tax, and I think this is quite enough.

The state reward road bounty has proved to be a generator of good roads more than I anticipated when I wrote it. I don't believe it is wise to change the ten commandment, the Lord's Prayer or the state reward road law.

All the state should pay toward the cost of through roads is what the state reward road law provides, namely, $500 a mile for gravel road, $750 for stone gravel, and $1,000 for macadem or better roads.

What justice would there be in building a good road at state expense through a county that has done no good road building?

ARTICLE 8, SECTION 26

"The legislature may provide by law for submitting the question of adopting a county or district road system to the electors of the counties or proposed districts and such road system shall not go into operation in any county or district until approved by a majority of the electors thereof, voting on such question."

Under this provision of the constitution the legisture has the power to pass a law creating a road district of the counties of Berrien, Van Buren, Allegan, Ottawa, Muskegon, Oceana, Mason, Manistee, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet provided a majority of the electors voting on the question in these counties favor it.

The legislature has the power to give to each county board of supervisors the right to appoint one of their number to act with those appointed from other counties as a board or inter-county road district commissioners.

The legislature has the power to restrict the board's authority to the building of this one through road, also to give them the right to assess to each county that part of the cost of the road which it is just for them to pay; further to provide a way for the up-keep of the road.

Now if a majority of the voters say "no," then the road is not wanted, and at the present time it appears to be the best policy not to force things upon the people which they do not want.

Now, an east side road, the Meridian road and a Detroit-Chicago road, or any other, can be built the same way if the counties through which it passes favor it. The state would pay its share, the same being the regular bounties provided for in the state reward road law.

It is now up to the legislature, the through road enthusiasts, and the press to get the roads under the constitutional authority mentioned.

Midwinter Wedding

50 GUESTS PRESENT

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rosacrans was the scene of a most beautiful wedding Tuesday evening when their daughter, Florence was given in marriage to George H. Adamson of Toledo, Ohio.

As the clock pealed forth the hour of six, Miss Ruth Kimball of Clinton sang "O Promise Me" in her own charming manner. She was followed by Mendelsshon's Wedding March played by Miss Genevieve Halladay. To the strains of the music, the bridal party moved to their places before a bank of palms and flowers where they were met by Rev. M. D. Tremain an uncle of the bride who in an impressive manner pronounced the words that made them husband and wife using the ring service.

The bride was attended by her sister Miss Marian and Eugene Rosacrans a brother of the bride, acted as best man. The bride was beautiful in a gown of white charmeese satin and carried a boquet of brides roses. Miss Marian wore white embroidered lace over blue and carried pink carnations.

The bridal table was exquisite with its floral decorations. A huge boquet of carnations forming the center piece while similax was trailed around upon the table. A merry hour passed before the time for the train, the young couple leaving for their home in Toledo, which was in readiness for their coming. They were given a merry send off and the best wishes of all went with them.

The mother of the bride wore a gown of blue messaline silk, Mrs. Adamson wearing grey marquesette. Other pretty gowns were those worn by Miss Ruth Kimball of Clinton who wore a dainty dress of white marquesette over pink satin with pearl trimmings, Miss Isabel Hicks of Alpena white chiffon over pink draped with pink rosebuds, Mrs. Claude VanTine of Ann Arbor, a lovely gown of grey messaline over grey with white lace trimmings, Mrs. A. A. Hall of Toledo white satin, Mrs. Will Baldwin, blue foulard silk, Mrs. Perley Skinner of London, Ohio blue crepe de chene with gold bands and Miss Ella Primrose, Copenhagen blue messaline.

Mrs. Adamson has always lived in Tecumseh and has endeared herself to everyone. Mr. Adamson also is a Tecumseh boy, leaving home but a few years ago for Toledo where he has worked up a fine business.

As we looked over the many beautiful presents that had been given them we could but feel that they were held near and dear by all, and we hope that their bark may sail smoothly over life's sea.

A very unique present given her by her aunt Mrs. C. V. Hicks of Alpena, was a serving tray inlaid with a piece of her grandmother Rosacrans' Paisley shawl. As it must be some fifty years ago that this shawl was worn, it will be treasured among her most precious possessions.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

On Monday evening Mrs. H. Goodsell met with a surprise when a party of friends numbering 30 arrived between 7 and 8, o'clock with intention of helping her to celebrat here birthday. Laden with lots of good things to eat and many pretty presents made the occasion a very merry one. Dancing and card playing was indulged in, up to a small hour in the morning when all departed to their homes wishing Mrs. Goodsell very many happy returns of the day.

PLEASANT PARTY

Odd Fellows and Rebekahs Have a Social Evening.

Tuesday evening the Odd Fellows hall was a scene of a most delightful time when the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs met together. The evening was passed in dancing to the merry strains of music given by Mrs. Jack Staulter, Percy Heidenreich and Glen Tansley.

Light refreshments were served and in the early hours of the morning the company dispersed to their several homes feeling that they had been well entertained.

GRAUSTARK

The play of "Graustark" is always sure to make a hit, and last night was no exception. The extreme cold weather however kept many away, and the attendance was not as large as usual.

Deserving of Sympathy.

"I am the mother of 21 children," declared a woman at Tower Bridge police court, who was alleged to be an habitual drunkard, "and I have always made my children's clothes, mended their boots, and cut their hair." "We all sympathize with you," remarked the magistrate, Mr. Cecil Chapman.—London Daily Mail.

WIT AND WISDOM

The Wit and Wisdom Club met at the home of Rev. B. R. Weld, Monday evening. It was "Men's night," and the male members of the Club gave the entire program producing the Squedunk Deestrick Skule. Benjamin Franklin Weld acting as Skule master for the occasion. The pupils in attendance were Emmie Dimple Brown, Willie Ben-hadad Hartzog, Boanarges Hurry, Abraham Onesphorus Howard, Dorcas Plumblossom McAlpine, Lucie Goliath North, Francesca Rector, Jerubbesheth Hannibal Smith, Cornelius Abraham Slayton, Wisteria Eliza Slayton and Skinny Waring.

School opened with a poem given in unison. Next came roll call, which called forth hearty responses. A singing lesson followed which if not musical, was edifying. Arithmetic and history classes followed and some of the information imparted was truly astonishing. The spelling class cast a spell over every body, and beat Webster to the finish. Willie Ben-hadad Hartzog executed a musical number on the Jews harp, which brought down the house, while the solo of Abraham O. Howard on the mouth organ brought several to their feet in a giddy manner.

A program was given by the graduates consisting of essays and music. Dorcas P. McAlpine had a "thoughtful" essay, and Wizzy E. Slayton sang Home Sweet Home in a most pathetic manner. Willie Ben-hadad Hartzog gave an oration about "Plato" bringing out many facts not being given before in history. Abraham O. Howard gave "The Charge of the Light Brigade" in a most thrilling manner.

The school board then tried their hand at entertaining. The President introducing Mr. Fennimore J. Temple as the literary member of the board, and calling on him for a poem, which he gave with much favor. Mrs. Fannie P. Rosacrans presented the Woman's Suffrage question with telling effect, convincing every one by her vehemence. The teacher was called upon to examine the heads of his pupils for signs of bugs inside or out for fear they might spread through the community. At the close of the school all adjourned to the lawn for a picnic, after singing the closing ode.

PROGRESSIVE BANQUET

Adrian February 4

The Progressive banquet given given in Adrian Tuesday evening was said to be a banner affair and one to be copied by other political parties as worthy of notice. The ladies were invited to be present to enjoy the "feast of reason and the flow of soul" as well as the other feasting. About 500 were present.

The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion noticebly being the hugh head and antlers of a Bull Moose under the folds of the American flag. The High School orchestra favored the company with some fine music and Dr. Anthony gave the invocation.

The ladies then served a most delicious banquet, Rev. John A. Selbert acted as toastmaster, and the real business of the meeting began. Short speeches by E. St Elmo Lewis, D. W. Grandon, Hubert F. Probert, Theo. M. Joslin followed. The principal speech being that of Frederick K. Landis, Ex-Congressman from Indiana. His speech abounded in wit and was applauded to the echo. In speaking of Taft he said he was ahead of Debs at the polls and of Lydia Pinkham in advertising only that Lydia had a cure which Taft did not have.

Music was interspersed through the program, and at the close the whole assembly joined in singing America.

Quite a number of progressives from Tecumseh took in the banquet and were well pleased with the entertainment given.

ANNIVERSARY SURPRISE

Tuesday Feb 4 was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. George Burroughs. A large company of neighbors and friends dropped in upon them giving them a genuine surprise. They came well laden with baskets full of good cheer and a bountiful picnic dinner was served.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. James Derby, Elsworth and Inez of Adrian and Mrs. L. A. Halker of Jackson. A most delightful time was spent in social chat and when the guests departed it was with best wishes for many happy returns of the day.

WAS THIS CURIOSITY OR RELIGION?

It Certainly Was Not Womanly

A meeting for women only was advertised in Columbus, O., for Friday, and a mob of 6000 women stormed the doors of the tabernacle to hear Evangelist Billy Sunday.

The police were powerless. Sixteen patrolmen were sent from the Central station but could do nothing with the mob, who battered doors and tore each other in tatters. Fainting women from outside and in were carried to railroad Y. M. C. A. The meeting was for 2 o'clock, but Mr. Sunday decided to preach to the crowd inside and began his service at 11:45 a. m. speaking until 1:50 p. m.

176 babies were checked at the "Nursery" opposite the tabernacle, many being refused. Not only the women were beaten and torn in the melee, but the men who acted as ushers were handled roughly.

When we read such things as these, and the actions of the suffragettes in London, we feel ashamed of women who will so disgrace themselves, and cast reproach on their innocent sisters. Sunday's sermon scored women on morals which was certainly a good theme for the occasion.

A BIG ONE COMING

The latest booking at the Bradley Opera House is Mort H Singer's big musical comedy "Heartbreakers" with George Damerel, late leading man with the "Merry Widow" company and Miss Myrtle Vail in the leading roles supported by a company of fifty of Mr. Singer's best singing and dancing people.

This is the first of Mr. Singer's attractions ever seen in Tecumseh; although the local management has tried to secure some of the Singer attractions before but they always ask a $600 guarantee which is most too much for a town the size of this to put up "The Heartbreakers" had February 14th open and after considerable correspondence, Mr. Singer offered the date to Tecumseh on a guarantee of $400 as the company had a short jump and no long railroading to do, coming here from Jackson. This guarantee was quickly given by Mr. Mark as he was very anxious to secure one of the Singer attractions for his patrons. The letter from Mr. Singer's booking manager is reproduced at top of page 2, and the original copy is at Hay's Bakery where the public may read it if any one thinks this guarantee was not given.

"THE HEART BREAKERS"

One of the heaviest scenes that has ever been used with a musical comedy will be seen in the second act of the "Heart Breakers" at the Bradley Opera House on next Friday, February 14th. The scene shows three rooms in the Castle Manger in the Adirondacks. It is here where the "Saxons" or "Heart Breakers" come disguised as servants to help the "master", George George Damerel, to win the "girl." The set is made in three different sections one being the parlor down stairs and the other being two living rooms up stairs. Everything is practical as would be used in a regular house. The doors are solid, also the winding stair way where over twenty people run up and down, same as you would in your house. This set requires alone sixteen stage hands besides the six men that are carried by the company. Manager Singer sent two artists to the Adirondacks especially to get locals for this one act.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says:

Henry Kempf, carpenter Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Stanley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man sings a lullaby it naturally sounds rocky.

Conductor S. L. Miller, Norfolk, Nebr., on Bonesteel Division of C. & N. W. Ry. Co. recommends Foley Kidney Pills and says "I have used Foley Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and endorse their use for any one afflicted with kidney trouble. They are all right." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What has become of the old-fashioned widow who used to "set her cap" for No. 2?

Mrs. S. S. S., Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

WILL HAVE CLEAR MAJORITY

Democrats Rejoice Over Election of Willard Saulsbury as Senator.

The news at Washington of the election of Willard Saulsbury, a Democrat, as senator from Delaware, was received in the senate with evident satisfaction. It makes it certain that the Democrats will have a clear working majority in the senate. The Democratic membership in the next senate is certain to be at least 49, a majority of one, with the prospect that this majority will be increased by the election of a Democrat in Illinois and possibly one in New Hampshire.

In addition to the party strength of the Democrats the leaders feel certain of receiving support from a number of the progressive Republicans on tariff legislation and other important measures. It is expected that President Wilson will be able to command the support of the following progressive Republicans for the passage of his policies relating to the tariff, trust and banking reform: Bristow, Clapp, Crawford, Sterling of South Dakota and LaFollette.

76TH BALLOT ENDS ILLINOIS DEADLOCK

William McKinley of Chicago Chosen Speaker of House.

Wm. McKinley, Chicago, was chosen speaker of the Illinois house of representatives on the seventy-sixth ballot. Balloting has been under way since Wednesday, Jan. 8.

This action clears the way for Governor Deneen to send in his valedictory address. Governor-Elect Dunne will follow with his inaugural talk.

Mr. McKinley's election was brought about by a combination of Republicans and Democrats. He is a neighbor of Governor-Elect Dunne, a personal friend of Roger C. Sullivan and a cousin of Judge M. L. McKinley. He was agreed upon by Mr. Dunne and Mr. Sullivan in a conference they held the first week of the deadlock.

Representative John M. Rapp had withdrawn from the race on the seventy-third ballot to make possible the election of another man.

Edward F. Dunne of Chicago was elected governor of Illinois on Nov. 5, 1912. Other Democrats were elected to other state offices on the same date. These facts became public officially at a joint session of the house and senate of the forty-eighth general assembly. The envelope containing the official figures of the election was opened, and its contents read.

In his biennial message to the general assembly Governor Deneen calls attention to the legislation for social and industrial betterment passed during his administration. He declares that Illinois has taken an advanced position in dealing with the social and industrial problems of today.

Train Robbery In Chicago.

In Chicago, within almost a stone's throw of the loop district a lone train robber held up the "Stock Yards Special," an express train on the Pennsylvania railroad, robbed the safe of the express car of $1,000 in cash and $8,000 in checks, and, after a revolver battle with the train conductor, escaped.

For The Nervous Woman,

Or the woman who experiences hot flashes nothing is so good to soothe, quiet and calm the nervous system as a pure glyceric extract of native medical plants, and made without alcohol, which has been sold by druggists for the past forty years, and most favorably known as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In younger years some women suffer from dizziness, or fainting spells, hysteria, headache, bearing-down feelings and pain. All these symptoms of irregularity and female disturbance are relieved by the use of this famous "Prescription" of Doctor Pierce.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system, and in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. For over-worked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is an excellent appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

MRS. McDONALD.

"My disease was called retroversion," writes MRS. LYDIA McDONALD, of Mecosta, Mich., Route 1. "I had nervous chills and numb spells and they would leave me very weak. Then I had inflammation and the doctor said I had a floating kidney. I doctored seven months with our family physician. He said I would have to have an operation. Then I stopped taking his medicine. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicines I have not had any nervous chills or weak spells. I am better than for years.

"My daughter is now taking the 'Prescription' and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, also the 'Pellets' for nervousness and weak, tired feeling. These remedies have helped her ever so much in a short time. We have great faith in your medicines for female troubles."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets induce mild natural bowel movement.

Points for Mothers

Individuality In Children's Clothes.

The aim of every fastidious mother is to dress her child simply and in a becoming manner. Her clothes should be a part of her and not obtrude themselves. Some mothers think that if the child takes too much interest in her clothes she will become self conscious. On the other hand, the child who knows that she is appropriately dressed, as a rule, forgets entirely about herself and her frock, and it becomes as much a part of her as her hair.

The growing mind of the child is very sensitive to impressions, and if she learns early in life the cardinal principles of good dressmaking it will be as easy and as natural for her to apply them as she grows up as any of the other lessons of life.

Sensitiveness to Color.

Some children are very sensitive to color. They take a strong prejudice to certain colors. A red gown on a very high strung girl has been known to bring on a degree of excitement which frequently resulted in tantrums, while a frock of a more pleasing color would instantly soothe and quiet her. This is, of course, an extreme case, but there are more children than mothers realize who suffer cruelly from being compelled to wear clothes which in color and style are distasteful to them. Instead of trying to force the child to wear these clothes as a matter of training, the situation should be studied and the reason found for the child's objection.

Child Must Be Considered.

It takes, as a rule, such a little time and so short an explanation to get the child's point of view that it is a pity many mothers go ahead and order their children's clothes without a thought of the individuality of the wearer, for children are so set in their ideas that they will not listen to reason and will not be guided by their mother's judgment, but it is necessary for them to feel that the mother is a competent guide. In these days, when the whole system of teaching in the schools is to bring out the individuality of the child, it is not surprising that the girl, even before she enters her teens, may feel competent to question just how much mother does know about the right clothes for her. It is necessary for the mother of today to study the clothes problem as it presents itself for her child. She will find that it is not the least of the problems which confront her, nor can it be solved offhand at a minute's notice. The day when one dress could be passed down the line from one youngster to another is over. The manufacturer as much as any one has hastened its departure, for few of the present day fabrics will withstand more than a season's wear and tear.

If the mother is to guide her child in the selection of becoming and appropriate clothing she will teach her to study herself. The designers of children's clothing are quite ready to help the perplexed mother by offering her gowns and coats and hats of many styles, almost as varied as those for older folk. The mother who selects successfully the costumes most appropriate for her daughter will cast aside her own preferences. She may delight in the fascinating Kate Greenaway gowns and coats, but unless her girl is of a picturesque type she will be wise to pass them by.

The Awkward Child.

The robust, tall, awkward child who promises to be a fine looking woman, but who in her early teens is the despair of many mothers, would look ridiculous in a Kate Greenaway frock, whereas she would forget her awkwardness in a well cut Russian blouse, where the low waist line would detract from her height. Just as there are women who always look well in severe costumes, so there are children who have a certain style in the simplest of costumes and who become wholly commonplace in appearance the minute they are dressed up in frills and furbelows. It is far better to dress a girl of this type in a plain little frock of soft woolen or cashmere, if a wash material is not desired, than in a frock decorated with lace and embroidery, with ruffles and shirrings. On the other hand, there are children who are fairly irresistible in dainty muslin frocks beribboned and beruffled.

HIS FRIEND'S FIANCEE

A Man Was Saved From a Woman's Toils and a Friendship Broken

By EDWARD COMPTON

"What can I do for you, Mr. Dillon?"

The question was asked by a young man of an old one who had called upon him at his bachelor rooms. The two seated themselves, and Mr. Dillon explained his visit.

"You are my son's most intimate friend, John, and have more influence over him than any other man. Jim has come to a crisis in his life and is likely to be wrecked. I wish you to try to save him."

"You mean his infatuation for Clara Markland?"

"I do. I am convinced that she wishes to marry him for what he will inherit from me; that she cares nothing for him; that as his wife she will be constantly encouraging the attentions of other men, and in the end there will be a divorce, he being obliged to pay her a very large alimony."

"Why do you not make it known to the lady that you will disinherit him if he marries her?"

"Such a course would make a breach between him and me. He is my only child, and we have always been friends as well as father and son. In anything else than an infatuation for a woman he would do as I might ask. The only way to handle this case is to convince him beyond a doubt that the woman is fooling him, and I appeal to you to accomplish that if possible."

John Turner sat in deep thought for awhile, then said:

"You are asking me to make a breach between Jim and me, but since it is far better that it should occur between him and me than between his father and himself I will do what I can in the matter, but my experience is that one who interferes between a man and the woman he loves or a girl and the man she loves gets himself disliked without securing the desired end. I will, however, try to form a plan by which I may show Jim the woman's character without his being aware that I know she is the woman he loves. He has asked me to go with him to call upon her, but I have always put him off with some excuse. She has never seen me, which will give me an advantage. This is all I can say to you at present. If I save Jim from an unfortunate marriage, even at the expense of our friendship, I shall rejoice. Besides, I would gladly serve his father."

Mr. Dillon rose, pressed Turner's hand and left him with thanks for the spirit in which he had received his request. Dillon, whose inventive faculties seemed to need the stimulant of tobacco, lighted a pipe and sat down to think upon what he considered a problem, the solution of which was almost hopeless.

One afternoon not long after the interview between Mr. Dillon and John Turner the latter telephoned his friend Jim to meet him at their club for dinner. He hoped Jim would not fail him, since he had a communication to make of a confidential nature. Dillon, who had no engagement with his fiancee for that evening, promised to be present, and at the appointed hour the two met in the club lounging room.

"What is it, old man?" asked Dillon.

"I'm in love," replied Turner.

"Good; there's an additional bond of union between us. You now know how I feel, and we can sympathize with each other. Who is she?"

"The loveliest woman on the face of the earth."

"There I must differ with you," smiled Jim. "I happen to be engaged to the loveliest woman on earth myself."

"When you see the one I refer to you will acknowledge yourself mistaken."

"Well, well; we won't quarrel about that. Tell me of her."

"She is confiding and gentle, but withal strong in honesty."

"She must be Clara Markland's twin sister."

"She is no woman's twin sister. There may be double stars in the firmament of the heavens, but the woman who has honored me with her regard is a central sun."

"You're enthusiastic, John. What a change from the man who received the announcement of my engagement so coldly! You've caught the fever yourself, my boy, and know now what a fiery disease it is. But you haven't told me the lady's name."

"Nor can I at present."

"Why?"

"Because we are not engaged."

"But you will be. Besides, there's no harm in telling a chum that you love a certain woman. On the contrary, you are paying her a compliment."

"There is harm in telling any friend that a certain woman is considering whether or no she will accept an offer of marriage from me."

"You should certainly marry an honorable woman. Your own sense of honor is too keen to be practical."

"It is that high sense of honor inborn in the woman I love which makes me honorable. It is understood between us that neither shall say anything to involve the other till I have her final answer. If I supposed it possible for you to discover whom I refer to I should never hold up my head again."

The two friends while at dinner and during the evening spent the time each eulogizing the woman he loved, and when they parted Jim exacted a promise that John would introduce him to his love just as soon as an engagement had taken place between them.

"By the bye," he added, "when are you going with me to call on Clara?"

"After my return from a business trip I must take within a day or two. I have only one evening before my departure that could be applied in this way, and you know with whom I would be likely to spend it."

"I certainly do."

John Turner did not report himself to his friend Dillon as back from his journey for several weeks when one morning he appeared in the latter's office, his exuberant manner somewhat changed. He made no reference to his love affair till Jim asked him about it, then said that there was a hitch. The young lady was in great tribulation over it. By keeping it secret she had hoped to gain time in which to win the approval of her father to the match. But thus far she had failed. He was in favor of her marrying another man, one who was the prospective heir to a fortune. "She loves me," John added mournfully, "but she and her father are very close. She can't bear to disappoint him. Besides, she is one of those persons who are prone to act for the good of others at their own expense."

"Who's your rival?" asked Jim.

"That I don't know. The lady would not be justified in telling me."

"How do you know she really loves you?"

"While I trust her implicitly, I must admit that I have no other proof than her word that she does."

Jim mentioned the call they were to make together, but John felt so despondent about his own affair that he begged off till something definite in it should have been reached.

One day John told Jim that he had persuaded his love to accept a ring from him. It was to be an engagement ring if they became engaged, and if they were not engaged the lady insisted upon its return. John asked his friend to go with him to a jeweler and assist in the selection of the gift. Jim did not quite understand how a woman so sensitively honorable as his friend's lady love had been described could accept a ring under the circumstances. Nevertheless the case seemed to be a peculiar one, and he understood from John that he regarded the gift as a possible stepping stone to an engagement.

The two friends visited a jeweler in company, and the ring selected was one that Turner especially fancied. There were two diamonds held in the fangs of a snake. Dillon condemned the ring as entirely inappropriate to the occasion. But Turner's heart seemed set on it, and he bought it. He left it with the jeweler to have the lady's initials engraved in it, explaining to his friend that, his own mind being made up, this was allowable. When the lady made up her mind to take him his own initials could be put in.

Soon after the purchase of the ring Turner told Dillon that he had received permission to take him to call on the lady of his love. Dillon gladly accepted the invitation.

When they went up the steps of the dwelling, to which Turner led the way, Dillon stopped and exclaimed:

"For heaven's sake, John, what does this mean?"

"It means," was the reply, "that this is the house where lives the woman who has admitted that she loves me."

Dillon had run up the steps and pushed the bell. Before Jim could speak again the door was opened by a servant. John waited for Jim to enter, then went in himself. Clara Markland was seated in the drawing room. At seeing the two men she paled. Then she tried to slip from her finger a ring. But before she could do so her fiance had seen it and recognized the gift he had seen when his friend had bought it.

It was an impressive tableau—the woman who feared that she had lost an advantageous match, the undeceived lover and the man who had played the game.

"I now see, John," said Dillon in an icy tone, "why you fancied the two diamonds in the fangs of a serpent."

"Well, gentlemen," said Miss Markland, "how does it happen that you two call together?"

"I leave it to my friend to make the explanation," said Dillon. "I had no idea that he was taking me to call on my fiancee."

"Since whatever motive," said Turner, "that I may have had has been accomplished—namely, to prove to a deceived man his deception—I am not needed here. I leave you two together to make up this little difference."

The difference the lady succeeded in making up, which meant an enmity on the part of her lover for his chum. When Dillon next met Turner he passed him without speaking to him. Dillon married Miss Markland, and so long as a small fortune left him by his mother lasted she used it to float herself in the fashionable world. Meanwhile Mr. Dillon, Sr., died and left his estate in Turner's hands in trust for his son, to be paid him on certain conditions. When Dillon's means were exhausted his wife left him. Then one day he called on Turner to ask his forgiveness.

Turner told him that he was permitted by his father's will to pay him any money of which his wife could reap no benefit.

The friendship that was interrupted during this period of young Dillon's marriage became closer than ever. As to the woman, she drifted away from both of them.

MEXICO CITY IN HANDS OF SOLDIER MOB

Mutinous Troops Attack Palace.

150 FALL IN FIGHTING

President Madero Able to Hold Government House.

DIAZ COMMANDS THE REBELS

Uprising Is Opening of Widespread Revolutionary Plot.

Mexico City, Feb. 10.—Three Americans, two women and one man, were killed in the fighting at the palace.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 10. — In late message to the Juarez commander, President Madero states that Felix Diaz has been made a prisoner and that the loyal troops are in control of the situation. Private messages say, however, that many of the police and supposed loyal troops have joined the mutineers and rebels during the day and that more trouble is feared.

Mexico City, Mex., Feb. 10.—The national capital of Mexico became a battlefield. One hundred and fifty were killed by noon and the wounded are said to total several hundred.

Fighting in the streets of the capital opened in the morning at 5 o'clock, when part of the federal troops in the capital rose in mutiny, first attacking the military prison and releasing General Felix Diaz and General Bernardo Reyes. Diaz immediately took command of the mutinous troops and led them in an assault upon the national palace, where President Francisco I. Madero was at that time asleep. Part of the guards at the palace remained loyal and Madero took command in person and led them through the streets.

President Holds Palace.

The president was able to hold the palace and drive the mutineers off, but in other parts of the city the mutineers were more successful. These defeated the bands of loyal troops in several localities and killed 150 by noon. Many spectators were also wounded and the principal buildings of the city were badly shot up.

In the afternoon it was declared that Madero had disappeared from the palace and that he was either in hiding or a prisoner of the rebels. In the event of his being made a prisoner it is believed that his execution will occur in a short time.

PRESIDENT MADERO

General Real Falls in Fray.

General Villa Real, one of the loyal army officers, was killed in the fighting. Many other officers of lesser rank also met death in attempting to resist the mutineers and the rebels. Joined by the mob, the mutineers were soon but a small part of the rebel army in the actual conflict. Men with guns and pistols came from all quarters to join the Diaz troops in the fighting. The Diaz men were reckless with their firearms and bullets flew everywhere. People were shot in their homes as they were hiding from the trouble. Bombs, hand grenades and other weapons common to the rebels were used.

Treasury Building Damaged.

The treasury was one of the points of rebel attack and the handsome building was badly damaged. It is declared that the rebels succeeded in reaching the vaults and obtaining a quantity of money.

Gustavo Madero, brother of the president, who recently returned from a diplomatic mission to Japan, was made a prisoner by the mutineers. The rebels have a stronger hatred for him than for the president. Gustavo drew $30,000 from the federal government shortly after his brother became president for financial assistance he was supposed to have furnished the Madero revolutionists. He was also granted many concessions by the government and the rebels charge that he went to Japan to sell that nation a Pacific coast coaling station to raise money to fight the rebels.

Gustavo wears a monocle and so strong is his influence over his brother, that the rebels call the Madero rule "The one-eyed government."

General Diaz in Command.

General Felix Diaz, who is now the supreme leader of the rebels in the capital, was under sentence of death by a military court martial for his recent attempt at rebellion at Vera Cruz.

GENERAL FELIX DIAZ

Revolutionary Leader Freed and Active Against Madero.

General Reyes was in jail waiting trial for attempting to start a revolution in Nuevo Leon about a year ago. One rumor has it that General Reyes was shot in the fighting, but it lacks confirmation. The city is in such a turmoil that rumors of all sorts are flying. Many are confirmed and many are disproved. Where the loyal troops hold sway, martial law prevails and nobody is permitted to pass. The telegraph offices are under guard.

Move to Unseat Madero.

General Victoriano Huerta, General Bernardo Reyes and General Felix Diaz are said to be in thorough accord with the operations and to have decided that to strike in the national capital was the proper solution of the attempt to unseat Madero, seeing that the operations throughout the country for the past eighteen months have been failures.

General Huerta is to be the commander of the south in the new revolt, it is declared, and General Pascual Orozco, Jr., is to take command in the north, while Trevino is to be president and General Felix Diaz is to be secretary of war.

The present uprising is strictly an army uprising, but has the approval of the rebels.

Dispatches received here state that the garrisons at Monterey, San Luis Potosi, Saltillo and Vera Cruz have revolted. It is not known whether there has been any fighting in either of these cities, as the reports are very meager.

The whereabouts of Gustavo Madero, brother of President Madero, who has been taken a prisoner by the mutineers here, has not been learned, but it is believed that he has been hurried from the city to be held as hostage.

The American colony has not been molested and it is not believed that there is any danger.

General Villa Real, who assumed command of the royalists when President Madero returned to the palace, was killed while fighting desperately at the head of his command.

The heaviest fighting took place in the neighborhood of the federal prison, after the revolting troopers had succeeded in affecting the release of Diaz and Reyes.

The situation is very critical.

STATUS QUO TO BE PRESERVED

President Taft Will Not Intervene in Mexico.

WILL NOT EMBARRAS WILSON

Indications Now Are, However, That Next President Will Have Lively Questions of Policy to Decide at Once—Warships Will Be Sent When Reports of Revolt Are Confirmed.

Washington, Feb. 10. — The latest explosion in Mexico City will not result in intervention in Mexico during the three weeks remaining of the Taft administration. It is authoritatively stated that President Taft's policy of non-intervention will be maintained to the last hour of his occupancy of the White House.

In the absence of any official confirmation of the events reported from Mexico City, no comment on the revolt was obtainable. The officials of the state department were still waiting for dispatches from Ambassador Wilson.

Warships Will Be Sent.

It is practically certain that upon the receipt of the first official confirmation of the upheaval in the Mexican capital, warships will be dispatched to the important ports of Mexico on both the east and west coasts. There is now only one American warship in Mexican waters, the Denver, which is at Acapulco. The entire Atlantic fleet, however, is at Guatanamo Bay, Cuba, within easy striking distance of the east coast of Mexico, while Admiral Sutherland has two cruisers, the Colorado and the South Dakota, ready to sail at short notice from San Diego.

There is already a sufficient force of United States troops along the Mexican border to handle any situation which may arise there, short of an actual invasion of Mexican territory. Brigadier General Steever, commanding at El Paso, reported to Major General Wood that it was rumored there that Madera had been deposed, but stated that he was unable to confirm this report or to give any details of the rumored event.

Protection for Americans.

The sending of warships to Mexican ports, if it is deemed necessary as a result of the events in Mexico City, will be solely for the purpose of affording a refuge and protection for Americans who may be endangered by possible disorders arising out of the revolt in the capital. It is definitely known that President Taft will instruct any American troops sent to the scene to be discreet in their conduct and avoid as far as possible the necessity for landing armed forces on Mexican soil or the use of force in any way to bring the United States into a clash with Mexico.

In view of President Taft's conviction that duty required him to do his utmost to preserve the status quo with regard to relations with Mexico, in order not to embarrass his successor, the certainty that President Wilson will have to make an immediate decision with regard to Mexico was regarded as the most interesting phase of the new situation.

Thinks Intervention Certain.

"This is good news, if true," said Senator Catron of New Mexico, when informed of the result in Mexico City. "It will bring about intervention by the United States, which must sooner or later send its troops across the border and stop the riot and anarchy in old Mexico.

"If this report from Mexico is true, it means that the downfall of Madero will prove a blessing in disguise, not only to the Mexican people, but to the citizens of the United States. This government should have intervened before. It must intervene now. Far better now than months hence."

SCUTARI ALLIES STORM OUTPOST

Montenegrins and Servians in Combined Attack.

KING NICHOLAS LEADS TROOPS

Ineffective Sortie Made by Turkish Soldiers to South of Fortress—Two Ottoman Ships Sunk on Lake Scutari—Army of Sultan Is Repulsed in Action at Tchataldja.

Podgoritza, Montenegro, Feb. 10.—A general attack by the combined Montenegrin and Servian armies was opened on the Turkish fortress of Scutari.

The infantry followed up the bombardment by storming the hill at the point of the bayonet, driving the Turks out of their works and capturing the position.

A sortie was attempted by the Turkish troops to the south of Scutari, but was ineffective.

Two Ottoman ships were also sunk on Lake Scutari.

Turks Repulsed at Tchataldja.

Sofia, Feb. 10.—All attempts on the part of the Turks to assume the offensive at the Tchataldja lines have been repulsed. A semi-official dispatch, giving details of the fighting, says the Turks advanced in three columns.

The first, consisting of six battalions, supported by the guns of Fort Gjuartabia and the warships moored in Biyuk Chekmeje bay, attacked the Bulgarian positions at Arnautkaui, but was driven back by a counter attack. The second column of two battalions was forced to retire beyond the Karalu river. The third column of one regiment was routed with great slaughter by bayonet charges.

In the Derkes district the attempts of the Turks were also repulsed and they withdrew to their original positions.

The bombardment of Adrianople continues.

SEE DEAL ON SENATORSHIP

Legislators Admit Trade Will Be Made in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 10.—The senatorship fight has opened in Springfield now that the legislators are getting back and facing the open proposition that neither the long nor the short term senatorships can be filled until a trade is made on the floor of the general assembly.

This was realized by Governor Dunne when he admitted that the Democratic caucus tonight will not pick a short term candidate who is to become the real candidate for the Democrats until the long time senator is elected.

SLAYS THREE NEGROES IN FATHER'S FACTORY

Evansville Young Man Deals Death with Revolver.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 10.—With an automatic pistol in each hand, Allen von Behren, a military school graduate twenty-three years old, walked through his father's factory and shot to death three negro workmen who had been giving him trouble and at whose hands he feared violence.

The men were shot down without warning. None of them was armed. Two of the men, John Gordon and Henry Gordon, were shot through the head; a third, Walter Washington, was bored through the heart, but ran after he was shot and the young man fired three times more.

The killing was the direct result of race prejudice in the factory. Negroes had been placed at work beside white men. Young Von Behren had appealed to his father, who believes in race equality in factories, to have the worst of the negroes discharged.

Young Von Behren jumped into his father's automobile, rode to the police station, and gave himself up.

"I had to kill them," he declared. "They swore they would 'get me.'"

Extra precautions are being taken by the police in the department, fearing that a race war may break out as a result of the shooting.

FREEPORT DEMOCRAT ELOPES TO CHICAGO

Douglas Pattison Weds Miss Ida M. Andress.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—Douglas Pattison of Freeport, minority leader in the Illinois legislature in 1907 and candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor a year later, married in Chicago.

It was an elopement, in which Mr. Pattison took for his bride Miss Ida M. Andress of Dixon, former court reporter for Judge O. E. Heard of the Fifteenth district court of Illinois.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. M. Crissman, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Dixon, who came to Chicago with the elopers. In a few days Mr. and Mrs. Pattison will sail for Europe, where they will spend three months on a honeymoon trip. On their return they will make their home in Freeport.

The marriage was the culmination of a romantic courtship that began when Mr. Pattison met Miss Andress officially during the trial of a case before Judge Heard. He was captivated by her charm and thereafter had occasion frequently to visit the courtroom on "official business."

Friends of both bride and bridegroom were greatly surprised by the wedding, which marks Mr. Pattison's second matrimonial venture. He was divorced two years ago from his first wife, who formerly was an actress, and who now is in California with their little daughter.

DOUBLE SURPRISE

Mrs. Cummins also had a birthday on this date, but thought it would go unnoticed, but not so. In the evening about 40 of the Royal Neighbors, husbands and wives gave her a most genuine surprise bringing a picnic supper with them. Cards and a jolly good time filled in the evening until a late hour.

SHOOTING A BUTTERFLY.

The largest butterfly known is found only in British New Guinea and specimens are worth anything from $100 upward. The male measures eight inches across the wings and the female not less than eleven inches, a wing spread exceeding that of many small birds.

The story of the first discovery of this gigantic butterfly is a curious one, says The Wide World. A naturalist saw a specimen perched on the top of a tree and failing to capture it by any other means finally shot it.

From the fragments he decided that the species was entirely unknown to science and he forthwith fitted out an expedition at a cost of many thousands of dollars to go in search of the insects.

Two members of the party fell victims to the Papuan cannibals and another was rescued only in the nick of time. Spite of this inauspicious commencement to his enterprise, however, the naturalist persevered and ultimately succeeded in obtaining perfect specimens.

A Persistent Foe.

Much has been said of late in favor of the extensive cultivation of the black locust, and one railroad company is reported to have planted nearly 1,500,000 trees of this species, with the view of utilizing their extraordinary durable wood. But Charles A. White of the Smithsonian Institution points out, in the Popular Science Monthly, that the black locust possesses a mortal enemy in a longicorn beetle, which bores the wood through and through. It is a native of the same regions in which the tree flourishes, and depends upon the tree for its own existence. When population flowed to Illinois and Iowa, the black locust was taken along. It flourished luxuriantly for some years, until its insect foe followed it, and now, says Mr. White, nothing remains of the great groves of black locust in the middle West except blasted remnants. The tree, native east of the Alleghenies, from New York to the Gulf, was also transplanted to Europe, whither its enemy has not followed it.

Air Purification.

Purification of the air of great cities is a subject which continually attracts wider attention. Recently the commissioners of works in London, alarmed by the establishment of factories consuming thousands of tons of coal a week, have asked Parliament to consider the matter. They recognize, for the first time officially, says the Engineer, that the getting rid of black smoke would not suffice to cure the trouble. Other products of combustion besides soot, such as sulphurous and sulphuric acid and solid mineral particles, are deleterious to vegetation, to buildings, to metal objects, and to the pictures, marbles and other treasures contained in museums. The elimination of these impurities from the air is an important part of the problem.

Sorrows of the Rich.

Almost any millionaire would be willing to give up a large percentage of his fortune if he could tell the difference between a masterpiece and a daub.

L. O. T. M. M.

Eleven Hives of Lenawee County Represented

The third meeting of the Lenawee County Convention of the L. O. T. M. M., met in Tecumseh Friday, Feb. 7. Members were present from Adrian, Holloway, Blissfield, Britton, Palmyra, Clayton, Cement City, Addison, Medina and Deerfield. There were 129 members of the Lenawee Association present in the afternoon, with 3 members from other hives, and 32 visitors from outside.

The Convention opened at 10:30 in the morning with roll call of officers and prayer, business meeting followed. Blissfield extended an invitation to the Convention to meet there for the next annual meeting which was accepted, to meet May 1st. The meeting adjourned to dinner, after which it was convened again at 1:30 with the Great Commander, Frances E Burns of St. Louis, Mich., in the chair. Mrs. A. G. Heidenreich gave the address of welcome, which was responded to by Mrs. Rosine of Adrian. Public initiation then followed, the work being exemplified by the Adrian hive. Five candidates, Mrs. Edna Staulter, Mrs. Mame Kelly and Zella Bennett of Tecumseh, and two from out of town were taken into the order.

Miss Edna Gaston sang a solo in her own delightful manner. Question box was next on the program, Lady Burns answering all questions so that they were understood by all present. A fancy drill by the Addison guards was much enjoyed, it being conducted in fine style. Miss Lydia Jewett and Mrs. Mame Roberts of Blissfield rendered a charming duet. Mrs. Fox of Adrian gave a very pleasing reading. Mrs. R. S. Moore gave a solo responding to an encore. Mrs. Storing of Addison gave an interesting reading which closed the program.

Mrs. Burns gave a very interesting address on fraternal meetings, and touched on the suffrage movement and its benefits to women. Her address was full of thought and practical advice

The meeting closed with many pleasant hand shakes and good words for the pleasant manner in which the meeting had been conducted.

NEW CLUB

Mrs. Andrew Wilson believes in working for the good of the order, so while in Tipton last week at the ladies Aid Society, she gave a talk on Club work which resulted in forming a Club under the name of "The Tipton Ladies Club with officers as follows:

President—Mrs. Bertha Ruesink
Vice President—Mrs. Addie Kemp
Secretary—Mrs Laura Billington
Treasurer—Mrs. Helen Greenwald,

The "Marseillaise."

It depends upon what you mean by "great." If by great you mean the power of firing the heart and rousing the will, then there is no other "national song" that comes within a thousand miles of the "Marseillaise." "The sound of it," remarks Carlyle, "will make the blood tingle in men's veins, and whole armies and assemblages will sing it with eyes weeping and burning, and hearts defiant of death and despots." It is the greatest soul-awakener ever known on this earth. The famous anthem was composed in 1793, by Rouget de Lisle. The scene of its birth was not, as some suppose, Marseilles, but Strasburg. It took its name from the fact that a force of Marseillaise first marched to its inspiring strains.

History of Cotton.

Prior to the middle of the eighteenth century cotton, so far as modern time is concerned, was practically unknown. It was grown only in the flower garden. When eight bags of the staple arrived in Liverpool in 1784 the custom house officers seized it on the ground that so much could not have been raised in America. In 1787 our first cotton mill was set in motion at Beverly, Mass. In 1793 Whitney invented the cotton gin, which rendered cotton raising profitable, and it soon became the leading crop of the South. The Southern United States produce most of the cotton of the world, and will in all probility continue for all time to hold a monopoly of the staple.

The Habitable Earth.

The entire habitable area of the earth is given at 46,000,000 square miles, of which the extreme fertile limit may be put at 37,000,000 square miles. With the generally accepted sustaining capacity of 200 persons to the square mile, this area could, by systematic tillage, be made to yield subsistence to 7,400,000,000 human beings. It has been calculated that within 210 years the world's population will be swelled to 7,440,000,000 souls. What will happen 300 years hence, when the population of the earth will be 16,000,000,000, remains to be seen.

War of 1812.

The treaty of Ghent between England and the United States, December 24, 1814, ended the War of 1812. Its main provisions were the restoration of all territory, places and possessions taken by either party from the other during the war, except certain islands.

AMUSEMENT

"THE HEART BREAKERS"

One of the heaviest scenes that has ever been used with a musical comedy will be seen in the second act of "The Heart Breakers" at the Bradley Opera House next Friday, February 14. The scene shows three rooms in the Castle Munger in the Adirondacks. It is where the "Saxons" or "Heart Breakers" come disguised as servants to help the "master", George Damerel to win the "girl." The set is made in three different sections, one being the parlor down stairs and the other being two living rooms up stairs. Everything is practical as would be used in a regular house. The doors are solid, also the winding stairway where over twenty people run up and down, same as you would in your own house. This set requires alone sixteen stage hands besides the six men that are carried by the company. Manager Singer sent two artists to the Adirondaks especially to get locals for this one act.

Many musical plays have come from Manager Mort H. Singer's playhouse, but none better has been sent out by this astute manager than the "Heart Breakers" his latest musical comedy hit, direct from the Princess Theatre, and now in its second season on the road. Heading the brilliant all star cast is George Damerel, who was last seen in the "Merry Widow." Associated with him will be Manager Singers latest find in the musical comedy world, Miss Myrtle Vail, who will make her first appearance as a prima donna in America, the young lady having been in Europe studing for the past three years. The play is in two acts and is a riot of catchy music, beautifully gowned girls, magnificent stage settings, and intricate electrical effects. Chief among the song hits are "My Honolulu Honey Lou," "The Tale of the Bashful Bumble Bee," "Somewhere She's Flirting with Someone," "Your Eyes, Your Smile and You," and many others. Mr. Damerel, who is known as one of the most graceful dancers on the stage will introduce a new waltz number, assisted by Miss Myrtle Vail, that bids fair to make him as "The Merry Widow" Waltz which he danced for five years.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

A very pleasant birthday surprise was given Paul Mull who lives over in Brownville on Thursday Feb. 6, when he reached his 81st birthday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs Oscar Mull of Wamplers Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Mull and son of Adrian, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Mull and son, Mr and Mrs. Samuel Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boyd and Nina Mull of Tecumseh. A fine three course dinner was served. Mr. Mull received many useful gifts.

Mr. Mull and wife celebrated their golden wedding in 1902. She passing away in June 1912, they were the parents of eight children, all but one living at this time.

Mr. Mull is a smart old man despite his years, and can entertain a company with tales of the olden times. He is a sturdy Pennsylvania dutchman with all their peculiarities.

COAST TO COAST

Four Years Experience as a Marine

BY WM. M. OLDS

Nov. 28, the ship officers got a message from the American minister at Pekin, requesting them to send a company of marines to that place to guard the American mission, and as we had the oldest and most experienced Captain of all the other companies, it fell upon Co. E, 2nd., the company I was in to go to Pekin. We transferred a lot of goods to a British tug the next morning, and left at 9 a. m. going to the U. S. Saratoga anchored 9 miles down the river, with 200 marines and sailors aboard.

The Saratoga raised anchor and started for Pekin at 3:30 p. m. Nov 29. The next day was Thanksgiving day my second Thanksgiving out of sight of land. We had a fine Thanksgiving dinner. In the evening we had a moving picture show and some fine pictures were shown. The ship anchored 15 miles out at sea on account of the shallow water which would not permit ships to go nearer, so we had to again change to a Chinese tug to reach the dock of Taku. We got there in two hours and ten minutes from the time we left the Saratoga on the morning of the second, we landed at Tapu and changed our stores from the tug and put them in box cars that stood on a side track at that place. In one hour and thirty minutes the marines got in the passenger coaches ahead of the freight cars and the train started on its trip to Pekin. Ninety miles inland from the coast between Taku and Tientsin the ground was nearly all covered with snow, the first snow I had seen since the morning of Nov. 29, 1908, a little over three years.

On this route over the railroad and along the high way between Taku and Pekin, is where the foreign troops of American, British, German, French, and Japanese troops fought so bravely with the Boxers in 1900, in order to save the men, women and children inside the Legations at Pekin. Tientsin stands forty-five miles from the coast, and forty-five miles from Pekin.

We reached Pekin in four hours after leaving Taku. When we got to the American Legation one mile from the railway station, it was nearly supper time and we were quite tired and hungry. When we ate our first meal inside the Legation, we found the Legation was the finest feeding post in the marine corps, this is on account of every thing being sold so cheap in China. The Legation quarter at Pekin is just inside the great wall that stands around the city of Pekin, and the street that runs through the Legations is one and a half mile long, running from east to west with Legation guards on each side of the street belonging to different nations.

In time of peace the strength of the U. S. Legation is two hundred soldiers but on account of the civil war that started in 1911, our company brought the number up to three hundred. Out of the one hundred and fifty thousand soldiers in the U. S. army and navy in 1911 and 1912, the number that saw service in China did not exceed three thousand. In 1911 and 1912 there were seven members of the U. S Legation in Pekin, who had homes in the State of Michigan, three men whose homes were in Detroit, two in Grand Rapids, one in Saginaw, and myself in Tecumseh.

Peking stands among the deserts of North China. Deserts that are a paradise in summer with their many miles of growing grain, rice, and vegetables, some of the finest fields of corn that I ever saw, grows around Pekin, the growing season is a few weeks longer than ours is. The reason the place is called a desert, is on account of the scarcity of other soils. Areas covering hundreds of square miles does not contain a speck of black ground, but its a sand that will grow any thing with plenty of rain.

The climate in North China would be delightful and healthy in winter, if it was not for the terrible sand storms that take place four or five times each month, from the first of December to the first of April.

AUBURN PLANTS IN RUINS

Fire Destroys Newspaper's Home and Tire Factory in Indiana Town.

Auburn, Ind., Feb. 10. — Fire destroyed an entire business block here and caused a loss to W. H. McIntyre, owner of the building, of more than $25,000 in addition to destroying the $10,000 plant of the Auburn Daily and Weekly Courier and that of the Double Fabric Tire company, manufacturers of inner tires. The tire company's loss is placed at $25,000.

One part of the building was used by the county for temporary office quarters while the new courthouse is being erected. Most of the larger books and records were carried safely from the building.

The fire started in the rear of the room used by the Courier company and ignited a tank of gasoline. There was an explosion, heard for blocks, which sent the flames through the entire building.

Insurance was carried on the building by Mr. McIntyre. The tire company also was insured, but not enough to meet the loss.

Mr. McIntyre is in Chicago attending the automobile show.

Afterward he showed great improvement, and last September made a trip to London, accompanied by his wife. During the trip abroad his condition became much worse and he returned here in November. Shortly after that he took to his bed and has not been able to leave it since.

Before Mr. Major became famous as an author he practiced law in this city.

CINDERELLA

As Presented by the H. T. Club Friday Evening Feb 7

The old, but ever new story of Cinderella was presented at the Garlinghouse home on Friday evening to a full house and was received with rounds of applause.

Burton Garlinghouse and Perry Hayden as haughty sisters deserve special mention, sustaining their parts most beautifully throughout. Miss Camilla Hayden made a mother worthy of the occassion. Dear little Cinderella as impersonated by Miss Nerissa Fitzsimmons was a most winning character and when touched by the wand of the fairy Godmother was a princess worthy the homage of Prince Charming who was most charmingly represented by Master John Garlinghouse. As herald and general manager of the play Joey Satterthwaite was a perfect success and deserves promotion.

Way back in her lonely kitchen poor Cinderella is seen sitting by the grate and trying to be patient, but oh, she does want to go to the ball. Of a sudden enters the fairy Godmother, who works her charm and Cinderella is soon transported to the ball. The next scene is the ball room and while the guests are waiting for the music, a princess is announced. Cinderella enters and is the wonder and envy of all the others. As the clock is striking 12 she disappears leaving her slipper in her haste. The next scene is in the home and the haughty sisters are yawning and complaining of their weariness when guests are announced.

The Herald appears with the prince and the slipper, Alas! their feet are quite too large despite the efforts of the mother who with hammer in hand tries to secure it for one of these Enter Cinderella only to be ordered back to the kitchen, but by order of the prince she too tries the slipper and the owner is found at last, the Godmother again plays her part and the beautiful princess appears again

Each one took their part in a fine manner and the costumes were wonderful to behold. During the waits between scenes music was given on the piano and the audience was also called upon to answer a few conundrums given by the ever ready Joe.

The evenings entertainment was very pleasant indeed and the H. T's. are to be congratulated on their success.

Coffee and sandwiches were served later.

It is to be regretted that the honorary members of the H. T. Club, Miss Frances and Master Marvin Hayden of Grand Rapids, Miss Beatrice Rawson of Cleveland, Master Hayden Ware of Kansas City, Mo., Mr. Wm. McGlashen of Buffalo N. Y. were unable to be present on Friday evening.

The Tecumseh members of the H. T. Club assisted by some of their friends putting on the play,

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says:

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Stanley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man sings a lullaby it naturally sounds rocky.

Conductor S. L. Miller, Norfolk, Nebr., on Bonesteel Division of C. & N. W. Ry., Co., recommends Foley Kidney Pills and says:—"I have used Foley Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and endorse their use for any one afflicted with kidney trouble. They are all right." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What has become of the old-fashioned widow who used to "set her cap" for No. 2?

Mrs. S. S. S., Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

ROAR OF THE ARCTIC.

Sullen Thunder of the Gales and the "Voices of the Ice."

Most of us cherish the idea that in the far reaches of the Arctic circle there prevails an everlasting deathlike stillness. But those who have spent much time in the far north assure us that that region is far from being silent, although so little life is manifest for the greater part of the year.

On polar seas the ice, though thick and solid as granite, is hardly ever still. There are tides in the arctic, and these lift and lower the huge icefields, causing them to give out all manner of noises. Even as late as November the pack will wake up without warning and pile itself in huge heaps with indescribable crashings, groanings and roarings. Peary speaks of the "rabid roar" of the "tumbling chaos of ice blocks." His Eskimos were terribly frightened and set up weird howlings. The dogs whined and barked, and altogether the noise was terrific. Every arctic explorer has given similar accounts.

The movements of the ice—the gradual crowding and pressing, bending and pushing, the breaking of the masses of snow lying at the "ice foot"—have given rise to the expression of explorers, "The voices of the ice." It may be that one will hear a low singing, splashing or grumbling, alternating with various other sounds, cracking and snapping. These sound irregularly from a great distance, like a confusion of human voices, the racket of a railway train or the skurrying of a sledging party. Then, again, the noises are such as to cause the explorer to fancy he hears the steps and voices of various species of animals.

Spring is the noisiest time in the polar seas. McClure of the Investigator compared the breaking up of the ice at that season to heavy thunder or the sound of great guns. Another writer likened the sound of the breaking ice floe to that produced by a volcanic eruption.

Moreover, the air in the arctic regions is seldom absolutely still. Gales are frequent. The winter winds, according to Peary, blow with almost unimaginable fury. On one occasion in the cabins of the Roosevelt the sound resembled that of some gigantic power plant, everything vibrating to the pulsation of the machinery. The whole atmosphere was filled with the deep, sullen roar of the wind, and so thick was the cloud of snow picked up and swept forward on the wings of the gale that powerful lamps were invisible ten feet away.

On high ground, such as that of inner Greenland, the wind is never still. Nansen tells of the constant hiss of the breeze laden with tiny bits of ice, which flowed along knee high like a shining white river glittering in the pale arctic sunlight.

Nor is there lack of sounds caused by animal life. In the arctic may often be heard the baying of wolves and the barking of seal, while in the summer the harsh cry of sea birds echoes along the faces of the cliffs.—Harper's Weekly.

NOTES OF LEGISLATURES.

Indianapolis — Senator Zearing's bill to allow theaters and moving picture shows to be open on Sunday caused a stir which threatens to cause legislation forbidding Sunday baseball.

Des Moines—Prohibition of intermarriage of negroes and whites, was defeated in the house when a bill received twelve votes short of the needed majority. Reconsideration of the measure will be moved.

Olympia, Wash.—Governor Lister received a telegram from Secretary of State Knox asking him to use his influence to delay further consideration of the alien ownership bills, which forbid Chinese and Japanese to hold land in the state, until the department of state can examine them in the light of treaty obligations.

For The Nervous Woman,

Or the women who experiences hot flashes nothing is so good to soothe, quiet and calm the nervous system as a pure glyceric extract of native medical plants, and made without alcohol, which has been sold by druggists for the past forty years, and most favorably known as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In younger years some women suffer from dizziness, or fainting spells, hysteria, headache, bearing-down feelings and pain. All these symptoms of irregularity and female disturbance are relieved by the use of this famous "Prescription" of Doctor Pierce.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system, and in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. For over-worked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is an excellent appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

"My disease was called retroversion," writes MRS. LYDIA MCDONALD, of Mecosta, Mich., Route 1. "I had nervous chills and numb spells and they would leave me very weak. Then I had inflammation and the doctor said I had a floating kidney. I doctored seven months with our family physician. He said I would have to have an operation. Then I stopped taking his medicine. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicines I have not had any nervous chills or weak spells. I am better than for years.

"My daughter is now taking the 'Prescription' and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, also the 'Pellets' for nervousness and weak, tired feeling. These remedies have helped her ever so much in a short time. We have great faith in your medicines for female troubles."

MRS. MCDONALD.

PANIC IN PICTURE THEATER

Two Women Killed and Over Twenty Hurt in New York House.

At New York two young women were killed and more than a score of men, women and children were badly hurt in a panic at the Houston Street Hippodrome, a moving picture concern, at 143 East Houston street. A blind, unreasoning panic at the shout of "Fire" swept an east side audience of 800 out into the entrance way to the showhouse where they clutched and tore and trampled upon each other.

The fire itself, the quick flash of a moving picture film, was out in three minutes. The operator himself had smothered the blaze that was the cause of the death of two before the firemen could fight their way through the terrorized crowd to his assistance.

THE MAGIC HORN

Their Dreams Came True

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The road wound sinuously between tall hedges of blackberry and cat brier. Woodbine draped the young locusts along the fence, and in places the wild grape vines had flung tendrils across the intervening space until they formed a green arbor overhead. The sand yielded easily to the tread, and on either side of the road there was a hard beaten footpath. It was a road for slow moving country wagons or for pedestrians and had never known the arrogance of a motorcar.

Rose Lewis lingered under the grapevines where the sun filtered through and cast flickering shadows on her white hat and gown. Beneath the hat's brim her face looked forth as sweet as her namesakes, the wild roses of the hedge. Under her arm was a roll of music, for she had been giving a piano lesson to the smallest Jones girl, and the hour had been one of such excruciating discords that Rose had sought the lane road, hoping that the song of a thrush might obliterate the inharmonious sounds that still rang in her head.

The thrush was singing on a tall wind bent chestnut tree, and as he swayed to and fro, thrilled with the ecstasy of his own song, Rose paused to watch him. When he had ceased and had winged his way to the woods beyond the girl still stood there enchanted by the bird notes from bough and thicket until from the highway that ran through the valley below there came the melody of a horn. Rose had heard it once before. Late at night it had sounded directly under her window, and she had seen the flash of passing lights and the crunch of automobile tires in the road as the machine whizzed past, and the sound had left its impression upon her.

Now she started again as it echoed through the valley, coming nearer, nearer. She knew that if she hurried to the end of the lane road she would see it pass, but she didn't want to see it. Rose Lewis was a dreamer of dreams, and she preferred to delude herself with the fairy tales of her childhood. Now she laughed as she told herself that it was the magic horn of the fairy prince who was coming to rescue her from a thicket of dangerous thorns. She certainly would not go to the end of the road and see her dream shattered by a mud splashed automobile filled with veiled and goggled forms.

The highway crossed the winding lane just below the tree where the thrush had sung. The horn sounded again, coming nearer, its musical chord trembling on the summer air. Then with a crackling rush something big and black invaded the winding road. Rose had barely time to flee into the thorny thicket when there was a loud explosion, and the big machine came to a standstill in front of her, making her a prisoner among the thorns.

From the red leather cushioned seat a solitary man sat and stared at her from behind big goggles until the truth of the situation burst upon him. Then he flung aside cap and goggles, tore off his linen duster and stepped down into the narrow path. His handsome face was wrinkled with concern as he addressed her.

"I'm afraid I nearly ran you down," he said courteously. "If you will allow me to assist you out of this mess of thorns—there, my knife will make it easier—why, your sleeve is torn, and I'm afraid the thorns have wounded you."

Rose was too startled by the suddenness of the accident to make a reply.

At last he cut an opening in the thicket and gently extricated her from the cruel briers that snatched her skirt and pressed against her rounded arms. Here and there on her sleeve was a red stain of blood.

"I hope you will let me administer some remedies. I have a little case in my pocket with everything to allay pain, and—there, if you will roll up your sleeve a little—now, that ought to give you some relief. Briers are nasty things." As he talked he was dabbing at the wounds with bits of absorbent cotton dipped in some antiseptic fluid produced from the medicine case; then he applied an ointment and deftly wound a strip of gauze down the arm to the slender wrist. When he had finished he looked regretfully at his completed work, very much as if he wished he could do it all over again.

"Thank you so much," said Rose shyly. "It could have waited until I reached home. One is often scratched by thorns in the country."

"But I drove you into the thicket, and I am responsible for your injuries," he protested, with a winning smile, as he snapped the little case together and returned it to his pocket. "I'm afraid I frightened you too."

"I was frightened for the moment. You see, one does not expect motorcars in the lane road."

"I should say not!" he ejaculated, as if suddenly aware of his predicament. "It's all the fault of my map. It was creased and broken, and I could not determine whether the road to Cliffden was the first or second turnoff to the left, so I tossed up a coin and took the first, and here I am with a punctured tire and almost hub deep in sand." He gazed mournfully at the car, which quite filled the narrow roadway with its bulk.

"You will need assistance to get it out," suggested Rose. "Mr. Jansen, the blacksmith, does that sort of thing, I am sure."

"Thank you. It is very likely that he can help me put on another tire. I will look him up immediately if you will kindly direct me." He looked eagerly at Rose, hoping that the way to the blacksmith's shop would be her path also.

"You must go back to the highway, and you will find it at the corner of the Cliffden road, about a quarter of a mile beyond here. Oh, may I trouble you for my music roll?" She pointed to the thicket, where the forgotten music roll was half hidden among the weeds.

The stranger assisted her into the path, piloted her beyond the bulk of the machine and then returned to the thicket for the music roll. As he extricated it he could not forbear seeing the name engraved on a little silver plate under the strap.

He gave it to Rose and watched her as she went along the path away from the highroad, in which direction he must go. He did not know that the shorter route to the Lewis home would be to follow the directions she had given him and return to the highway. Rose wanted to be alone for awhile. She wanted to still the beating of her heart and to feel the telltale flush fade from her hot cheeks before she went home. She turned around for an instant, and then something happened that added to her confusion and embarrassment.

When the stranger had thrown away the bits of absorbent cotton they had clung to the blackberry bushes like tufts of snow. Now, as Rose turned she saw two birds—a yellow warbler and his soberly attired little mate—hover over the bushes and then dart down and away with the bits of cotton in their beaks.

Rose fairly ran until she reached a quiet wood road that would take her home. It had been the most exciting day she had ever known. It seemed as if every incident had borne some significance because of her foolish dreams of magic horns and princes.

The man, Neal Hayden, was not unmoved by what had happened. Once when he had been a little lad somebody had sent him a valentine. It pictured a little girl's sweet face peeping from a bower of wild roses, and the picture clung to him all through his boyhood and youth until he had come to believe that when he found his ideal girl she would have the face of his valentine, and she was always wreathed with roses.

The suddenness of seeing the lovely face of Rose Lewis framed in the pink bloom of wild roses had agitated him for the moment, and then to learn from the music roll that her name was Rose set him to dreaming dreams of his own as he slowly sought the services of the blacksmith. He, too, had reddened as the yellow birds had stolen the bits of cotton from the bushes. Every incident had its significance for him also.

The next day there came a big box of pink roses addressed to Rose Lewis, and inside was Hayden's card without an address. He expressed his hope that Rose had suffered no ill effects from her encounter with the thorns. Rose told the story to her mother, and the roses occupied a place of honor on the piano, where Rose found herself softly playing the plaintive minor chord that sounded from the horn of Hayden's automobile.

Often after that Rose heard the sound of the horn as the machine whirled past her home, but several months went by, and as she never saw Neal Hayden again she forbade herself to dream of fairy princes and magic horns and tried to forget the incident which at the time had seemed so astonishing to her. But now, instead of dreaming of imaginary princes, Rose found herself with a real flesh and blood hero, who invaded her dreams and refused to be banished.

Then came a day when she went with her cousins to the big county fair. Here were gathered many fashionable folks from the country estates near by, and here were many men from the city. Neal Hayden was there, too, and when he saw Rose with the Drake Lewises, her cousins, he fairly flew across the intervening space and claimed instant friendship with Drake Lewis, who had been his classmate at college.

After that it was only a question of time before Neal Hayden dared confess his love for Drake Lewis' little country cousin. All through that autumn, when the lane road was turning to a path of crimson and gold, Hayden was seeking for words in which to tell his love. Then one day when the wind was shaking the leaves down in golden showers Rose walked in the lane road and saw Neal Hayden coming toward her.

She waited, looking lovelier than ever in her white knitted coat and white wool cap. Just before they met the same breeze that sent her golden hair in little wisps about her ears shook a dogwood tree, and from the branches there tumbled the cunningly woven nest of a yellow warbler. From it there fluttered bits of white cotton and shreds of the blue paper which Hayden had thrown away.

The empty nest fell to the ground between them, and their eyes met above it, and Neal suddenly was aware that he need not say anything. His eyes had asked the question, hers had answered it, and their dreams had come true.

HIS NAME THOMAS WOODROW

President-Elect, However, Thought He Had "Shaken" First Cognomen.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 10. — President-Elect Wilson had nothing to say when his attention was called to the fact that on the drafts of the inauguration invitations as they have been sent to the engravers, his name appears as Thomas Woodrow Wilson. He said he knew nothing about the matter at all.

Governor Wilson has not used the name Thomas in many years. He dropped it soon after his graduation from Princeton and some time ago he remarked that he thought he had shaken it effectually.

MADERO IN PERIL

Rebels Are In Control In the City of Mexico.

250 KILLED IN THE FIGHTING

United States Embassy Fired Upon—General Felix Diaz Takes Charges of the Uprising After Being Released from Prison by the Rebels—Assault on Palace.

United States intervention in the civil war in the republic of Mexico that has made a battlefield in the streets of the capital, resulting already in 250 deaths, became almost a certainty Monday when the embassy buildings of the United States were fired upon.

Several shots entered the apartments of the ambassador and his assistants, who were anxiously watching the progress of the battle between President Madero and Felix Dias, the rebel general.

From just what quarter or just what faction the firing came could not be determined in the confusion.

One United States citizen, E. L. Ramsey, formerly of Galveston, Tex., was seriously wounded in the fighting.

Previously, appeals had been made to both Madero and Diaz for protection for American citizens, and both had replied that they were not sufficiently in control to guarantee it.

Madero Returns to Capital.

President Madero is back in the capital after leaving it for several hours to confer with General Blanquet, who arrived from the south with his forces. General Felix Diaz, with his two thousand or more armed rebels, is safely ensconced in the federal arsenal building.

One aggressive move has been taken by the hard-driven Maderists. The government sent a force to attack the arsenal, but the federals were repulsed with heavy losses by the machine gun, rifle and artillery fire.

When President Madero and his minister fled from the national palace it was believed they had gone to Chapultepec, though some said he was heading for the coast. General Huerta has been left in charge of the loyal force in the palace.

Over Two Hundred Killed.

The capital of Mexico became a battlefield. Two hundred and more were killed by noon and the wounded are said to total several hundred.

Among the dead are three Americans, two women and one man. In the desperate fighting of the morning more than 500 were wounded. The Plaza Constitucion and the streets leading to the Alameda are strewn with the dead and wounded.

Fighting in the streets of the capital opened in the morning at 5 o'clock, when part of the federal troops in the capital rose in mutiny, first attacking the military prison and releasing General Felix Diaz and General Bernardo Reyes. Diaz immediately took command of the mutinous troops and led them in an assault upon the national palace, where President Francisco I. Madero was at that time asleep. Part of the guards at the palace remained loyal and Madero took command in person and led them through the streets.

General Felix Diaz, who is now the supreme leader of the rebels in the capital, was under sentence of death by a military court martial for his recent attempt at rebellion at Vera Cruz.

General Reyes was in jail waiting trial for attempting to start a revolution in Nuevo Leon about a year ago. One rumor has [illegible] that General Reyes was shot in the fighting, but it lacks confirmation. The city is in such a turmoil that rumors of all sorts are flying. Many are confirmed and many are disaproved. Where the loyal troops hold sway, martial law prevails and nobody is permitted to pass. The telegraph offices are under guard.

The greatest anxiety prevails as to the action Diaz may take in summoning the troops under Zapata into the city. It has always been Zapatists that have wrought the greatest havoc during the revolutions against Porfirio Diaz as well as Madero.

If they are brought into the city a reign of terror is feared. Their commanders it is admitted will not be able to control them once they see victory and a massacre might be expected to follow.

FIRE IN A U. S. BUILDING

Flames Attack New Agricultural Department Structure.

At Washington the new marble building of the agricultural department was threatened for a short time when flames broke out in laboratory B. of the bureau of plant industry in the basement and exploded a barrel of alcohol stored there. Prompt arrival of the fire department confined the flames to three rooms on the lower floor.

Records and supplies were stored in the rooms. Many of the records were destroyed. The loss to the government will not be fully known until the officials of the bureau have had opportunity to investigate, but it will reach into thousands of dollars.

Death at Bicycle Race.

Frederick Windt of East St. Louis, Ill., was fatally injured and Walden C. Martin of St. Louis, a member of the United States Olympia team at Stockholm, was seriously hurt when their bicycles left a new saucer-shaped track at the Coliseum in St. Louis at the same time. Windt died half an hour later in a hospital. Martin sustained fractures of the left leg and left wrist and is in a precarious condition.

Japanese Premier Stoned.

TURKS DEFEATED

Ottoman Troops Reported Retreating In Disorder.

BULGARIANS IN HOT PURSUIT

Entire Coast of the Sea of Marmora As Far As Bulair Now In the Hands of the Balkan Allies—Bulgarians Reported to Have Lost 600 Men at Gallipoli.

Turks occupying the peninsula of Gallipoli and defending the Dardanelles suffered a defeat at the hands of the Bulgarian troops south of the River Kavak according to a statement by the Bulgarian war office.

The Ottoman troops are said to be retreating in disorder toward the town of Bulair, a small place northeast of the city of Gallipoli. They are pursued hotly by the Bulgarians.

The statement adds that as the result of this success of the Bulgarian troops the whole coast of the Sea of Marmora as far as Bulair, is in the hands of the Balkan allies.

Say Bulgarians Lost 600 Dead.

A Constantinople dispatch to the London, Eng., Express says that in the fighting for the possession of Gallipoli the Bulgarians occupied Ghanos and Hora, on the Marmora coast, near the neck of the peninsula, but that the Turks, aided by warships, drove them out again, killing about 600.

The Constantinople correspondent of the Standard sends a strange story, reporting that the remnant of the Turkish army of Monastir, which never has been precisely accounted for, is still operating in that district and has captured the important town of Keritza, less than fifty miles from Monastir.

Turkey in Financial Straits.

The Turkish government is in dire straits, even attempting to dispose of the crown jewels and making despairing attempts to place treasury bonds in Egypt and among the Moslems in India.

The Ottoman consul at Bombay claims to have applications for bonds amounting to $5,000,000. It is announced that the ambassadors' conference in London has arrived at an agreement upon the formula settling the plan under which the allies will take over a part of the Ottoman public debt.

Ten Thousand Wounded in Janina.

An Athens dispatch to the Telegraph says that three prominent citizens of Janina who escaped to the Greew lines assert that there are 10,000 wounded in that town, which would have surrendered but for the influence of the Austrian consul.

A Constantinople dispatch to the Telegraph says the Bulgarians have retired from Tchatalja and have made their headquarters at Tcherkesckeui.

LAND GRAFTING CHARGED

Officials of the Interior Department May Be Removed.

At Washington, D. C., sensational charges of land grafting against the reclamation service are made in the report of the house committee on expenditures in the interior department following an investigation of the Salt and Gila rivers in Arizona.

The report is submitted by Representative Hensley of Missouri, who acted as chairman of a subcommittee which went to Arizona to take testimony. The subcommittee recommends that the president be requested to remove from office, pending a further investigation, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Samuel Adams of Chicago, Director F. H. Newell and Supervising Engineer L. C. Hill of the reclamation service. This action is urged to prevent these officials offering possible obstruction to the work of the investigating committee.

SAYS HE CAN SAVE $70,000 IN BUTTER

Detroit Representative Favors Butterine for Institutions.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 10. — Senator Robert Ogg of Detroit says the state can save $70,000 annually on its butter bill. That the state of Michigan has some butter bill, too, in these days of high cost of living, is evidenced by the fact that last year the state institutions used about 121½ tons of the oleaginous bovine by-product, or, to be exact, 252,863 pounds, for which was paid $104,862.

As it is now, Michigan has to use butter. The law demands it. How this law happened to be passed is beyond Senator Ogg or the other members of the legislature interested, but it is supposed to have been due to some outbreak of early days, when making a substitute for the natural product of the mild-eyed Jersey was regarded as akin to spookery. Anyway, the law's there and it prevents the use of a single ounce of butterine, oleo, or other substitute.

Senator Ogg has now introduced a bill repealing the prohibition on oleo, etc., and has gathered several sheets of statistics which show the average price of butter paid by the state for the year to have been 27.3 cents. Marquette prison got the lowest price, 23.36 cents per pound.

"Paying an average of 20c per pound for oleomargarine or other good substitute for butter will save the state $70,000 per year," said Senator Ogg.

TRAIN CRASHES INTO HACK

Albion Man and Wife in Critical State After Accident.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 11.—Two persons were probably fatally injured and a third was badly hurt, when passenger train No. 75, on the Saginaw division of the Michigan Central railroad, crashed into a hack on the Trail street crossing near the state prison.

E. A. Iamon of Albion suffered a broken leg and injuries about the head and hips which probably will cause his death. His wife was injured about the head and hips and it is feared her skull is fractured. It is believed she will die. Mrs. Edwin Krapf, 321 Detroit street, Ann Arbor, was cut about the head.

There were no gates on the crossing, but it is guarded by a flagman. The accident occurred on a curve.

ROOSEVELT LIBEL SUIT

Hearing at Marquette, Mich. Goes Over to May Term.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 12.—In the circuit court William P. Belden, attorney for George A. Newett, moved for a continuance of the trial of the libel suit instituted against client by Theodore Roosevelt.

Judge Flannigan granted the motion and the case was continued to the next term, which opens May 28. The depositions to be taken in various parts of the country Judge Flannigan ruled should be withheld from the general public.

Mrs. Cleveland Marries.

At Princeton, N. J., Monday, Mrs. Grover Cleveland and Professor Thomas Joseph Presten were married here at 10:30 a. m. Their engagement was announced on Oct. 29 last year.

GRAND RABIDS—Having been bequeathed a pair of pillows, feather bed, little bedstead, and prayer book by his wife, Robert L. Mailhot alleges she was incompetent to make the will and has asked Probate Judge Higbee to give him a larger portion of the $12,000 estate, which is willed to local and state Catholic institutions.

BATTLE STORM TO SAVE THEIR BABES

Heroic Ruby Mothers Carry Little Ones Half a Mile.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 8.—Following the destruction of their farm home at Ruby by fire, two mothers carried their four children nearly half a mile in a blinding snowstorm and were so overcome from exhaustion that they fell unconscious on the doorstep of a farmer.

Mrs. David Bowman was the first to be awakened by the intense heat and smoke, and she succeeded in carrying her three children, the oldest of whom is thirteen years of age, to safety. Mrs. Mary Alexander, a sister, was late in awakening and when she discovered that her daughter Vera, ten years old, was still in the burning home she rushed madly inside, carried the child to safety and had no sooner reached the outside than the structure collapsed.

Clad only in their night clothing and with the thermometer about 8 degrees below zero, the six refugees made slow progress.

When they reached the farm house of James Chase all were so benumbed from cold that it was with great effort they were resuscitated.

The cause of the fire is not known, but the home is a complete loss.

MUNICIPAL COAL YARD

Grand Rapids Now Gets Its Coal at 85 Cents a Ton Cheaper.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 8.—The Trades council of this city is accomplishing civic reforms as well as improving the conditions of wagearners.

Recently the central body protested to the city council that the vice commission was not performing its duty. In addition to this the trades council adopted a resolution demanding the city council to investigate the wages and living conditions of women workers. The city council adopted a resolution and appointed four members of organized labor on the commission to make the investigation. The first result has been that the city council has authorized the operation of a coal yard for the benefit of the city at large, with a scale price of 85 cents per ton less than the usual rate charged by dealers.

U. OF M. PHYSICIAN OUSTED

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 12.—Dr. W. J. Bein, house physician in one of the University of Michigan hospitals, was given two hours to get his belongings out of the hospital. Dr. Bein was one of those causing the disturbance about 2 o'clock in the morning, when he and a crowd of students and town boys attempted to force their way into Waterman gymnasium, where the annual "J." hop was in progress.

Dr. Bein was in the foreguard of the crowd, and in his desire to see the dance he so far forgot himself as to smash the nose of Janitor Bradley, who was assisting in keeping the uninvited crowd out of the gymnasium.

LANSING — State Representative Copley of Detroit has just introduced the much discussed measure to provide for Michigan's participation in the centennial celebration this year of Perry's victory on Lake Erie. The measure provides for an appropriation of $60,000 as Michigan's share of the cost of a magnificent memorial to be erected on Put-in-Bay island. The New York legislature has just appropriated $150,000, making the total already appropriated by various states over $600,000.

FLINT — Following a daring and long series of burglaries, Cortlandt Leclair and Russell Tayloy, each eighteen years old, and Arthur Mohrs and William Roehfarz, fifteen years old, were arraigned. The first two waived examination in police court and were bound over to circuit court under $200 bail each on a burglary charge. The latter two were arraigned in juvenile court and were released until Saturday when their case will be disposed of.

LANSING — The Michigan Industrial board has ruled Mrs. Jennie Hunter of Detroit is not entitled to compensation for the death of her son, who was killed when kicked by a contractor's horse. The insurance company refused to pay the claim on the ground Mrs. Hunter was not a dependent. The commission held there were no dependents, and the company only paid the funeral expenses.

LANSING—State Chairman E. C. Shields of the Michigan Democratic state central committee, announced that arrangements have been made for a special train to Washington for the inauguration, leaving Detroit Sunday, March 2, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and arriving in Washington Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and returning, leave Washington by March 8.

KALAMAZOO—With his lifeless body standing straight up, frozen rigidly to the front door of an express car, an unidentified man was found dead on an express train just after the train had left Niles. He was so numbed with cold that when water splashed over him when the train scooped up a supply, he was unable to move and soon was frozen to death.

REED CITY—The Pittsburgh Wood Preserving company of Pittsburgh will come here in the near future and erect a large plant for the treating of wood to render it rot-proof. Railroad ties will be the principal commodity treated, although fence posts or any other wood articles put into the ground will be handled. The company will employ about sixty men.

KALAMAZOO—Very strong resolutions were passed by the Michigan Retail Lumber Dealers' association in the closing session of the convention asserting that the present Sherman anti-trust law favors the large companies and asking congress that it be amended so that smaller business men will be able to combine for their own protection.

FLINT — His long and faithful service as a clerk in the drug store of Orrin P. Safford brought substantial reward to Charles C. Fitzhugh when he was given $500 in gold. The gift followed one of the biggest property deals of years in Flint, when the Safford building and business were sold to A. H. Goss and John Mercer.

HASTINGS—H. H. Sparks, who was seventy-one years old a pioneer of Morgan, where he has been postmaster for fifteen years, and well known Civil War veteran of Barry county, died. Sparks always showed his old army spirit by flying a flag over his little postoffice building.

FLINT — After alleging that her husband wished to sell her to a Buffalo man for 50 cents, but that the latter declined the bargain when he found the children were thrown in, Mrs. Mary Antoniowiz started suit for divorce in circuit court.

SAGINAW — Joseph Dennenberg, who has just been found guilty of the larceny of a spark coil from a motor boat in the daytime, was sentenced to two and a half to five years in Ionia reformatory.

A FLIGHT FOR LIFE

Dodging Death in the Path of an Onrushing Flood.

THE FURY OF A CLOUDBURST.

A Solid Wall of Water Swept the Canyon, Uprooting Trees and Toying With Huge Bowlders—Exciting Race in a Storm on Lightning Creek.

To understand what follows you must know something of the country where the incident occurred. Lightning creek, a famous trout stream of northern Idaho, rises among the glaciers of the Cabinet mountains and comes tearing down through narrow canyons heavily forested with pine and cedar. At all times the stream is swift. In the spring, when the ice caps are melting, it is a torrent.

July 3, 1906, a fishing party of five were hauled from the nearest railroad station to the end of the wagon trail on Lightning creek, where we made camp. The next morning the professor and myself decided to ascend to the head of one of the creek's tributaries. Shouldering our creels, we made our way through the timber toward the glacier, gleaming in the sunlight. Five miles from camp we came to a fall, where we began to fish. There were plenty of trout, but they were small.

"Let's see if there are larger ones above the fall," my companion suggested.

"Agreed," I replied, and we clambered up the steep rocky walls.

Our hopes were realized. We fished up the stream until past noon, when we sat down to lunch. By the time we had finished eating a tiny cloud had crept above the mountain top and hovered over the glacier. In a few minutes another cloud crept up and joined the first, then another and another until the mountain top was covered.

"It is time we were getting out of here," I said. "I believe we are in for a wetting."

As if to emphasize my words a flash of lightning quivered through the black mass, and in a few seconds the thunder rolled down the canyon with a roar like a battery of siege guns.

As we hurried down the creek the lightning became continuous and terrifying in its brilliancy; the roll of thunder was incessant. We made all the speed we could and had nearly reached the falls when the rain came in a downpour.

"Suppose we get under this spruce and wait until the storm is over?" my companion suggested.

"Suppose we get into more open country as soon as possible!" I rejoined and kept on.

Suddenly the lightning ceased, the thunder died away, and there was no sound save the dashing of rain. The sudden calm was startling, and I paused and looked toward the mountain. I saw a great column of fire shoot downward out of the clouds. The glacier shivered as though struck by some titanic force, split apart and crashed down into the canyon. There was a roar of thunder, and I saw the water pour from the sky as if all the windows of heaven had been opened.

"A cloudburst!" I cried. "Run for your life!"

Fear lent wings to our feet. We sped down the canyon, leaping fallen logs, tearing through dense underbrush, clambering over rocks, fleeing from the pursuing flood that roared down the canyon, uprooting trees and hurling great bowlders before it as it came. A few rods below a small basaltic cliff, with some stunted fir trees growing on it, stood in an open space. To outrun the water was impossible; the cliff was our only haven.

I dashed up, with my companion at my heels. Behind us we saw a solid column of water that bore a tangled mass of drift and advanced with the speed of the wind. We had only time to seize upon a tree before the flood was upon us. It struck with a grinding roar; the rock trembled to its very base; the water surged over us; we were battered by the rushing logs, scratched by the drift, suffocated by the water, but we clung on desperately. In a minute, at the furthest, the flood swept on, leaving ruin in its wake.

About the cliff the trees lay piled in a tangled, broken heap. We crept down, drenched, bruised and bleeding, and made our way to camp. But the spot where the camp had stood was swept clean. We sank upon the water soaked ground to consider what we should do. In a short time we heard the voices of our friends. They had been fishing the main stream above where the branch entered and thus had escaped.

There was nothing left for it but to make our way back to the railroad station, where we arrived after dark. For months fishermen discovered articles of our camp equipage scattered along the stream.—Youth's Companion.

The Earliest Men.

Recent studies by Professor Penck in the Alps, combined with those of Mr. Hugo Obermaier, a distinguished pupil of Penck, in the Pyrenees, have had the effect of considerably shortening the estimate of the length of time that has elapsed since prehistoric man left the marks of his presence in Europe. It now appears that both in the Alps and the Pyrenees there exist contemporary geological records showing four successive periods of alternate advance and retreat of glaciation. Heretofore it has been considered probable that prehistoric men dwelt in the neighborhood of these mountains during the last two invasions of the ice, but the new evidence is regarded as proving that it was only of the last, or fourth, glacial advance that man was a living witness.

Cataclysmic Geology.

"Cataclysmic" geology no longer exists. It was once the accepted opinion that the great changes on the earth's surface had been mainly brought about by sudden and violent (cataclysmic) agencies, but Sir Charles Lyell, as far back as 1838, demolished the old theory of cataclysm at once and forever. Sir Charles proved by facts which were indisputable that the great geological changes have been produced slowly by gradual processes of subsidence and elevation, and not by earthquakes, volcanic action, etc. Lyell may be paid to be the father of modern geology, or, to put it more correctly, of real, scientific geology.

RESEARCH CIRCLE

At a meeting of the Research Circle held at their rooms Tuesday evening Dr. Helen Valens gave a very interesting paper on "Eugenics," which was listened to with marked attention, it being a subject that is occupying the attention of thoughtful people. A musical program was also given. A piano solo by Miss Lucile Miller, a duet by the Misses Edna Taylor and Aileen Kendrick, and a solo by Miss Nellie Mingay. Each number was given in a most delightful manner, and gave marked pleasure to the listeners.

JOHN R. FOWLER

An all wise and beneficent Providence has removed from our class and companionship a beloved brother, John R. Fowler. We, the members of the Business Men's Class of the Methodist Episcopal church of Tecumseh, Mich., desire to express our appreciation of him as a classmate, a church brother and a good citizen. His extensive travels with his close observation of men and of things with which he came in contact, made him a pleasant and interesting conversationalist, his skill and intelligence made him useful and his work profitable wherever he journeyed, in Florida, in Texas, in California and along the Pacific Coast to British Columbia.

We mourn his loss and express our warmest sympathy for his afflicted family.

BALTIMORE'S SHOWER BATHS.

They Are Set Up in Summer in Tents on Vacant Lots.

The city of Baltimore has a system of portable shower baths in which the residents of the congested sections may enjoy both hot and cold water baths during the summer months.

Although called portable the baths are not moved from place to place every few hours but are housed under canvas or constructed of galvanized iron sheeting.

They are erected, says Popular Mechanics, on vacant lots in congested districts and remain at one place all summer, the "portable" meaning that they can then be taken down and packed away until required the next year.

The patronage of such a bath on warm days, it is stated, numbers about 400. On two days a week women attendants are placed in charge and the baths are turned over to women and girls. From 350 to 400 availed themselves of this opportunity. Last year more than 16,132 persons used the bath.

Dene-Holes.

These curious well-like excavations, found in Kent and Sussex, are popularly supposed to belong to the time of the Danish rule in England. They are invariably about 3 feet in diameter and seldom less than 60 feet deep. Ingress and egress were provided for by means of rude ladders or ropes. Various explanations have been offered to account for their existence—some supposing them to have been places of refuge, others that they were connected with secret forms of worship, still others that they were dug for the extraction of chalk and places of refuge, others that they flint. Mr. A. J. Philip, in a recent study of the subject, advocates the view that the holes were made to serve as silos, or granaries. They are found close together in groups, corresponding with the habit of various tribes of clustering in restricted areas.

Dogwood.

The industrial value of dogwood is probably but little appreciated except by manufacturers and users of bobbins, shuttles and spindles employed in cotton and woolen-mills. These are made of dogwood or persimmon wood, and hitherto the supply has come from the Southern States. The Forest Service now calls attention to the fact that the supply in that part of the country is nearly exhausted. Fortunately dogwood abounds in Oregon, Washington and California, and large plants for the manufacture of spindles have recently been erected in the Cascades in Oregon. In the East an attempt has been made to substitute the wood of the mesquit and the tupelo for dogwood. The mesquit is very hard, heavy and close-grained; the tupelo is heavy, but less hard. It has the valuable property of wearing smooth by friction.

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:

68¼ Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67¾ Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

The Afterglow.

It has been shown that the afterglow that follows the ordinary twilight, and which produces such beautiful effects upon the snowy summits of the high Alps, is a phenomenon of general occurrence, and the hypothesis has recently been put forth that the light may be due to a peculiar form of radiation from the sun, composed of waves lying beyond the ultraviolet of the spectrum, and remaining in the upper air a quarter of an hour after the disappearance of the visible sunset rays. The supposition is that these rays, although themselves invisible, may excite phosphorescence in the atmospheric particles, thus producing a visible glow.

Eight Hours a Day for Postoffice Employes

On and after March 4, the postoffice employes will work but eight hours a day. The law reads as follows:

"On and after March 4, 1913, letter carriers in any office and all clerks and carriers in either first or second class offices shall not be compelled to work over eight hours a day, and the eight hours of work shall not extend over a ten hour period."

In case of extreme emergency, the postmaster at his own discretion can authorize clerks and carriers to work overtime, and they must obey his command. After they have completed their extra work they must prepare a written report and hand it in at the local office where they will receive compensation in equal amount to the salaries they receive.

VALUABLE SEAWEED.

Put to Many Uses by the Coast Dwellers of Japan.

"A large income is derived by the inhabitants of the coasts of Japan from gathering and selling ordinary seaweed," said Jeremiah King of Atlantic City.

"More than 8,000,000 yen is derived by the harvesters of the deep each year. This does not include the large amount of the product consumed by the natives.

"Certain kinds of seaweed are used for food and its by-products represent thousands of dollars annually. As choice a dessert as I ever have eaten was made from weeds gathered on the southern coast of Japan. This mixed with sugar and sprinkled with rum makes a dessert rarely equaled on this side of the Atlantic.

"There are families on the coast of Japan whose ancestors for hundreds of years have lived entirely from the proceeds of the seaweed gathered from March to November and sold for food. The natives anchor branches of trees at the mouths of the rivers which flow into the ocean. The incoming tide deposits seaweed on the branches. The natives gather it, dry it and after mincing it with huge knives sell it in large quantities."

For Better or Worse.

"I'm tired of this eternal philosophical scrap about the respective influences of heredity and environment," says the Philosopher of Folly. "If heredity brings a man enough money, he can make his own environment."

The following is taken from a page of practical household suggestions published in the Woman's Home Companion: "A leaking fountain-pen in the pocket caused an ink-spot on a light wool coat. I applied alcohol by degrees, using only enough to moisten the spot, then rubbing the cloth between my hands as though washing it. Soon the spot had entirely disappeared, leaving no trace of the ink."

BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE

TO-NIGHT

George Damerel in "THE HEARTBREAKERS"

"Read what the "Adrian Telegram" says about this production—

George Damerel of "Merry Widow" fame is now a star and a good one, under the management of Mort H. Singer. He has a fine avenue for displaying his peculiar style of acting and dancing in "The Heart Breakers" which was seen at the Croswell opera house last night before a large audience. A company of good singers, especially the male chorus, accompanies Mr. Damerel and help very materially in making "The Heart Breakers" a success. The scenery is fine, the costumes good, electrical effects satisfactory and in every way the musical comedy makes a pleasant evening's entertainment.

Mr. Dameral and his leading lady Miss Myrtle Vail (who by the way is Mrs. Damerel) gave two numbers of their inimitable dancing. There were recalls in plenty for these numbers, as for nearly every one presented. Miss McBride was given appreciative applause for her feature song. "The songs you used to sing to the girls you used to love," and there were recalls for Mr. Dunham in "My Honolulu Honey Lou." One of the best comedians to come this way in a long time is Edward Hume who was the chimney sweep. He has a fund of good stuff and kept everybody laughing throughout the evening. He was particularly amusing in his song (and dance.) "They sent for me." The audience seemed never to be able to let him go.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says:

Henry Kempf, carpenter. Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's, Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Stanley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man sings a lullaby it naturally sounds rocky.

Conductor S. L. Miller, Norfolk, Nebr., on Bonesteel Division of C. & N. W. Ry., Co., recommends Foley Kidney Pills and says:-"I have used Foley Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and endorse their use for any one afflicted with kidney trouble. They are all right." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What has become of the old-fashioned widow who used to "set her cap" for No. 2?

Mrs. S. S. S., Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

FOUR OF EXPEDITION DIED WITH SCOTT

Overtaken by Blizzard After Arriving at South Pole.

Capt. Robert F. Scott, British veteran of two Antarctic expeditions, together with four members of his party, died as they were returning from the south pole. Scott reached the pole on Jan. 18, 1912. He died on March 29, 155 miles from the base of supplies at Cape Evans.

A blizzard overtook the party fresh from their success, and in its grip they perished. Besides Captain Scott these are the men that died: Dr. Edward Wilson, Lieutenant H. R. Bowers, Captain L. E. G. Oates, Petty Officer E. Evans.

The tragic news came to this city, for the first in unconfirmed rumors from the southland and then in a cablegram from Camaru, N. Z. The cable station there reported that the Terra Nova, the vessel which took Scott and his expedition south, had gone again into Antarctic waters to bring the explorers back, had sent the sad news by her wireless. She announced her early return "because of a grave calamity to the Scott expedition," then told the few facts of the disaster, and proceeded to the port of Lyttleton.

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land he cultivates. He puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its vitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are cured through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

Miss LOTTIE KNISELY of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will here add my testimony of the effectiveness of your remedy upon myself. I was troubled with indigestion for two years or more. Doctored with three different doctors besides taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest, caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles am nearly cured of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight. I thank you for your remedy and wish you all success in your good work."

Big Heads and Large Minds.

Big men have larger heads than small men, as a rule, not because their bodies are larger. And, therefore, the proportion of the head to the whole organism must be taken into account. Again, a larger head may inclose a comparatively small brain, and a thick skull by no means indicates intellectual force. Still further, a small brain may have a very fine quality of organism, and a larger brain may be very imperfectly organized. Taking all these factors into account, we cannot always be sure that the man wearing the biggest hat is the possessor of the biggest brain.

The Ancient Regime.

In the France of the eighteenth century the privileged classes counted about 270,000 persons. Of these 140,000 were nobles, 120,000 were clergy, or about 30,000 noble families, 23,000 monks in 2,500 monasteries, 37,000 nuns in 1,500 convents, and 60,000 curates, vicars, etc. The people (about 15,000,000) possessed about one-third of the land, out of which came all the expense of the government, the property of the privileged class paying no taxation.

THE BRAMBLY COTTAGE

The Story of a Rescue

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Leander Kittredge leaned over the fence and scrutinized the inquiring stranger, who carried fishing rods and basket. "What sa-ay?" he drawled, cupping one freckled hand around a large and leathery ear.

"I asked if there was good fishing in the lake," repeated the man patiently.

"Sometimes there is and sometimes there ain't," returned Mr. Kittredge, with an enigmatic smile.

"How's that?"

"It all depends on Faustina Standish," chuckled Leander. "It all depends on Faustina!"

The stranger looked puzzled. "Who is Faustina Standish?"

"She owns the lake and it's her say so whether there's fish to be caught or not."

"Oh, I didn't know it was private property? The people at the hotel said any one could fish there."

"Belongs to Faustina. It's her say so."

"Where does she live?"

"Down in that brambly cottage at the shore now. In the winter time she moves up to her house in the village. Some day Faustina 'll get ketched by a high tide or something and cottage and all 'll float off." Leander shook with silent mirth.

"Tide! I thought it was a fresh water lake."

"It's a bay—nothing more or less than a leetle salt water bay, with just the teeniest outlet to the sound. Standishes have always owned the bay, and now it's Faustina's, and she's got a cottage down there that has its feet in the water sometimes. She and that grampussing old black cook, Cleopatra, have it all to themselves from June to October."

"No harm in asking permission to fish?" ventured the stranger. And, following Leander's guiding finger, he turned into another woody road that led him down to the water's edge.

Davis Emery paused in sheer admiration of the tiny bay, perhaps a quarter of a mile in diameter, lipped by a snow white sandy beach with a background of gently sloping pastures and cedar clothed hillsides. Directly opposite was a rift in the white beach that showed the channel, with a dark rim of the sound beyond. The sky was blue, and the water reflected the pure tint. The tide had been an unusually high one, for bits of dried driftwood were floating away from the high water mark. Long lines of dead seaweed undulated with the swell of the ebbing tide.

Nowhere along the beach was there a sign of a "brambly cottage" such as Leander Kittredge had described. Not far from where he was standing, however, there was a small building, whitewashed outside and in and specklessly clean. An indignant clucking from a nesting box in one corner revealed that this was a chicken house, and it was evident that the tide had lapped the floor of the building, for the sand lay in little riffled, damp lines.

If this was Faustina Standish's chicken house her brambly cottage could not be far away. But look as he might up and down the beach he saw nothing save a sweep of wet sand and glistening pebbles.

All at once Emery saw it in the most unexpected place. There, bobbing drunkenly in the middle of the little bay, was a small white cottage overrun with red roses. The water swashed around the tiny porch and broke in white foam against the sides of the building. From a small iron chimney smoke poured forth as if this unexpected trip on the water had not hindered the round of domestic duties. Up on a balcony above the porch a woman was sitting composedly, reading a book.

There was only one thing for Davis Emery to do and that was to rescue the damsel as quickly as possible. In order to do that he must have a boat, and, looking about, he soon made the unpleasant discovery that there were three very capable looking small boats adrift on the bay. He raced madly up the shore and found nothing save a broken oar half buried in the salt grass. With this in his hand he went back to the chicken coop and there behind it, resting on the sloping bank, were the outlines of a flat bottomed skiff beneath a covering of tarpaulin and dried seaweed.

After fifteen minutes labor he had the covering cleared away and the boat afloat. Rowlocks there were none, but Emery could paddle even with a broken oar, so he pushed off and went bobbing slowly toward the brambly cottage, which was also bobbing on the tide and headed straight for the narrow, wicked looking channel.

Perhaps the girl had suddenly thought of the channel, for all at once she arose and went to the railing and leaned over and looked long and anxiously at the course of the cottage. She saw Emery just then, and in response to his hail he heard a faint response.

The current was stronger now, and the speed of both cottage and skiff was accelerated, so that Emery did not gain much on the little house, but after awhile his strong, steady persistent strokes counted for results, and just when he was beginning to feel the strain of his hurried efforts a wave brought the skiff to the edge of the porch and he reached out and grasped the edge. In another instant he was standing on the boards, ankle deep under water, and making fast the painter of the skiff to the railing.

As he turned from this task the door opened behind him and revealed the girl of the balcony standing there. Brown as a berry were hair, eyes and brows. Her skin was deep cream, with a powdering of golden freckles across her lovely face. Even in that moment of danger Davis Emery realized her beauty, and he drew a sharp breath of admiration. But the girl's voice, soft and cultivated, brought him back to the urgency of the situation.

"If you have come to help us," she said quickly, "you can best do it by keeping us out of the channel—if you can."

"I'll try," said Emery promptly. "Have you got a heavy rope or a chain aboard—I mean in the house?"

"No, but there is one in my motorboat. See—it is in the same current and will soon reach us. If you can get aboard and start the engine you can easily pull us out of the current."

By the time she had finished speaking Emery was back in the skiff and paddling away with his broken oar. It was a matter of minutes before he had boarded the large motorboat, started up the engine and caught up with the brambly cottage. The girl cheered him heartily as he passed around to the rear of the building, where he fastened a stout chain to a ringbolt in the back porch and, starting up the engine once more, had the satisfaction of feeling that the cottage was drawing steadily in his wake—out of the current and toward a low sandy shore.

"Fo' de lan's sake, man, huccome yo' heah?" she demanded belligerently. "Hev yo' ask Miss Faustiny yit?"

"I have Miss Faustina's permission to tow you to safety," laughed Emery heartily.

"Dat's all right, den. But dere's folkses always tryin' to take libyerties wid Miss Faustiny, and her's only too easy wid 'em. But dey don't git by me; no, sah!" Cleopatra withdrew her brilliantly adorned head, and Emery heard her clattering among the pots and pans. Presently her voice sounded once more.

"Man, ef yo' could manidge to git us ashore down by high bar I could git a mess o' clams for dinnah!" she called amicably.

"I'm under Miss Faustina's orders," returned Emery.

At that moment the girl appeared at the back door. "I don't know how to thank you for your kindness in rescuing us," she said sincerely. "If we had gone on the rocks in the channel I am afraid we would have fared badly. When our cottage suddenly drifted off at 7 o'clock Cleopatra and I had just arisen and were upstairs. I thought we would simply float across the bay to the other shore and we could easily be towed back from that point, so I felt no alarm until I discovered we were in the current and making for the channel. We owe a great deal to your pluck in getting us into smooth water."

"I'm mighty glad I happened along," responded Emery. "Now, would it not be a good plan to beach the cottage on the sand here? And when the tide shifts late this afternoon it will be comparatively easy to tow it back to its location with this boat."

Faustina agreed heartily, and in another half hour Emery had skillfully maneuvered the brambly cottage to a temporary resting place not far from the high bar which showed a long strip of mud flat in the falling tide. Cleopatra descended to the sand with clam rake and basket on her arm and trudged to the mud flat.

Emery assisted Faustina Standish to land, and when he had made both house and motorboat secure beyond any encroaching wave he sat down beside her on the sand and explained how he had happened to invade the shore of her little bay. Of course the service he had rendered her and the spirit of the adventure in which they had both taken a part rapidly promoted a friendship that was not broken for many months, and then for a most excellent reason.

Cleopatra presently summoned them to an appetizing clambake, which, combined with the meal she had been busily preparing, quite rounded out a delightful morning.

It was sundown when the brambly cottage was once more securely moored above high water mark near its old resting place. Davis Emery's permission to fish in the bay contained many added privileges, such as calling upon Faustina Standish once in awhile and enjoying Cleopatra's culinary triumphs, for Cleopatra approved of Davis Emery.

His basket was empty and his lines quite dry as he passed Leander Kittredge's back fence at sunset. Leander was there playing with an awkward, long legged colt.

"Hev a good ketch?" grinned Leander sociably.

Emery found himself smiling at a sudden recollection. "Very," he said.

"Found Faustina and the brambly cottage, did ye? I reckoned she'd let ye fish—never heerd of her refusin' anybody yet—but, of course, nobody ever knows what notion a woman'll take into her head!"

"See you again," said Emery in farewell, and as he walked home through the quiet woods he wondered if Faustina Standish would ever "take a notion" to like him better than anybody she had ever met, and it turned out that Faustina did that very thing, and so when their friendship ended love began and remained ever after.

MILITIA ON GUARD IN WEST VIRGINIA

Martial Law Follows the Deadly Clash Near Mucklow.

Martial law rules in West Virginia. Parts of four counties are in control of the state militia following a battle between the striking miners of the Kanawha coal fields and deputy sheriffs, railroad officers and mine guards. In a clash near Mucklow sixteen persons were killed and probably two score injured. Twelve of the dead were miners and four were state officers.

It was also learned that Standard, W. Va., a mile above Mucklow, had been shot up, the fire being directed from the mountains.

Five companies of state militia, ordered out last night by Governor Glasscock, reached the strike zone before midnight. A sixth company reached the troubled district this morning.

MEXICAN CAPITAL UNDER ARMISTICE

Quiet Reigns and Sanitary Conditions Are Better.

MADERO STILL IS PRESIDENT

His Resignaton, Demanded by Senate and Once Authoritatively Announced, Is Refused at Last Moment, and Arbitrament of Fire and Iron May Again Be Invoked to Remove Him.

Mexico City, Feb. 17.—The city, after a week of the most sanguinary fratracidal warfare is now quiet under an armistice.

Francisco I. Madero is still president and the issue between him and General Felix Diaz must yet be fought out.

Saturday's violent scenes and lightning changes, including the duly announced and apparently authentic resignation of President Madero, the fiercely earnest attempt of the national senate to compel him to vacate the position and his flat declaration that he "would die rather than give up," have been succeeded by a calm that is only the more grateful because so in contrast with conditions of the past seven days.

Almost Gay on Sunday.

The capital was almost gay Sunday morning for the first time since the revolt began. The armistice which went into operation at 2 o'clock in the morning encouraged many thousands to venture back to the center of the city. The shops were open, several of the larger markets received supplies from the country, and people were able to buy food and other necessaries.

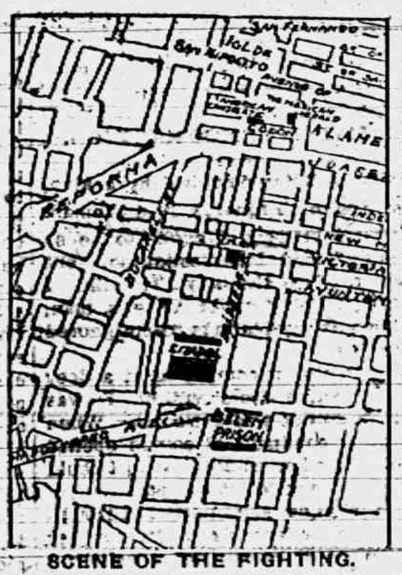
From dawn until afternoon the streets were crowded. There was feverish activity. Citizens staggered under burdens of food and clothing which they were removing to places of refuge. The well-to-do were able to obtain cash from the banks and there was more money in circulation than has been seen in the capital for eight days.

The greatest boon of all was the opportunity that was given to the Red and White Cross organizations and to volunteers and sanitary organizations to remove from the streets such things as imperiled health and were in a way to produce pestilence. For a week the sanitation had been indescribable. The forty acres of the Alameda were strewn with the bodies of horses. The federal cavalry had used the park for bivouacs and their position had drawn destructive shelling from the arsenal.

Bodies Removed from Streets.

In many of the principal streets, bodies of soldiers and of citizens had lain for days, buried under the wreckage of buildings. In Juan De La Letran street, twenty federals had been killed on Friday by the explosion of a shell in a warehouse, where the men were quartered. The volunteers, made up of Mexicans, directed by American, Spanish and German doctors, were able to remove many of these bodies and to lessen to some extend the peril of pestilence.

Great heaps of garbage were burned in the streets and in the public squares. Sanitation experts examined the water supply for the purpose of seeing whether or not it had been contaminated in the short time permitted by the truce, everything possible was done by patriotic Mexicans and intelligent foreigners to improve conditions that had become frightful. Only a beginning was made, but if the diplomatic corps can obtain further armistices the conditions will be much improved.



SCENE OF THE FIGHTING.

Wreckage of Week's Warefare.

For seven days, a city of 500,000 people had endured warfare which recognized none of the laws of civilized fighting. Six-inch field guns had duelled at a range of from four to twenty blocks, sweeping the finest streets of the city with their shells. Night and day the people were alarmed by the terrific roar of the cannonading and were driven from quarter to quarter as the zone of the fighting extended. All classes suffered. The wealthy whose homes were in the center of the city were in no better position than the unfortunates of the red light district. Dozens of fine mansions were wrecked or burned. Some of the most ornamental buildings of the capital will have to be rebuilt at enormous expense. In the mad warfare in the heart of a great city, neither Madero nor Dias counted the cost.

To Whom Should Bounty Go?

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 17.—A peculiar controversy regarding the payment of a wolf bounty is attracting much attention among sportsmen of Adams county. J. W. Caldwell, a trapper, claims that a wolf, held a prisoner in one of his traps, was killed and carried away by three hunters. The law provides that the bounty must be paid only to the person killing the animal. While a trap set by Caldwell caught the wolf, he did not kill it. In the meantime the bounty remains unpaid.

PREPARES TO RUSH TROOPS TO MEXICO

United States Negotiates for Two Morgan Liners.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The government thoroughly realizes the seriousness of the trouble in Mexico and has made all arrangements to transport thousands of troops to the Mexican border. Although at the state and navy departments the impression is conveyed that the accounts of the fighting coming from the City of Mexico are wildly exaggerated, it became known that as early as last Thursday the government made overtures to the Southern Pacific company for the charter of two of the largest vessels of the Morgan line for the purpose of transporting troops from northern ports to gulf points.

At a meeting of the Southern Pacific directors in New York last Thursday the proposition made by the government was discussed and, while it was not acted upon, if the government wishes two vessels on a moment's notice as was requested, the vessels will be forthcoming.

The government has offered the Southern Pacific people $75,000 each for a month's charter of two of its largest and most powerful vessels. The vessels mentioned are the Comus and the Antilles, either of which would be capable of transporting about 2,200 troops on each trip and either vessel is capable of making the trip from New York to New Orleans in four days and to other gulf ports in a little longer time providing these points are nearer to the Mexican border.

None of the government officials will admit that they have gone so far in making preparations to transport troops to Mexico, but officials of the Southern Pacific company have admitted that they have considered the proposition.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 17.—Christian Gish, aged eighty-five, a pioneer, filed suit against his only son, Dr. John L. Gish, for the recovery of more than $100,000 worth of property and $15,000 in money.

"MURDERED" FARMER STALKS INTO HOME

M. Cruikshank of Near Springfield Remembers Nothing.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 17.—Medford Cruikshank, the young farmer who mysteriously disappeared after planning to marry Miss Mae Hall, walked into his home.

He said he could not remember anything that had happened. His sweetheart and mother were overjoyed to receive him. They now believe he was drugged.

When Cruikshank entered the back door of his home, three miles south of this city, he was met by his sister Margaret.

"Where have you been?" she exclaimed time and time again, but the brother only placed his hand to his head and replied:

"I cannot remember."

Investigation developed the fact that Cruikshank had been lying in the hay shed for twenty-four hours. He bore no evidences of an attack. His strange condition of mind is believed to be due to worry.

CANADA FROWNS ON BILL

Northern Neighbor Opposed to Literacy Test for Immigrants.

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 17.—The Dominion government is deeply concerned over the possibility of the passage of the literacy test immigration bill over President Taft's veto. The bill comes up in the United States senate today. All the large transportation interests and others engaged in international trade have made strong representations and requests that attention be called diplomatically to the situation. The following unofficial statement has been issued:

"It is doubtful whether sufficient consideration has been given to the serious delays, expense and suffering that would necessarily result in attempting to administer such a law along the entire Canadian border, affecting, it is estimated, ten million travelers a year. Trains would be delayed, passengers removed at unseasonable hours for examination, and it is believed that serious injury would follow to trade relations between the United States and Canada. States along the border would be the chief sufferers."

MEMORIAL TO THE AMERICAN INDIAN

Plans for Breaking Ground for It Next Saturday.

WILL STAND IN NEW YORK BAY

President Taft, Governor Sulzer, Mayor Gaynor and More Than Thirty Chieftains of Western Tribes to Participate in Ceremony at Fort Tomkins.

New York, Feb. 17.—President Taft, Governor Sulzer and Mayor Gaynor with more than thirty chieftains of western tribes will attend breaking of ground at Fort Tomkins next Saturday, Washington's birthday, for the memorial to the North American Indian, the project started by Rodman Wanamaker four years ago. The sixty-second congress authorized the erection of such a memorial on a government reservation. Fort Tomkins, the northerly section of Fort Wadsworth and the highest elevation in New York harbor, was then chosen.

Program of Ceremonies.

The ceremonies incidental to the breaking of ground for the monument will be held at noon. President Taft wielding the first shovelful of earth, and an Indian chief will also assist in breaking ground with a spade made of a buffalo's thigh bone.

A United States war vessel will convey the president and the rest of the party from a landing place in New York down through the narrows to Fort Wadsworth. After the first sod is turned the guns of the fort will fire a salute and the Indians will hoist the United States flag to Indian music composed for the occasion by Dr. Irvin J. Morgan. When the ensign is mastheaded, the band will play "The Star Spangled Banner."

One of the speakers will be John Grass, a Sioux from the Standing Rock reservation in South Dakota. Hollow Horn Bear, another South Dakota Sioux, will also speak.

Reasons for Memorial.

Rodman Wanamaker in explaining the reasons for such a monument said:

"The Indian in his history showed one of the greatest moral traits that mankind has—strength of character—and as a race they had more of this strength of character than any other people that ever existed since the world began. Don't you think such a race deserves to be remembered by their successors to the wealth and resources of America?

"The Indian was lazy. He was content to take what fortune gave him. He had no ambition and no thought beyond tomorrow. He was but a child in civilization. This is all, and he has gone. The tramp of civilization has trodden him under. Shall we forget him entirely to meet him later on 'over the great divide' and have to make accounting to him for our perfidy and cruelty?"

STILL TRYING TO AVERT A STRIKE

Mediators Knapp and Hanger Continue Their Efforts.

EXPRESS HOPE FOR PEACE

President Carter of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen Issues Statement Declaring Conductors Have Not Received Benefits of Decision Granted Them.

New York, Feb. 17.—Judge Martin A. Knapp of the interstate commerce court, who, with Acting United States Labor Commissioner G. W. W. Hanger, is trying by mediation to avert the threatened strike of the firemen on the eastern railroads, returned to this city and the two government mediators continued their efforts to bring about a peaceful solution of the tangle. The strike order, which was to have been sent out at midnight on Friday to go into effect at midnight Sunday, is still held in abeyance.

Hope Not Given Up.

Commissioner Hanger said that they had not yet given up hope. He declared that Judge Knapp did not go to Washington for the purpose of talking to any government officials on the strike situation.

Asked if any new proposition was likely to be made to bridge the chasm between the railroads and the firemen, he said: "[illegible] but until we find it is perfectly useless to continue our efforts in the interests of peace, we will keep on trying."

While both sides in the dispute declared that the situation was unchanged, there seemed to a feeling that the strike might be averted at the last moment.

But the general aadjustment committee of the firemen and the conference committee of the railroads held meetings. The representatives of the railroads, though the meetings were separate, said they were satisfied that there would be no decisive action until they hear from the two government mediators, Judge Knapp and Mr. Hanger.

Statement by President Carter.

At the conclusion of the meeting of the firemen's committee, President Carter of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen gave out the following statement:

"With regard to be published statements by the railroad companies, wherein it is said that the engineers are satisfied and have been benefited by arbitration under the railroads' plan, and the railroads have paid one million dollars in back pay, etc.; I am advised by Grand Chief Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, that while it has been ten months since they agreed to arbitrate and seven months since the hearings were closed and given to the arbitration board for a decision, the award of that board has not been put in effect except on one railroad, and it has been found necessary to request the engineers' arbitration board to again meet and finally decide what they really did mean by the award that they handed down. This should convince all of the deception being practiced upon the public through the statements that are being sent out by telegraphic news agencies throughout the country, wherein it is represented that great sums of money have been paid to the engineers because of the award."

He supplemented this by saying that both the engineers and the railroads could find something to laugh at in the award in the case of the engineers. The latter would not have agreed to that kind of arbitration, he said, if they had been able to guess at its outcome.

Elisha Lee, chairman of the conference committee of the railroads, said after the meeting of the committee Sunday that the railroads had no statement to make, pending the conference with the two government mediators.

ASSOCIATES ACCUSE WEBB

Give Testimony Showing Bandit as Slayer of Hart.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—The ground work has been laid in the case of the state against Robert Webb for the murder of Policeman Peter Hart, who was found by his fellow officers killed in the flat at 1617 South Wabash avenue, on Jan. 20.

State's Attorney Hoyne, Captain Lavin, and Deputy Chief Schuettler met at the Hyde Park police station to consider the case. Two men and two women civilians displayed greater zeal than the servants of the people. They had lived the last weeks in cells at the Hyde Park station as voluntary prisoners of Captain Lavin. They said they preferred imprisonment to liberty so long as Webb was at large. They are:

Michael Cassela, owner of the flat in which Hart was killed. He was present when the policeman lost his life; Mrs. Cassella; Frank Madia, the auto bandit's "fence;" Belle Hastings, sister of the Cassellas and sweetheart of Madia, who says she hid Webb in the Cassella flat and concealed a bag of plunder for him shortly before Hart was killed.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 17.—Legislative machinery to initiate a constitutional convention for Illinois will be in full operation during the present week. Senator Edward C. Curtis of Kankakee is prepared to push a joint resolution already introduced by him providing for the submission to the people of the necessary proposition to assemble the convention.

Before departing from Springfield Senator Curtis said he has assurance from a majority of the senators that no obstacles will be placed in the way of immediate consideration of the resolution.

LONDON SCHOOLS.

In Some Ways the American System, Though Bigger, Is Inferior.

London schools have 583,255 school sittings, New York 689,959, not all occupied in either case. London has 5,038 men teachers and 12,431 women to 2,740 men and 15,651 women in New York.

As these latter figures apparently include some duplication in evening schools London's teaching force is proportionately much stronger, especially in men.

The smaller number of pupils in London means partly that more of the children of the moderately well to do there attend private schools, partly that the children of the London poor leave school for work at an earlier average age.

Though the New York system is bigger it is behind London in some respects, according to the American Educational Review. That city has four open air schools for mentally and physically defective children, who are apparently already well looked after, as they should be in every city.

THE WORLD FAMOUS "EVERY LITTLE MOVEMENT" CHORUS WITH "MADAME SHERRY" AT THE BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE NEXT THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1913.

TRIP FROM ALASKA

The following letter received by Geo. S. Tiffany from his son George will be of interest to his many friends.

Chitina, Alaska, Feb. 6, 1913.

Dear Father.

I left Tanana on the 13th of January and you will notice that I was not a bit superstitious about the 13th. I started out on foot but a dog team caught up and I went the first 28 miles with the dog team, and then walked about 17 miles more to Hot Springs. From there I had a ride with horse team into Fairbanks It was about 42 below when I left and remained in the neighborhood of 40 below until I reached Fairbanks the 20th. I bought a stage ticket out of Fairbanks for Valdez leaving Fairbanks the 22nd and arriving at Valdez Jan. 31st. I have been here ever since and will not get away until the 10th. The boat that I will take, the Mariposa, arrived here today and was here about all day and goes from here to Seward and discharges considerable cargo and returns to this point. The trip will be made via the inside passage and will be pleasant to me as it will be devoid of rough water and sea sickness, I am awfully anxious to be on the way and the delay here is more than tiresome. Anxious to see the little family.

The trip from Fairbanks to this place is not half bad. You leave Fairbanks in good comfortable four horse stages, provided with plenty of robes and foot warmers, the latter are a great comfort, constructed of metal about 16 inches long and eight inches wide they have an inner chamber in which carbon bricks are heated to a red heat in a fire and then placed in the foot warmers and they will continue to throw warmth for almost all the day. When the "Delta" is reached you are transferred into small sleds drawn by single horses, and this part of the trip increases your appetite as you are very likely to meet with a number of small experiences, as the ice upon which they travel is constantly overflowing with water and freezing, and for about 200 feet our horses waded through water three feet deep with the sled floating along. Another place in passing off the lake onto the shore there was a good sized snow drift some three or four feet deep and the horses plunged into the snow only to find water under the snow, the scrambling and plunging was lively until they had to be released from the sleds and get out without being hampered after they were across, ropes were attached to the sleds and sleds pulled over. When the Alaskan Range is reached you are again bundled into these single sleds and the climb commenced. It is a pretty trip on a clear day but was quite foggy this trip and not so pleasant. Was glad to get here and will be mighty glad to get away.

Well I must close and will try and write again before sailing.

George Tiffany

Great Tunnels Projected.

Two projects for the construction of railway tunnels of unprecedented magnitude are now under discussion. One of them, which appeals strongly to the imagination if it does not enlist much sympathy among practical men, is Monsieur de Lobel's plan for tunneling Bering Strait to connect Siberia with Alaska. The author of this plan explained it before a large meeting of the Navy and Military Club at St. Petersburg recently. Bering Strait is about 38 1-2 miles broad and 167 feet deep, but it has two islands so situated that the tunnel could be divided into three sections of about 12 1-2 miles each. The other project is older, and relates to tunneling the English Channel between Dover and Calais. French engineers have recently been studying the enterprise anew. The distance is about 23 1-2 miles. The work would be relatively easy because the tunnel would run through chalk.

Peculiarities of Submarines.

Equilibrium is almost as difficult to maintain for a submarine vessel as for an aeroplane. With modern large submarines, says Sir W. H. White, the act of diving is performed when the vessels have headway. The bow is depressed by horizontal rudders controlled by skilled men, and the vessel moves obliquely downward. The desired depth having been attained, the steersman must so manage the horizontal rudders that the vessel shall practically maintain its level, but, in fact, its course becomes really an undulating one, up and down. There must be no movements of men or weights in the vessel without immediate compensation to restore and maintain the balance, else the submarine may dive to a disastrous depth. Manual has been found better than automatic control.

"MADAME SHERRY"

Lest the uninitiated do not understand, we will explain that the term "French Vaudeville" means much the same as American musical comedy. The exception is that the French variety has more plot than the average spineless efforts from the workshops of our land.

In "Madame Sherry," which comes to the Bradley Opera House Thursday, February 20, there is a wise old uncle from abroad, who finds the nephew he has been sending money to for years for a musical education, associated with an actress in the management of a young ladies' dancing academy. The young man's efforts to provide a ready-to order family with the assistances of the janitor's wife, the actress and one of the latter's South American admirers, make a great farce which could be, and has been, given without music.

The second and third acts are given aboard a yacht. When the back drop showing the strried brick and stone heights of lower Manhattan begins to move, all landlubbers yearn for smelling salts. The yacht, also the theatre appears to be sliding merrily into the Bay. In the final act, the bright lights of Coney Island are stretched in a gleaming line across the horizon.

The effects are unusually good and show that no expense has been spared by the producers.

Ernest Albert, the famous painter of beautiful stage effects has won for himself still more fame from the theatre critics; he was said to have surpassed himself in the three elaborate scenes that distinguish the Woods, Frazee and Lederer "Madame Sherry" production.

A company of noted celebrities will be seen in the sensational French Vaudeville, as it is termed. A number of new creations in gowns and millionery ideas are displayed by a charming group of choristers The production is gorgeous.

This sensational musical comedy which has been the talk of the entire world for the past season, is credited with having the most irresistible score ever written. Its theme song entitled "Ev'ry Little Movement Has a Meaning All Its Own," has been the rage of two continents for months. In commenting on it, the New York Herald said, "Madame Sherry" is one of the brightest cleverest, wittiest, prettiest entertainments ever seen on any stage It sparkles, it has humor, melody, color, spirit, and a song theme which for sheer lilting, seductive fascination excels anything since the days of the "Blue Danube". Compared with "Ev'ry Little Movement Has A Meaning All Its Own", the "Merry Widow" Waltz is a poor wisp of a melody."

Is Tired of Praying.

A little girl in St. Louis the other evening was going through the usual form of prayer: "God bless mamma, and papa and make me a good girl," and so on, when all at once she seemed to come to a decision. "Now that is the last time I am going to say that prayer," she said, very gravely, looking at her mother. "You are older than I am and it is your place to ask for all those things and I don't see any use in two people's asking the same thing." Since then she has firmly refused to pray, insisting that it is her mother's place to ask God for blessings.

A Boomerang.

Little Archie, aged four, had been very troublesome all day, and especially trying to his father, who had had to stay at home as he was not well enough to go to work. In the evening after the little fellow had said his prayers, his father called him, thinking it a good time to say a "word in season" and began by asking: "My son, why is it that father and mother have had to punish you so much today?" Archie thought a minute, and then to his father's discomfort replied: "I guess it was cos you were both sick and cross to-day."—Delineator.

Pole Shifts Its Position.

Later information on the results of Lieut. Shackleton's expedition to the antarctic revealed much that was not discussed in the preliminary dispatches. It is now brought out plainly that the south magnetic pole, like the north magnetic pole, shifts its position. The discovery will enable geographers to revise the magnetic charts and this will render navigation safer.

Best Use of the Bath.

The human body is covered with the most wonderful and beautiful fabric in the world, flexible as silk, resistant as steel, tought as leather and, beauty of beauties, flushed by some three millions of glands, so that it is absolutely self-cleaning. Therefore, says our doctor, speaking of the bath: "Don't scrub; seldom use soap; use as cold water as you can enjoy."

MUNICIPAL MATTERS IN VARIOUS PLACES

A movement is afoot to bond Menominee Co for the improvement of roads. The good roads question being one that is interesting the people at the present. The movement is being met with great approval as has been shown by the petitions that have been circulated.

Newaygo Co. will vote in April to band the county for $50,000 for a new court house and jail.

In Traverse City the Spring Election will vote on bonding the city for $160,000 for a High School building and proper furnishing.

Clayton will issue bonds of $2,000 for a municipal lighting plant.

Lowell will issue bonds of $1076 for sewerage.

Norway will raise $65000 by bonds for a new High School building.

And still the good work goes on all over the State.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

Municipal Ownership Of Water Works For Adrian

Saturday the vote was taken in Adrian for the expenditure of $2500 to defray the expenses for the apprasing of the Water Works plant.

The Adrian Daily Telegram takes the neutral position advising every voter to think for himself, while the Times has a decided opinion which he is not afraid to express, and neither paper seems to have much faith in the "City Dads." The Times takes the stand that if the Adrian Water Company want to sel. to the City of Adrian a dilapidated plant of 30 years standing, the Company had better make a proposition of how much they will take for their plant; otherwise it would be best for the City to build their own plant,

Certainly municipal ownership of public utilities is preferable, and will come when the heating, lighting, telephone service and water works will be owned by the City, unless the disease of graft gets to strong a hold of the City father.

The people said "No" by 709 votes.

SENSITIVE MR. GOSLINGTON.

Can Stand Being Snubbed by a Man, but Hates to be Ignored by a Woman.

"I don't suppose I ought to be so sensitive," said Mr. Goslington, "but it seems to be the way I'm built. I can stand being snubbed by a man, but it hurts my feelings to be ignored by a woman.

"This morning coming in at a door through which from within I was about to go out was a woman. When I saw her coming I of course opened the door for her as politely as I could and stood back to let her pass.

"Did she as she passed through thank me or graciously incline her head to me or by any token acknowledge my deference to her? By not so much as the bat of an eye or the quiver of an eyelash; she simply ignored me; she passed me by as if I had been the knob on the door instead of the man holding the door open for her.

"Do you know that jarred on me. Hurt my feelings sorter. I don't suppose I ought to be so sensitive, but I seem to be built that way."

"The Easiest Way."

Prof. Alfred E. Stearns, principal of the Phillips Andover Academy, said at the recent alumni dinner in New York:

"The easiest way, in raising funds as in other things, is the wrong way. I remember an Orange man and his easy spelling rule.

"In Orange, in my childhood, I once complained of the difficulties of spelling. I said that 'ei' and 'ie,' in such words as 'believe' and 'receive,' always stumped me.

"Then this Orange man patted me on the head, and smiled, and said:

"'My boy, I will give you an infallible rule for 'ei' and 'ie'—a rule that in 47 years has never failed me.'

"I expressed my delight and waited. The man resumed:

"'The rule is simply this: Write your 'i' and 'e' exactly alike, and put your dot exactly between them.'"

Where Immense Energy Lies.

Talking before the Institution of Electrical Engineers at Glasgow, on the unknown energy contained in the chemical elements and the prospect of making it available, Mr. F. Soddy said that the forces at our disposal compared with those exhibited when an atom suffers change are of a different and lower order of magnitude. Suppose, he said, that a way could be found in which uranium, which disintegrates to the extent of a thousand millionth part annually, could be made to disintegrate completely in the course of a year; then from one gram of uranium 1,000,000,000 calorie could be evolved, which, converted into electric energy, would suffice to keep a 32 candle-power lamp burning continuously through the year. By the expenditure of about one ton of uranium, costing less than $5,000, more energy would be derived than is supplied by all the electric supply-stations of London put together.

The Noise of Wireless Telegraphy.

Many readers may be surprised to learn that the electric sparks employed in wireless telegraphy over long distances produce a noise that may be annoying for those living close by the station. At least this has been the experience at the Eiffel Tower in Paris, where the sparks from an apparatus possessing a power of 10 kilowatts have proved disagreeable to people several hundred yards away. Since it is now proposed to substitute apparatus of 40 kilowatts' power, with the hope of sending communications direct from Paris to New York, the generating-station will be placed underground in order to smother the sound of the sparks.

Microbes in Cold Lands.

We are accustomed to think of severe and continuous cold as being an enemy to life of every sort, but data furnished to the Pasteur Institute in Paris by Dr. Charcot, the Antarctic explorer, proves conclusively that the intense cold of the south polar regions still allows various forms of microscopic life to flourish. On examining the intestines of animals twenty-four different kinds of microbes were found, and of these fifteen were varieties already known in Europe. Even the microbes found in soil taken from the Antarctic continent where the foot of man had never trod were found to be identical with those of the inhabited world.

Salves Can't Cure Eczema

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:
Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply.
A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 50 cent bottle will start the cure and give you instant relief.

We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this D.D.D. Prescription to a skin sufferer here and there, and we want you to try it now on our positive pay guarantee. D.D.D. Soap keeps the pores clean; ask us.

The following was clipped from the Hudson Post—A Tecumseh man who is in the habit of getting intoxicated, was arrested on a charge of malicious destruction of property. It seems that he smashed a refrigerator, but such an act ought not to cut any ice in zero weather, when cold storage is unnecessary, and the crying need is for a red hot stove and plenty of pepper to keep from freezing.

"THE HEART BREAKERS"

"The Heart breakers" proved quite a surprise to most of the people present Friday night, as it is generally supposed that this applied to the feminine gender, but this Club was composed of young New Yorkers who had "Invented a System" that would bring the heart of any woman to the feet of any member of this Club of heart breakers. The system certainly was rich with their moon and nightingale played an important part in the winning of a kiss, time—1 minute, 30 seconds.

A cleaner, jollier musical comedy one could not find, George Dameral and Miss Myrtle Vail were exceptionally good, and were favorites at once We are certainly getting a better class of plays than any other town the size of Tecumseh And Mr Mark certainly deserves much praise for the good quality of the plays he is giving the people of Tecumseh this season, and should receive a liberal patronage

Holland's Salt

This is just the time of year to feed your stock Holland's Stock Salt. It will put the horses in shape for spring work and improve their looks if you are getting them ready for market. If you are feeding sheep for market it will add dollars to the credit side in added flesh and wool. One man said he could have made $200 more in last two years if he had fed Holland's to his stock. This stock salt is good for Horses, Cattle, Sheep and Hogs. It is made of 98% pure table salt, medicated, and is the original medicated stock salt on the market.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says:

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Stanley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man sings a lullaby it naturally sounds rocky.

Conductor S. L. Miller, Norfolk, Nebr., on Bonesteel Division of C. & N. W. Ry., Co., recommends Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I have used Foley Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and endorse their use for any one afflicted with kidney trouble. They are all right." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What has become of the old-fashioned widow who used to "set her cap" for No. 2?

Mrs. S. S. S., Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

The Captain was Right.

During the recent financial depression in England, Pat and Mike enlisted in the British army. After their drill the captain, thinking the circumstances opportune for a little lecture on patriotism, demanded eloquently: "Soldiers, why should a man die for his king and country?"

This struck Pat as a proper question. Turning to Mike, he said:

"Faith, Moike, the captain is roight! Whoi?"—Everybody's.

Record Mountain Climber.

Long's peak, in Colorado, which has been called the American Matterhorn, has been successfully climbed by a small girl of 13 years, little Emily Zoynton. She scorned the aid of a guide, even in the dangerous places, but went clear to the top, a distance of 14,271 feet. This gives her the record for mountain climbing among children of the world possibly.

The Age of the Microbe.

People just now are living in a state of almost morbid apprehension concerning what they should eat and drink. There have been the paleolithic age and the red sandstone age. The present age would come to be known as the baccilus, microbes and tubercle age.—Lord Rabbleesdale in House of Lords.

Make the Most of Everything.

A CURIOUS TOMB.

Contains a Chamber Where Meal is Regularly Provided.

One of the most curious tombs in the United Kingdom is in County Wexford. In it is laid the body of one of that curious body—the resurrectionists. One portion of the tomb is a furnished chamber, with a table and a few chairs. On the table will be found at any time a dainty meal of considerable dimensions, with a fowl, a ham, a leg of mutton and the necessary drinkables. The departed resurrectionist provides by his will that this meal shall be laid each fortnight, and "if the meal is untouched in the meantime, it shall be given to the poor and a fresh meal laid." So far the meal has been untouched, though several rumors spread round the district from time to time that in spirit form the gentleman has appeared and has enjoyed his meal. Curious stories are told of poor people to whom the ham or the leg of mutton has been given being awakened in the night by strange rappings on their doors and windows, and even by demands in a grim voice for a portion of the food which has been distributed. As a consequence and probably for another sad reason, it has come to be the practice to consume the food immediately it is brought home. It is the only way to counteract the envy of the spirit, with whom, apparently, hunger is constantly present.—Dundee Advertiser.

Moroccan Red Tape.

Official correspondence in Morocco is couched in a very flowery and flamboyant style. It is interspersed with a variety of meaningless adulatory phrases that tend to confound the real meaning of the epistle. For example, an order to the minister of finance to contract a loan begins thus:

"In our present letter (God increase his power and make the glorious sun and his moon glitter in the firmament of his felicity), we have authorized our incorruptible servant (here follows name), to contract in the anme and behoof of the treasury (heaven fill it), a loan of ——" etc.

Considering that the "incorruptible servant" is filching as much as he possibly can from the treasury it is certainly necessary to pray that "heaven fill it."

Alcohol Distillation.

The government distillery for making denatured alcohol from corn and potatoes and the explanation of its use is very interesting. Dr. Sawyer of the United States department of agriculture says that the magazine and newspaper articles concerning denatured alcohol have all, so far as he can recall, given misleading impression. He says there is no question that the use of denatured alcohol is going to be of great service, but that so far the department has been unable to build machinery simple enough and cheap enough for the ordinary farmer to use. This problem, Dr. Sawyer says, is receiving a great deal of attention.

English Women Smoke Cigarettes.

A dealer in cigarettes in London says that the practice of cigarette smoking is increasing rapidly among women in the higher circles. His firm has sold 100 per cent. more of cigarettes to women this year than it did last. Among recent purchasers on a large scale was the queen of Spain, who bought, however, for the purpose of making gifts to her friends. She has ordered a number of red morocco cases, with the Spanish arms on the tip in gold, each to contain 22 varieties of cigarettes.

Early Notions of Future Existence.

Coulanges says: "The earliest opinion of the ancient generations was that man lived in the tomb, that the soul did not leave the body, and that it remained fixed to that portion of ground where the bones lay buried. Besides, man had no account to render of his first life. Once placed in the tomb he had neither rewards nor punishments to expect. This is a very crude opinion, surely, but it is the beginning of the notion of a future life."

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land he cultivates. He puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its vitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are cured through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

Miss LOTTIE KNISELY of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will here add my testimony of the effectiveness of your remedy upon myself. I was troubled with indigestion for two years or more. Doctored with three different doctors besides taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest, caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles am nearly cured of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight. I thank you for your remedy and wish you all success in your good work."

Fine Point in Legal Testimony.

"So," said the judge, "you say that you never went to Chicago from Huntersville. Now this is a very important point in the case and I give you one more chance to explain, for you and Synder were seen on the same train. Now you must be precise."

"No, sir, I never went to Chicago."

"Didn't Snyder go?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you were with him. Now out with it."

"Yes, sir," answered the witness after a pause. "You see, I told the truth, because it was this way: We sat opposite each other. He faced the engine. I didn't go to Chicago, I just backed away from Huntersville."

Blind Tom.

"Blind Tom was born near the city of Columbus, Ga., of slave parents, about the year 1848. He belonged to General James N. Bethune, at that time editor and proprietor of the "Corner Stone." Being blind, Tom would stray away from home and was often found in the woods, roaming around and listening to the birds. It was in his whistling imitations of the bird-songs that his wonderful musical ability was first revealed to his master. He could repeat perfectly anything that he heard in the line of music. As to his idiocy, it is generally understood that, his musical ability aside, he was very near being a "natural." Outside of his love for music, he seemed to be quite stupid, and if not an idiot, he was dangerous near being one. Blind Tom is still the standing puzzle of the psychologists.

HIS CONVERSION

And What Stood Between Him and Relapse

By F. A. MITCHEL

When I got tired of work I concluded to tramp. But when a man gits dissatisfied with a hard job and takes an easier one the chances are that he'll soon want an easier one still. The feller that tackles the job he happens to have for all it's worth is the one that is most likely to git an easier one in time, and when he gits it he'll be satisfied with it till he gits an easier one, and he'll be goin' up hill all the time.

I hadn't been trampin' very long before it occurred to me that it would be the easiest thing in the world, when some fool woman was givin' me somep'n to eat, with no man about the house, to make her tell me where she kept her valuables, take 'em and light out. I needn't try it on at houses near together, but separate, so that there wouldn't be any one to call on for help and I'd have a better chance to git away after I'd done the job. Another thing I must keep clear of was houses where there was a telephone, or, if I tackled one of 'em, I must cut the wire before I started in.

The first job of the kind I tried I found dead easy. The men were all away, and the women was skeered to death. They handed over all the money they had in the house ($17) and offered me some jewelry besides. I declined the jewelry 'cause I didn't care to be traced tryin' to convert it into cash. I got away with the money, and I don't believe the losers tried very hard to find me. The amount involved wasn't enough to pay 'em for doin' so.

By choosin' houses that were unprotected and in thinly settled regions and bein' content with small sums I did a very good business and took the least risk possible. The people I robbed considered me their natural enemy and would have taken any revenge on me they could. This kept my conscience, and on the whole I considered my lot far better than that of persons who slave all day at hard work. I roamed at large and had what money I needed for an occasional good time. If the persons I robbed had only kept on hurling their maledictions at me perhaps I'd 'a' got enough by this time to set up in some kind o' business, hiring others to do the work. Strange to say, my run of prosperity was brought to a standstill by the opposite kind o' treatment.

One day after trampin' two or three miles without meetin' a person or a team or comin' to a house I overtook a gal on the road and played the usual game of out o' work, hungry, no home nor nothin'. I asked her if she knew any charitable party thereabouts who would give me a crust of bread. She was the easiest fooled gal I ever tackled. She not only believed all I said, but almost cried over my misfortunes. She said she lived with her old mother around a bend in the road ahead and if I'd go with her she'd give me all I wanted to eat and a little money to help me on to a better condition.

She took me to a spick and span place and set me down before a bright fire, where I could warm myself, for it wasn't in the line o' my business to wear seasonable clothes, and off she goes to git me somep'n to eat. First thing I knew I heered a squawkin' in the chicken house and, lookin' out through a winder, saw the gal choppin' the head off'n a fat hen. For awhile I couldn't believe that she was fool enough to kill a chicken for me, and I didn't feel sure of it till I heered it sizalin' on the stove.

All this while I was thinkin' how I'd commence the business I was there for. My usual game was to find out where the money was kept or at least in what part of the house to look for it. Sometimes I did this by roundabout questions, sometimes by observation. If I could learn this before hoistin' the pirate flag it made the job much easier for me. In this case it occurred to me that while the gal was out in the kitchen cookin' a chicken for me that she could sell for 25 cents a pound I might go up the front stairway and take a look into the bureau drawers.

Goin' softly, I turned into a bedroom on the second floor. I opened the top drawer of the bureau and findin' nothin' opened an inlaid box on the mantel. Among a few trinkets and other small articles nestled a roll of bills. I took 'em out, stuffed 'em in my pocket and was turnin' to leave the room when I saw an old lady standin' there lookin' at me. She turned white as a sheet, ran into a room, locked the door, and I heard her raise a sash and call out to her daughter that there was a robber in the house. I ran downstairs, intendin' to light out, but met the gal in the hall. She looked as if she hadn't yet got on to the fact that I was the robber her mother was talkin' about.

"Where is he?" she asked.

"I reckon he went down the back stairs," I said.

If the old woman hadn't recovered from her scare enough to unlock herself and come downstairs I would 'a' said I'd look for him in the back yard and got away in that direction. As soon as she saw me she screamed and, runnin' back into her room, locked herself in again. This put the gal on to my true object. She gave me a look of disappointment and reproach that did me more damage than a bullet would 'a' done. Then she said:

"On mother's account I prefer to tell you that all the money there is in the house is in a box on the mantel in the room at the head of the stairs. We have no jewelry of any value, and all the silver we own is in the sideboard. I've prepared a meal for you, for I confess I was moved by your pitiful story and appearance. The meal is on the table for you, and you might as well eat it. I'll go up and get the money for you."

The only reply I made was to put my hand in my pocket, take out the bills and hand 'em to her.

"I've done this kind of a job a great many times," I said, "but this is the first time I've wished I hadn't."

Whether it was what I said or the way I looked I don't know, but that soft heart o' hern thawed again, and she actually seemed to want to make me feel better about it.

"By sayin' that you're sorry," she said, "you have done all you can to atone for your fault. That is all any of us can do when we sin against our Heavenly Father, and I forgive you as I hope to be forgiven myself. Now, come into the dining room and eat a good dinner. I've killed a chicken for you, and I have some cream potatoes and have made you a cup of coffee. I can give you bread and butter and honey for dessert."

I didn't realize it at the time, but it was this treatment that in the end lodged me in jail. The best way to thaw out a cold hearted person is to thaw yourself. There's lots o' criminals that are born wrong, and nobody can't do nothin' with 'em, and they can't do nothin' with themselves. But those of us who have got a spark o' decency in us can't stand kindness any more than other people, and unless we've got some criminal blood in our veins we've got to be switched off by it on to the main track.

"If you'll sit down with me," I said to the gal, "I'll do it. Not that it's fit that I should sit with you at table, but I couldn't eat unless you did."

She sat down opposite the coffeepot and poured me a cup of coffee. Then with her own hands she helped me to the chicken, askin' me if I liked white or dark meat. Then she landed some of the cream potatoes on my plate, and when I gave her a wistful look, that meant I wished she'd try to eat somethin' herself, she took a bit o' the chicken and some bread and butter and eat it for my sake.

She didn't give me a lecture when I left her; it was no more necessary than givin' me another dinner and would have gone against me just as much. She just said: "Some day when you are along this way again drop in. The latchstring is always out, and there are more chickens in the roost."

I didn't think I could say anything at fust. I jest looked down at the floor, but before I got out o' hearin' I turned and said:

"I don't know what my next line o' work'll be, but it won't be this one, and it's all owin' to you."

I left her standin' in the front yard lookin' after me, and I kind o' thort her eyes were a bit moist, but the only thing she said was "God help you," and, turnin', went into the house. I reckoned she went up to her mother, who'd been kind o' quiet all the while.

I hunted till I got a job and after I'd been to work awhile concluded to make a visit to the gal who had converted me and report progress. She seemed glad to see me, but she said that her mother had been so frightened at my last appearance that it had made her ill. She said, too, that if I'd allow her to give me up another dinner I'd make her really happy. I saw that she meant it, and, although I wasn't hungry, I let her do it. I'd have eaten shark's teeth to please her.

I went to see her every now and then after that. On one of my visits I found her lookin' unusually happy, and she told me she was engaged to be married. I tried to look pleased and sympathetic and all that, but it was mighty hard.

"You'll come to my weddin', won't you?" she asked, and, seein' she meant it, I promised to go.

I would rather have been burned at the stake than to go and see her married. I couldn't help showin' that I'd be glad to stay away, but I didn't give her the awful secret I was carryin' about as to why I didn't want to be there. When the day came around I was on hand, sure enough, though it was no use tryin' to look cheerful.

My goin' brought on a crisis that had to come, I suppose, sooner or later. The police were lookin' for me, and at one of my visits to the gal who'd got the upper hand o' me some one I'd previously robbed saw me comin' out o' the house and set the cops on to me, and they watched the place for me. Durin' the weddin' ceremony I felt a hand rest on my shoulder, and I knew what had happened. Without turnin' I whispered, "Don't interrupt the weddin' and let me slide out quiet."

He had the decency to do as I asked, and I stood there lookin' at the bride and groom bein' tied together. It was mighty hard, and if I could 'a' got out without bein' noticed I'd 'a' gone at once with the cop. But the minute the parson said "man and wife" I took the cop's arm—luckily he was in plain clothes—and walked out with him as though he was a particular friend o' mine. I didn't look back neither, fearin' to catch the bride's eye.

I'm payin' the penalty of it all, and I suppose if it hadn't been for one act of kindness when I got out I'd go into the old business. But the gal who did it, though she doesn't belong to me, stands in the way. For her sake, whatever I do, I'll have to be honest.

EARTH CURRENTS.

Experiments to Show Effects of Electric Traction Systems.

Interesting experiments have been made at the Kew Observatory, near London, on the effects of the electric currents produced in the earth by the electric traction systems of the British metropolis. The delicate magnetic instruments of the observatory are affected by the currents.

Metallic plates buried in the ground were connected with a photograph recording apparatus, and the tracings recorded by the instrument formed a picture of the time-table of the London Central Railway, although the nearest point of approach of that line is six miles from Kew.

Even accidental breakdowns occurring on the traction line were indicated in the photographic record.

By connecting the earth-plates with a sensitive galvanometer, the effect of the movements of the tramway controllers was rendered evident, and, a telephone being attached, sounds were heard at each controller movement.

RENEW THE WAR

Mexican Capital Again under Rain of Shells.

MADERO STILL IS PRESIDENT

His Resignation, Demanded by Senate and Once Authoritatively Announced, Is Refused at Last Moment, and Arbitrament of Fire and Iron Is Again Invoked to Remove Him.

A truce established in Mexico City between President Madero and General Diaz ended by mutual consent and machine guns on the roof of the arsenal began sweeping San Juan Plaza, south of the Alameda, where the federal troops had taken position for a renewal of the assaults on the rebel fortress.

Francisco I. Madero is still president and the issue between him and General Felix Diaz must yet be fought out.

The capital was almost gay Sunday morning for the first time since the revolt began. The armistice which went into operation at 2 o'clock in the morning encouraged many thousands to venture back to the center of the city. The shops were open, several of the larger markets received supplies from the country, and people were able to buy food and other necessaries.

From dawn until afternoon the streets were crowded. There was feverish activity. Citizens staggered under burdens of food and clothing which they were removing to places of refuge. The well-to-do were able to obtain cash from the banks and there was more money in circulation than has been seen in the capital for eight days.

Bodies Removed from Streets.

The greatest boon of all was the opportunity that was given to the Red and White Cross organizations and to volunteers and sanitary organizations to remove from the streets such things as imperiled health and were in a way to produce pestilence. For a week the sanitation had been indescribable. The forty acres of the Alameda were strewn with the bodies of horses. The federal cavalry had used the park for bivouacs and their position had drawn destructive shelling from the arsenal.

In many of the principal streets, bodies of soldiers and of citizens had lain for days, buried under the wreckage of buildings. In Juan De La Letran street, twenty federals had been killed on Friday by the explosion of a shell in a warehouse, where the men were quartered. The volunteers, made up of Mexicans, directed by American, Spanish and German doctors, were able to remove many of these bodies and to lessen to some extend the peril of pestilence.

Wreckage of Week's Warfare.

For seven days, a city of 500,000 people, had endured warfare which recognized none of the laws of civilized fighting. Six-inch field guns had duelled at a range of from four to twenty blocks, sweeping the finest streets of the city with their shells. Night and day the people were alarmed by the terrific roar of the cannonading and were driven from quarter to quarter as the zone of the fighting extended. All classes suffered. The wealthy whose homes were in the center of the city were in no better position than the unfortunates of the red light district. Dozens of fine mansions were wrecked or burned. Some of the most ornamental buildings of the capital will have to be rebuilt at enormous expense. In the mad warfare in the heart of a great city, neither Madero nor Diaz counted the cost.

One Thousand Killed.

A conservative estimate placed the number of dead in the week's fighting at one thousand, the number of wounded at more than 1,500. This includes citizens and foreign residents as well as soldiers. The Maderistas were by far the heavier losers. Diaz lost probably fifty killed and 200 wounded. The federal troops, because of their hopeless frontal attacks on the arsenal in the face of deadly machine gun fire, lost probably 600 in killed and 1,000 in wounded.

There was better feeling in the capital as a result of President Taft's announcement that there would be no intervention at this time. The American president's denial of rumors that were given credence by General Camacho and many of the senators had a good effect.

Police Close Parochial Schools.

Squads of police took possession of seven parochial school buildings in Evansville, Ind., dismissed the 2,000 scholars and locked up the school houses. The action came as a result of the refusal of the schools to obey the board of health's ruling that no unvaccinated children should attend.

The Wilson Cabinet.

President-Elect Wilson says that there will be no official announcement of the membership of his cabinet and that the names of the men chosen will be made public when he sends them to the senate for confirmation.

INAUGURAL MARCH

Will Be Longest Parade of Its Kind Ever Held.

COMMITTEE GETTING NERVOUS

Serious Problem Presented by the Growth of the Great Procession of March 4—Ohio, Up to Date, Has Outdone All Other States—The Suffrage Parade.

The members of the inauguration committee in Washington are beginning to show some slight signs of nervousness over the extent of the problem presented by the unexpected growth of the procession of March 4 which promises to be the longest inaugural parade that has ever passed down Pennsylvania avenue.

Although almost a month off, requests for places for 50,000 men in the line already have been received It is feared that further requests will make the great band of marching men and horses difficult to direct.

Civic Portion of Parade.

The civic portion of the parade alone will aggregate 20,000 men, according to a partial list drawn up by the committee today. This division is being augmented every day and within the next three weeks may be doubled.

To date, it was announced, the state of Ohio has outdone all other states of the union in sending representatives for the procession and the inauguration ceremonies. Formal notification was received by the committee that the entire Ohio legislature will adjourn for several days and come to Washington in a body.

Parade of Suffragists.

Thousands of school children of Washington will swell the crowds in the suffragist parade March 3, if the board of education passes favorably upon a request from the National Suffrage organization that the schools be closed on that day. Captain James F. Ayster, president of the board, declared himself in favor of granting the petition.

To Protest Against Ballot.

While they were congratulating themselves on the evidently favorable attitude of the board, the suffragist leaders heard with some dismay that the National society opposed to equal suffrage had leased a downtown theater for Feb. 28 in which to hold a monster mass meeting to protest against the demand for the ballot. It is announced that men and women prominent in both political and social life will be among the speakers.

GRAND RAPIDS—John C. Clark, living in Grand Ledge, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in local federal district court. His liabilities are $2,000.

JAIL TERMS FOR TRUST MEN

President of National Cash Register Company and Aids Sentenced.

At Cincinnati, Ohio, John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register company, and twenty-eight other officials or former officials of the company, convicted of criminal violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, were sentenced to jail in the United States court and ordered to also pay fines.

President Patterson's sentence was one year in jail and $5,000 fine.

The twenty-eight other defendants were sentenced to terms ranging from three months to a year in jail, and to pay the costs.

This is the second time in the long record of prosecutions under the Sherman law that sentences of imprisonment have been imposed for violation of the act.

POET OF THE SIERRAS

Joaquin Miller Dies in Home Near San Francisco.

JOAQUIN MILLER DIES OF OLD AGE

Body to Be Cremated on Pyre of His Own Building.

Joaquin Miller, the venerable "Poet of the Sierras," passed away at his home at the Heights on Hills, which overlooked Berkeley, Oakland and San Francisco bay. Death came as the result of natural decline of physical force of the aged poet, who was seventy-two.

Miller has been unconscious for five days. He had been confined to his bed for six weeks. His wife and his daughter, Juanita, were the only ones in attendance.

About a year ago Mr. Miller was taken seriously ill, and his wife, who had been separated from him for years, was induced by her daughter to visit and help care for the aged poet. He recovered slowly, but it was only within the last two months that he was able to walk about unaided.

Miller's body will be burned on a funeral pyre of stone which he built with his own hands. Near by is the tomb of rock which he erected to the memory of Moses. Near by is the grave of his mother, who lived to be over ninety years old.

Bury First G. A. R. Commander.

Galesburg, Mich., Feb. 18.—Members of the G. A. R. post of the village accompanied to the grave the body of A. E. Stafford, the first commander of the local post.

LOSS BY LITCHFIELD BLAZE

Fire Visits Village and Takes Row of Buildings.

Litchfield, Mich., Feb. 17.—Fire destroyed the row of wooden buildings on West St. Joe street.

The offices of the Southern Michigan Telephone company and Wattle & Co., the feed store of Henning Bros. and the new motion picture theater, owned by Coldwater parties were burned.

William Granger and family, who lived in the rooms over the feed store discovered the fire and escaped. The Rogers building, also burned, was occupied by the Odd Fellows and Maccabees and by Charles Bremer with agricultural implements. It is thought the fire originated in this building.

The loss cannot be estimated at present, but will run up into the thousands.

BATTLE FOR LIVES ON FROZEN STRAITS

Plight of Chief Wawatum Passengers Told by Lightkeeper.

Petoskey, Mich., Feb. 17.—Coming to the mainland for the first time since the blockade of traffic on the Straits of Mackinac, Joseph Fountain, keeper of the lighthouse at St. Helene, tells a thrilling story of how four passengers of the icebound ferry Chief Wawatum, were rescued from a lingering death after they had abandoned hope.

The men set out from the ferry to walk across the straits, but lost their way and wandered about for an entire day. Finally, two of them, exhausted, lay down on the ice and gave up hope, while the other two staggered on, sighting the St. Helene light just as they were ready to resign themselves, as had their companions.

The two men managed to reach the lighthouse, where they were aided by Mr. Fountain, who then took a lantern and searched for the other two men whom he at last found lying prone on the ice.

They were taken to the lighthouse just in time to escape death and the four were fed and sheltered for several days.

PONTIAC—The attorneys working for Jacob Goldstein of Detroit, awaiting sentence in the circuit court for an alleged statutory offense, announced that a new trial will be asked on the evidence that the girl in the case is more than sixteen years old.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING — With practically all their differences satisfactorily settled at meetings of leaders of the so-called "progressive" and "regular" factions Michigan Republicans in the state convention, nominated candidates for justices of the supreme court and minor offices to be filled at the spring election and adopted a platform that contained every plank which the delegates styling themselves progressives had previously agreed to insist upon. The ticket nominated includes: Justices of the supreme court, Joseph B. Steere, Sault Ste. Marie; Joseph B. Moore, Lapeer; superintendent of public instruction, L. L. Wright, Ironwood; regents of the university, W. H. Sawyer, Hillsdale; Victor M. Gore, Benton Harbor.

ANN ARBOR—Dr. W. J. Bein, who was the house physician in one of the University of Michigan hospitals, was given two hours to get his belongings out of the hospital. Dr. Bein was one of those causing the disturbance about 2 o'clock in the morning, when he and a crowd of students and town boys attempted to force their way into Waterman gymnasium, where the annual "J" hop was in progress. Dr. Bein was in the foreguard of the crowd, and in his desire to see the dance he so far forgot himself as to smash the nose of Janitor Bradley, who was assisting in keeping the uninvited crowd out of the gymnasium.

NEWPORT—A disastrous fire of unknown origin, which started in Bartland Brothers' department store destroyed five buildings before a local bucket brigade, with the assistance of fire apparatus from Monroe succeeded in checking the flames. The losers were: Bartland Brothers, $3,500; G. Francisco, $1,500; G. Martin estate, $500; William Francisco, $300; Hawley & Gee, $1,000; Philip Fix, $1,500.

BAY CITY—Miss Edna Spear, the pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Speir, was married to Henry Alexander, of Oswego, N. Y. The service was performed by Rev. Amos Watkins, rector of Trinity Episcopal church. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander left for Oswego, N. Y. Among the guests were Mrs. Alexander of Oswego, mother of the groom, and Mrs. Foster Fralick of Detroit, sister of the bride.

PARSHALLVILLE — One small child was burned to death and another was so badly injured that death may ensue when the two slept on the floor in front of a coal stove and sparks from the stove fired the bed clothing which covered them. The two victims were: Dale, one and one-half years old, and Ernest, three, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Albert McAllister.

HASTINGS—While at work helping his father cut wood at a portable sawmill, Paul Strimbeck, fifteen years old, of Hastings township, nearly lost his left leg when his knee came in contact with the saw. Amputation was unnecessary. Strimbeck will be life-long cripple.

WALTZ—A disastrous fire originating in the basement of Earnest & Britting's general store destroyed that building and also the Reeves grocery and barber shop. The stores burned were all the village possessed. A bucket brigade fought the flames, but without success.

RUTH—After being trapped on the second floor of the Gentiner building when escape was cut off by fire Mrs. John Gentiner and her eighteen-months-old baby had a narrow escape from being cremated. Passersby put up a ladder. The flames did considerable damage.

COAST TO COAST

Four Years Experience as a Marine

BY WM. M. OLDS

One can always tell when one of the sand storms is on its way, the sky turns dark and looks as if rain was coming, but there is never any rain this time of the year so every body knows what it is. I have seen the sand and dust blow so thick that a person walking a hundred and twenty-five feet away could not be seen. People living in Pekin close up the doors and windows as tight as possible, for the dust drifts like snow in the small cracks and crevices and covers up everything. It is also bad to breathe often causing consumption. The sun shines every day during the winter and the air is dry but on account of these sand storms life is sometimes made miserable.

China is just on the dawn of civilization, and some people in America believe this civilization will be made by people from America and Europe, but people that have been to China and studied the Chinese a little think differently. About one twentieth of the Chinese, the ones that are well to do who dress well and neat and have comfortable homes, already have a civilization, all of the rest are to poverty stricken to have a civilization but it is thought that the rest will become civilized as they gradually become richer under the new government which was born in 1912, and this civilization will be their own, not the civilization of a white man. Their civilization started long before a white man's ever did, and they are not going to be talked out of it by a few missionaries.

We stayed in Pekin until Aug. 27, 1912, and then were ordered away, leaving Pekin the next morning at 9 o'clock for a Chinese village on the coast, Chingwanton 350 miles away. We arrived at sun down that day, passing through a fine farming country and about fifteen Chinese towns. We went aboard ship that evening but did not pull out until the evening of the 29th, and were two days going south to the City of Chiefoo. This is the largest silk port in China, a large quantity being sent away every year. We arrived there at 4 p. m. Aug. 31, four days later we coaled one of the U. S. ships.

We left Chiefoo Sept. 18, under cover of darkness, after being there two weeks. Two days later we reached Shanghai staying until the 21th, when we started for the Phillipines 1100 miles away. When two days out we met a typhoon which started from the coast of Fermosa travelling north west. On account of the condition of the ships boilers, we changed our route going to the coast of China where we anchored. The typhoon lasted two days. We then started on our way arriving in Manilla Bay Oct. 25.

Land of "Damned Professor."

It can hardly be doubted that could Lord Palmerston have seen what I have seen of the changes in Germany, he would at least have placed the "damned" in another part of his famous sentence. These professors have turned their prowess into channels which have given Germany, in this scientific industrial age, a mighty grip upon something more than theories.—Price Collier in Scribner's.

SARA FRANCELIA STOUT

Sara Francelia Hopkins was born in Binghampton, N. Y. in 1852. She came with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hopkins, to Michigan in 1866 and lived in Tecumseh the remainder of her life except one year's residence in Saratoga, N. Y.

In early womanhood she was united in marriage to Herbert E. Stout since living in the old Stout Homestead in Brownville. Eight years ago the husband was taken away the deceased still keeping the old home with her son Charles.

As a girl, wife and mother, Franc Stout was identified with the social and home life of Tecumseh, beside for several years conducting a successful business in the town, and her death comes as a personal loss to many friends and relatives.

The deceased is survived by a son, Chas. Wilson Stout, a sister, Mrs. W. R. Wooden of Battle Creek, a niece, Mrs. R. S. Hinsdale, of DesMoines, Ia. and several cousins.

Distribution of Solar Energy.

Solar energy is not evenly distributed over the surface of the earth. There are privileged regions in the tropics which would become vastly prosperous if the sun's rays were suitably employed. Even now the strongest nations are rivaling one another in the conquest of the lands of the sun as if unconsciously looking forward to the future.

To Our Friends and Neighbors

You know us. You know we would not—that we could not afford to—go back on our word. Nor can you afford to ignore this money-back-if-not-satisfied offer on this splendid laxative.

We honestly believe we have the best bowel remedy ever made—the most pleasant-to-take, most permanently beneficial laxative for relief from the miseries and dangers arising from constipation.

We wouldn't say this if we didn't believe it to be true. We wouldn't risk our reputation by making such statements did we not feel sure you would find them true.

Our faith is built both on the knowledge of what Rexall Orderlies are made of and on observation of very many severe cases in which they have proven their merit.

Try them at Our Risk

If they do not abundantly prove their merit with you also—if you are not entirely satisfied with them—we will refund your money—and we will do that on your mere say-so. We don't ask you to risk a penny. Isn't that fair?

Just let the bowels fail in properly doing their work—just let their action be delayed and incomplete and the entire system and every other organ suffers. Wastes that should have been dispelled remain to poison the system.

Headaches, biliousness, nervousness and other tormenting and serious ills are common when the bowels fail to act daily as nature intended. All this may be avoided, if you will accept our advice.

Rexall Orderlies

taste just like candy. They are soothing and easy in action. They do not cause griping, nausea, purging or excessive looseness. They tend to tone and strengthen intestinal nerves and muscles. They promptly relieve constipation, and help to permanently overcome it.

Rexall Orderlies promote better spirits and better health. In all of these things they are vastly superior to old-fashioned, harsh salts and other purgatives, which are not only unpleasant to take but which usually leave the bowels in worse condition than before. We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children, aged and delicate persons.

CAUTION: Please bear in mind that Rexall Orderlies are not sold by all druggists. You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores. You can buy Rexall Orderlies in this community only at our store:

THANKS

Miss Margaret Haire now in St. Joseph's Sanitarium Ann Arbor, wishes through the columns of the Tecumseh Herald, to thank her many friends who so kindly and bountifully remembered her with a post card shower this week. She is doing nicely and hopes soon to be in her usual health.

THE J. HOP U. OF M.

At last the famous "J" hop in Ann Arbor, is a thing of the past, the edict having been past by the Senate body that this event be indefinitely postponed. The riot started by students and town boys last week at the hop, and the objectionable dancing being the principal causes for the decision. Every new dance on the calender was indulged in, Tango, Bunny Hug, Grizzly Bear, Texas Tommy and Turkey Trot, and the critics in the gallery were full of disgust.

While less than 50 students may have been in the riot outside, yet there were over four hundred onlookers, which made it appear worse than it was, as the larger proportion of the rioters were town boys. For the honor of the U. of M., we are glad that action has been taken.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Stanley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man sings a lullaby it naturally sounds rocky.

Conductor S. L. Miller, Norfolk, Nebr., on Bonesteel Division of C. & N. W. Ry. Co., recommends Foley Kidney Pills and says:—"I have used Foley Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and endorse their use for any one afflicted with kidney trouble. They are all right." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What has become of the old-fashioned widow who used to "set her cap" for No. 2?

Mrs. S. S. S., Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

School Children's Attention.

Prof. W. Phillips read recently, before the Royal Sanitary Institute in England, a paper detailing his observations on the limit of school children's capacity for attention. He concludes that two intervals of rest of 10 minutes each during an ordinary school session are more useful than one of 20 minutes. The attention wanes more rapidly in the afternoon, and consequently the studies which most severely tax the attention, like mathematics, should be confined to the morning hours. Professor Phillips concludes that gymnastics is not of necessity a mentally recuperative agent. If the teacher is a strict disciplinarian in gymnastics, the fatigue exhibited by the children may be of a pronounced character.

Vienna's Crown of Green.

The city of Vienna has recently undertaken, at an estimated expense of $10,000,000, to surround itself with a belt of forests. The existing forests near the city are to be preserved, and others, together with broad green meads, are to be established in such a way as completely to encircle the city. Land is being reserved for the new plantations, which are to be connected with the celebrated Prater, which already forms a green border for the Austrian capital on the east. This idea is enthusiastically urged for the beautifying of the suburbs of other cities, which are now, in many cases, not only unattractive, but often hideous.

MICROBES JUST A FEW.

A Small Matter of 126 Billions In One Corner of the Human Body.

The alimentary canal is the most perfect culture tube known to bacteriological science. No part of the body is so densely populated with micro-organisms. It is estimated that in the alimentary canal of the average adult about 126,000,000,000 microbes come into existence every day.

They crowd this region so densely that scientists originally believed that they were indispensable to human life. According to a writer in McClure's, Pasteur, who first discovered them, maintained this view, but recent investigations have rather disproved it.

There are many animals that exist in perfect health, without any intestinal bacteria at all. Polar bears, seals, penquins, elder ducks, arctic reindeer—these and other creatures in the arctic zone have few traces of these organisms.

Man as an Engine.

Among the investigations undertaken by the Carnegie Institution is one intended to determine the physical properties and efficiencies of the human body. The experiments are similar in their nature to those made by mechanical engineers on steam-engines and power-plants. An aparatus has been devised, under the direction of Professor Benedict of the Wesleyan University, whereby man, considered as an engine or power-plant, may be studied as carefully as any other mechanical plant. Investigators are also studying the effects and the chemical and physiological properties of various foods. The president of the institution, Professor Woodward, remarks that the investigations possess a peculiar interest, inasmuch as the instruments of investigation are at the same time the objects of research.

A Remarkable Spring.

One of the most remarkable springs in the world, says J. A. Eddy, in the Engineering and Mining Journal, has recently been discovered in New Mexico. It is literally a spring saturated with sodium sulphate. Distilled water weighs 8 1-3 pounds per gallon; the water of this spring weighs 10 2-3 pounds. The temperature of the spring is a little over 110 degrees Fahrenheit. As the saturated liquid overflows and cools, it forms a crystalline mass like ice, which, in the course of ages, has spread into a snow-white bed of solid sodium salts, miles in extent, and as level as a lake. The warm brine, Mr. Eddy reports, is inhabited by a minute shrimp-like organism, and a species of plant is found growing in the dry expanse of sodium sulphate.

A Wonderful Eye.

Recent studies of the skulls of the morosaurus, the diplodocus, and other species of the extinct gigantic animals called the sauropoda, have brought out the fact that in several of these creatures, although perhaps not in all species, there existed on the top of the skull a well-defined tubular opening, smoothly lined with bone, and leading directly down into the cerebral cavity. Professor Osborn regards it as probable that in this opening was lodged a large pineal, that is, cone-shaped, eye, an organ the existence of which was left problematical by the researches of the late Professor Marsh. In a recently restored skull of the morosaurus the orbits are of enormous size.

About Egypt.

The total area of Egypt proper is about 480,000 square miles, of which, however, only some 14,000 square miles are arable. The population exceeds 10,000,000, the density of the settled part thus surpassing that of any other land on earth, Belgium not excepted. The superiority of Egypt as an agricultural country is owing to the equable climate; the possibility of carrying on farming all the year round, a constant supply of water and, as a consequence of the Nile overflow, a natural and perpetual richness of the soil, which does away with the great cost of fertilization.

TWENTY YEARS.

Makes a great difference in most women. They are troubled with "nerves"—they suffer from backache, headache, sleeplessness, a sensation of irritability or twitching, hot flashes, dizzy spells, or many other symptoms of female weakness. The local disorder and inflammation should be treated with Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets and the irregularity and weakness of the female system corrected and strengthened with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The strain upon the young woman or the woman of middle age—upon the nerve and blood forming structures—may be too great for her strength. This is the time to take this restorative tonic and strength-giving nervine and regulator. For over forty years sold by druggists for woman's peculiar weaknesses and distressing ailments. The one remedy so perfect in composition and so good in curative effects as to warrant its makers in printing its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. The one remedy which absolutely contains neither alcohol nor injurious or habit-forming drugs.

Following letter selected at random from a large number of similar ones and cited merely to illustrate these remarks:

"In the winter of 1908, I became greatly run down and irregular," writes MRS. HENRY SCOTT, of Swan Creek, Mich., Route 1, Box 49. "I slowly but surely grew worse, and, at last, resolved to apply to the doctors for help. The doctor said I had inflammation, enlargement and laceration. I was in bed eleven weeks and got no better. The doctor said I would have to have an operation, but to that I would not listen. My husband purchased two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I started to take this remedy I could not walk across the floor, but after I had taken three bottles I could feel myself gaining, so I dropped the doctor and took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Only for it I think I would have been dead—I really believe it saved my life. I feel better now than in twenty years."

Greatest Charm.

As self-consciousness is the most hampering and distressing trait a woman can have, its opposite is correspondingly attractive. The faculty of quick sympathy, of being able to throw her interest at once into the interest of the other person, is perhaps as great a charm as a woman can possess. It outweighs brilliancy. —Clara Louise Burnham.

Literal Obedience.

Little Harold was getting final instructions before starting for a party.

"Now," cautioned his mother, "at supper if they ask you the second time to have something, you must decline."

Harold agreed and trotted off.

At one stage of the feast the hostess noticed how eagerly the little fellow was applying himself to the task of disposing of a generous dish of marmalade. When he had finished, she inquired: "Won't you have some more, dear?"

The child looked up at her quickly. "I can't accept the second time," he said earnestly after a slight pause, "but if you'll ask me a third time, I think it will be all right."

He was asked.

Annie Laurie.

Annie Laurie was a real personage, the daughter of Sir Robert Laurie, of Maxwelton. The well-known song bearing her name was written by William Douglas when desperately in love with her.

Meeting Annie at a ball in Edinburgh, Douglas became wildly enamored of her, but, owing to the father's bitter opposition and the political intrigue which caused him to flee the country, the affair ended in nothing save the production of the immortal song. Later on Douglas returned to find his sweetheart the wife of another, whereupon, instead of "laying down to die," Douglas married Elizabeth Clark, of Glenborg, and became the happy father of a large family.

Antiquity of Gold Leaf.

The origin of gold leaf, like the first use of gold itself, is lost in the mists of antiquity. It is found, for example, in connection with the most ancient known mummies, having been used for covering teeth, tongue, skin, etc. Sometimes it is also found on the coffins. Gold leaf was also used on the tombs and monuments of ancient Egypt. The process of making gold leaf has thus been known since the eighth century B. C. In the eleventh century it seems to have attained as high a degree of perfection as t[illegible]. The gold leaf on some ancient [illegible] pottery indeed is as thin as that now used.

Growth of City Population.

In 1780 only one-thirtieth of the people of the United States lived in cities of 8,000 inhabitants and over; in 1800, one twenty-fifth; in 1830, one sixteenth; in 1840, one-twelfth; in 1850, one-tenth; in 1860, one-sixth; in 1870, one-fifth; in 1880, one-fourth. It is safe to say that to-day more than one-third of the people of the nation live in cities and towns, with the tendency steadily growing. If the present pace continues, by the middle of the present century the rural population will become extinct.

A South Arabian Food Plant.

Jowari, a tall slender plant resembling corn and headed with a grain something like millet, is the Abdali's chief crop. He feeds the stalk to his camels and eats the grain himself. Three crops a year are produced. Jowari requires little cultivation except weeding, which the Abdali does by hand, and when ripe he cuts it off close to the ground with his hunting knife. New shoots spring up from the roots to become the next crop. For a camel load of about 125 pounds he receives at Aden an average of two rupees, or $64.88. A fair yearly yield is twenty camel loads an acre.

The Grand Canyon.

It is of course, possible that the Grand Canyon of the Colorado may have been a "crack" in the earth caused by earthquake action, but in the books on geology we are given to understand that it is the result of the wearing down of the strata by the action of the waters of the river. It is impossible to get at anything like a definite conclusion as to the age of the Grand Canyon. The figures of the geologists differ, but all agree that the mighty gorge has been many tens of thousands of years in the making.

THE CROSS AND THE CRESCENT

A Story of the Balkan War

By F. A. MITCHEL

When the war between the Balkan states and the Turks broke out it placed Arthur Andrews, an American living in Servia, in a condition calculated to drive him mad. A few years before, having come of age and inheriting a fortune, he went abroad to travel for pleasure. The Balkan peninsula attracted him owing to its rugged scenery, the gay costumes of its people and its general oriental appearance.

The inhabitants of Turkey in Europe are a mixture of the white and Turkish races, Christians and Mohammedans. Andrews was at an impressible, reckless age, an age to fall violently in love and, being in love, not to consider the consequences of an ill assorted marriage. A young Turkish girl to whom he was introduced carried him clean off his feet, and he became so violently in love with her that, throwing caution to the winds, he begged her to marry him.

The lady, Zaide, the daughter of a pasha, born in the highest Turkish circles, did not consider Andrews her social equal, but her heart was enlisted as well as his own, and she consented that he should ask her father for her hand. The pasha, being an admirer of western civilization, looked favorably on his suit and at last consented, provided he would embrace the faith of Islam. The young man declared that he would embrace any faith on the face of the globe if he might be permitted to embrace the pasha's daughter. The marriage was celebrated, and the groom, realizing that his and his wife's religion would be out of place in America, remained in Turkey.

Andrews' Mohammedism, being skin deep, wore off with the first freshness of love. Indeed, the more he saw of the Turks the deeper he sympathized with those who would be glad to see the crescent driven back into Asia, from which it had emerged many centuries before to make its European conquests. Born a Christian, it galled him that the Turks should occupy Christian ground, that their capital should have been founded by the first Christian Roman emperor or that the church of St. Sophia should be a mosque.

When the Montenegrins, in order to forestall an order from the powers, broke, sword in hand, into Turkish territory and Servia was preparing to do her part in the war, a crisis came in the affairs of Andrews and his wife. Her father was not only devoted to the cause of Islam, but was an officer high in the service of the sultan. The young wife declared that she would stand by her father, her countrymen and her religion. Andrews asserted that he would join the Servian forces and aid in banishing the crescent to Asia, where it belonged. They parted, though their hearts were welded, agreeing that after the struggle they would fly again to each other.

During those first few weeks when the allied forces were winning victory after victory and driving their enemy before them there were some temporary setbacks to the allies. In one of these Andrews, who commanded a squadron of cavalry in the Servian army, was wounded and captured. He and those taken with him were hurried to the rear to a reserve corps, which it happened was under the command of Rustom Pasha, his father-in-law.

Zaide, who was a woman of strong character, had while living with her husband become much interested in many European institutions, among others the Red Cross. She had no sooner joined her father than she proceeded to organize a similar corps as an auxiliary to her father's command. One day upon passing hurriedly down between two rows of cots in a hospital her eye fell upon a face which notwithstanding its pallor she recognized at once as her husband. She was about to fly to his embrace when the horror of the situation rushed upon her. Andrews had professed to be a disciple of Mohammed and had drawn his sword against the prophet. So long as he was unrecognized as a Mohammedan he would be treated as a prisoner of war, but if he were known to be or have been of the faith nothing could save him.

The glances of the two met, and this same thought occurred to both. There was a momentary lighting of each pair of eyes. Then the wife withdrew hers, and she passed on down the aisle and left the room.

The hospital, though in the Turkish rear, was not considered permanent, for the allies were pressing forward, fighting like tigers. But for one day and night the sick were undisturbed. During the evening Mrs. Andrews, though worn out with the distressing work of the day, went in among the sick, ostensibly to cheer them, but really to steal a brief interview with her husband. Taking the precaution to stop and speak with a number of sufferers before reaching the bed he occupied, she at last came to his and said in the Turkish tongue and a voice loud enough to be heard:

"Are you badly wounded, sir?"

"Only slightly," was the reassuring reply.

"Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Yes. During the night I am feverish and troubled with a burning thirst. If you can send about midnight some water I shall be grateful."

"I will send it tonight."

She passed on, but both understood that an excuse had been given her to communicate with him at an hour when few were about and possibly to have an interview with him unnoticed.

At midnight she brought the water herself. Only one nurse was on duty, and she sat at a far end of the room half asleep. Unobserved, the wife knelt to give her husband a cup of water, and their lips met.

"You will be discovered surely," she whispered "Indeed, you have been suspected already. One of the nurses has asked me if you were not a Mohammedan, saying that she has seen you at your devotions in a mosque. I told her that I would look into the matter at once. You must leave here at any cost."

"Not if my escape shall compromise you."

"I have thought of a plan. As soon as it is day, begin to groan as if in great pain and keep it up until I appear. I shall then direct your removal to a place where you will not disturb your fellow prisoners. Once there, we may carry out my intentions as to your escape."

Without waiting for a reply she hurried away, leaving her husband fearful of the consequences that would accrue to her in case she were caught assisting in the escape of a renegade Mohammedan.

However, he could see no risk in carrying out so much of her plan as she had given him, and with the first sign of dawn he began a groaning so loud that the nurse in charge reported the fact that it was having a bad effect on the other patients. Zaide at once ordered him taken to a room by himself and remained to look after his necessities after those who had removed him had left and told him the balance of her plan for him. It was that he should put on her clothes and since Turkish ladies do not expose the face there would be little difficulty in his walking out past the guards without being detected.

"And you?" exclaimed the husband. "How will you protect yourself against the terrible fate that will come to you when it is discovered that you are here and I have walked out in your clothes? Though your father commands, he will not be able to save you from the fury of your people."

"I have a chance of deceiving them; you have none."

At that moment there came the distant boom of a gun. It was followed by another and another till the whole became like low muttering thunder.

"The allies are pressing forward," exclaimed Andrews. "Quite likely before long they will have driven their enemy from this position."

"In that case," was the reply, "there will be great confusion among us, and it will not be so difficult to carry out my plan."

During the morning the booming grew more distinct, and added volleys of musketry at last turned the whole into one incessant roar. Zaide was occupied every moment in providing for the wounded that were constantly being brought in and could not steal a moment to visit her husband. Then came an order to abandon the hospital, while the thunder of war without turned comparative order into panic.

What became of the prisoners, excepting Andrews, forms no part of this story, but in the midst of the turmoil Zaide hurried into her husband's room with a nurse's apparel—there were no uniforms—with spots of blood on it. She had removed it from its wearer, who had been killed by a bursting shell. Giving it to her husband, he put it on, and the two sallied forth.

The Turkish line in front was breaking before the impetuous charge of the allies, and panic stricken men were running past, while random shots were whistling by Andrews and his wife. He begged Zaide to make toward the enemy's lines, but she refused.

"Go," she said, "to your people. You are saved, and I will not be suspected of having aided you. I must stand by my father and my faith, else I can no longer live in the home of my ancestors."

They were standing, loath to let go each other's hands, Andrews pulling one way, Zaide the other, when she was struck by a spent ball and stunned, falling into her husband's arms. He, thinking that she was dead, with a cry of anguish, laid her on the ground. She had scarcely recovered consciousness when with a shout a regiment of Servians came bounding past them and they were inclosed within the allied lines.

The transposition from being under the cross instead of the crescent put an entirely new phase in the situation for this loving couple. Both were safe for the present, and should Zaide return to her own people there was no reason to suppose that her having favored a renegade to the cause of Islam would be known. She very soon recovered from the blow she had received and asked to be permitted to return to her work. Andrews made a confidant of his commander and asked him to delay the permission.

While waiting the husband made a strong effort to persuade his wife to adopt the Christian injunction to leave her people and cleave unto her husband. He offered to withdraw from the cause of the allies if she would do the same with that of the Turks. They would go to his own home in America, where Zaide would become one of his own people. After all, the part of a wife, common in most countries, to enter upon her husband's condition prevailed, and Zaide finally agreed to his terms. The allies were besieging Constantinople, and there was little of Islam in Europe left to detain her. Together the two set sail for the land of all religions.

Natural Wells In Yucatan.

Since Yucatan, where the Mayas built their strange cities, is a coral limestone formation, it would, says a writer in Records of the Past, have been a barren desert but for its subterranean rivers, and the cenotes, or water caverns, which give access to them. The Mayas noted the courses of the underground streams and built their towns round the cenotes. Many cenotes are now found surrounded by ruins, and give indications of the methods employed by the Mayas to reach their cool waters. In Uxmal a cenote about 40 feet deep is inhabited by a peculiar species of fish. At Bolanchen there is a cenote having five openings in the rocks at the bottom of the cavern. Ladders made by tying tree trunks together lead down a total distance of 1,400 feet, but the perpendicular depth from the surface to the water is not over 500 feet.

MADERO AND SAUREZ ARE BOTH SLAIN

Attempt at Rescue Is Balked.

HUERTA IS EXONERATED

Ambassador Wilson Thinks Affair as Represented.

RESCUERS FIRE ON GUARDS

In Melee Prisoners Are Riddled by Bullets of Combatants.

Mexico City, Feb. 24.—Ex-President Francisco I. Madero and Ex-Vice President Jose Pino Suarez were riddled with bullets as they were being transferred from the national palace to the penitentiary. An attempt by partisans was made to rescue them and they were killed while trying to escape.

Not Premeditated Assassination.

United States Ambassador Wilson told your correspondent that he thoroughly believed there was a real attempt at rescue by some armed followers of Madero. He did not believe for a moment, he said, that the affair was framed up by the new government, as some intimated. He said that Senor De La Barra talked with him two days ago about a plan to remove Ex-President Madero and Vice President Suarez to the penitentiary for better security and comfort. Mr. Wilson said he considered this as proof of good faith on the part of the present regime.

It seems that Madero and Suarez were advised before midnight of the project to transfer them to the penitentiary. They arose, dressed and entered an automobile in waiting in the courtyard of the palace. The auto had already been occupied by Major Cardenas and a force of armed rurales.

Partisans Fire on Guards.

The automobile immediately left for penitentiary, followed by another automobile full of rurales. The machines had gone about two-thirds of the way to the penitentiary and were in the Colonia De La Bolsa, Mexico's whitechapel district, when, at the corner of Calle Le Cumberri, five armed men crying "Viva Madero" fired upon the guards. These men were followed by some thirty others from a side street, who also fired volleys at the two automobiles, riddling them. From what can be learned the prisoners took advantage of this attack to attempt their escape and they were riddled with bullets, whether by the rurales, or accidentally by their would-be rescuers, is not known.

SENORA MADERO.

One of the rescuers was killed and several others arrested.

Huerta Denies Responsibility.

After the news of the killing of Madero and Suarez became known Provisional President Huerta immediately sent for the newspaper men, making full and frank statement of the facts and promised to give the fullest details obtainable later, as he considered it most important to justify the government in the matter and avoid any suspicion that might arise, that it was a "put-up job." The bodies of the deposed president and vice president were removed to the penitentiary.

The widow of Madero obtained possession of his body only after Ambassador Wilson had interceded for her. Nearly prostrated from the frightful news that had come to her, she pleaded pitifully for permission to see the body. The government refused. Mr. Wilson called upon De La Barra and persuaded him to grant Senora Madero's request. At 3 p. m. General Blanquet delivered the body to Alberto Perez, Senora Madero's brother.

PUJO COMMITTEE IN CONFERENCE

Considering Report to Be Made to the House.

RADICAL DOCUMENT EXPECTED

Holds That Existence of Money Trust Has Been Established and That Same Was Built Up by J. P. Morgan & Co. and Their Allies, Through Control of Many Banks.

Washington, Feb. 24. — Chairman Pujo of the "money trust" committee and Samuel Untermyer, its counsel, held a conference at the New Willard and reviewed in detail the report of the findings which have been presented for the consideration of the whole sub-committee today. The committee assembled early and it is the hope of Chairman Pujo that one whole day of review will suffice for the acceptance of Mr. Untermyer's report. Mr. Pujo said:

"It must be realized that the work of reviewing this report is a big contract. The report represents the condensation and interpretation of more than 2,200 pages of printed testimony. It is my hope that it can be completed in one sitting and that will be a lengthy sitting perhaps, lasting well into tonight."

By Wednesday Mr. Pujo and his associates, it is expected, will be ready to report to the full committee on banking and currency, of which Mr. Pujo is chairman, with a view to the report by that committee to the house of the results of the subcommittee's labors. The committee is prepared to hold that the existence of a money trust as outlined in the committee's resolution authorizing the investigation has been established. The committee will charge that the concentration of wealth and credit is built up by J. P. Morgan & Co. and their allies through their control of banking interests in New York, Boston and Chicago.

If the plans of Untermyer and the chairman of the committee go through a radical report will be presented to the house. This report will not only propose a series of sweeping reforms in New York stock exchange methods, but will present recommendations for the control of clearing house associations and for the termination of the present system of interlocking directors and for a readjustment of relations between private bankers and the interstate corporations whose securities these bankers have handled for years.

PRESIDENT TAFT IS TOLD OF KILLINGS

President-Elect Wilson Refuses to Make Comment.

New York, Feb. 24.—President Taft received word of the killing of Madero and Suarez just as he was boarding a train in the Pennsylvania station for Washington. He seemed considerably affected and his manner changed. All he would say was that he was greatly grieved. He hoped that the first report might prove to be without foundation.

Those who talked with the president saw that he considered the death of Madero a most unfortunate occurrence.

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 24. — President-Elect Wilson had no comment to make on the situation in Mexico.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 24.—When Evariste E. Madero, brother of Gustavo and Francisco Madero, was informed of the killing of the former president of Mexico he was so overcome with shock and grief that all he could ejaculate was "executed" in a high shrill voice. He then retired to his room to be alone with his grief.

FOOLED IN HORSE DEAL

Minister Buys a Sound-Winded Beast with Poor Lungs.

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 24.—W. A. Evans of Plainfield, who quit a pulpit temporarily to go to farming, told in the justice court how he had been shamefully deceived by a Chicago horse trader, one Felix Rybski, who sold him a wind-broken horse under a written guarantee that he was of "sound wind."

"He sold me the skate which coughs at every step," said the indignant minister.

The guarantee, however was hard to discipher. Some who examined the writing said it guaranteed a horse of "sound mind," not "sound wind."

SUSPECTS REVEAL ARSON TRUST WAYS

Witness Tells How Experts May Regulate Fires.

Chicago, Feb. 24. — Systematized efforts employed by members of the alleged "arson trust" were disclosed by witnesses examined by Assistant State's Attorney Johnston. They explained to him that in arson circles incendiary fires are placed in two classes, "blow outs" and "flashes."

A "blow out" is a fire which destroys both the building and its contents. A "flash" only burns the contents.

The witness asserted that the "firebugs" could regulate fires by means of the distribution of gasoline. When a "blow out" was desired gasoline in large cans was placed throughout the building in order to cause an explosion.

When a request to burn the contents of a building was made gasoline would be sprinkled over the stock.

New York, Feb. 24.—Money which, it is alleged, Police Captain Dennis Sweeney, who is under indictment, took for police protection in his Harlem precinct was turned to speculation in stocks, according to evidence which District Attorney Charles S. Whitman said had come into his possession.

It was alleged that two large and active accounts in Sweeney's name were found in stock brokerage houses in Wall street. It was said that the brokers would be subpoenaed before the grand jury to furnish evidence regarding the accounts. It is said that in the main Sweeney had been a heavy loser in his speculations.

TAFT'S POLICY NOT TO CHANGE

Assassinations in Mexico Make No Difference.

SCENT PLOT IN NIGHT TRAGEDY

Belief in Official Washington Is That Attempt at Rescue and Battle That Followed Were Only Portion of Cunningly Devised Scheme to Put Deposed Officials Out of the Way.

PREPARE 20,000 SOLDIERS FOR MEXICAN CRISIS.

Fifth brigade, Second division, United States army, comprising 4,000 men, ordered to Galveston at once.

Troops already at Texas points number 5,000.

Fourth brigade, including Twenty-Seventh infantry from Fort Sheridan, Illinois, ordered to prepare to take trains for Galveston.

First brigade, First division, already under orders.

Marines on warships in Mexican waters number 1,000.

Force of marines on reserve ships of Atlantic fleet at Guantanamo, Cuba, 2,000.

Total force available for call 20,000 men, who will be sent to Galveston before close of Taft administration.

Washington, Feb. 24. — Official Washington was most deeply shocked to learn of the killing of Francisco I. Madero and Pino Suarez, deposed president and vice president of Mexico, in the streets of Mexico City. The word came from President Taft himself, however, that the slaying of Madero and Suarez, deplorable as the administration regards it, afforded no basis for any change in the policy of the United States with regard to the Mexican situation.

Though the United States government had expressed to the Huerta government in Mexico its earnest hope that Madero would not be executed by any summary or illegal process and that his life might be spared, this expression of views was not made in the form of a demand for the preservation of Madero's life.

Think Killings Part of Plot.

The belief that Madero and Suarez were killed as the result of a plot, of which those associated with the present government were cognizant, was so general there that it is certain the Huerta government will have to make a most convincing statement of the affair if the current opinion here is to be reversed.

That the Mexican government will be severely censured by public opinion in the United States for permitting Madero to be killed while a prisoner, even though itself not in a plot for his death was predicted here. Just as the execution of Gustavo Madero alienated from the new government in Mexico much of the sympathy which it had enjoyed in Washington, so the killing of Madero and Suarez it is declared will lower Mexico even further in the opinion of the United States.

10,000 Troops at Galveston.

Before President Taft leaves office on March 4, he will have concentrated at Galveston, Tex., close to 10,000 United States troops ready to board transports and depart for Mexico on a few hours' notice.

The president is just as much opposed to intervention as he has been for two years. He is determined, however, that he will "lay the cards on the table," so that when Mr. Wilson becomes president, if a crisis arises, all he will have to do is to play them.

Simply Precautionary Plan.

Through Secretary Hilles, the president announced that the dispatch of a brigade of troops to Galveston was part of the original precautionary plan and that it would be followed by another order which would send between 3,000 and 4,000 more regulars to the boundary.

Galveston is within three days of Vera Cruz, the seaport of Mexico City. Four transports will be ready there to take the troops south if the contingency arises and with battleships of the Atlantic and Pacific near Mexican ports, the president feels, that Mr. Wilson will have no cause to complaint of unpreparedness if the unexpected happens.

HAD FAITH IN THE OLD MINE

How Fortune Came to a Girl Who Had Confidence.

"My poor little girl," gasped old Tom Conyers on his deathbed, "I dread to leave you with nothing. If I could have lived six months I might have left you rich."

"Oh, I don't mind that, dad. I'll get along."

Sallie Conyers buried her father and packed up their belongings ready to leave the old cabin, near the mine in which all his hopes had been centered. She found a will drawn some time before, but now there appeared to be no occasion for a will. Then she went down to Colorado Springs, where she had an aunt to whom she could look for guidance.

When her father died Sallie was sixteen. A year later a vein was discovered in the mine in which she still had an interest. A dividend was declared that gave her $1,000, which by the terms of the will she could not have till she was twenty-one years old. But the vein soon died out, and the Conyers mine was abandoned.

Two years later a couple of speculators bought the property for a song, wiped out the old stock and organized a company called the Hope Mining company.

Meanwhile Sallie Conyers was earning her living in Colorado Springs. When she was twenty she became engaged to a clerk in a bank with a salary so infinitesimal that matrimony between the two seemed but a multiplication of their troubles. But the day was approaching when Sallie would come into her $1,000, and that would enable them to set up in a small way at housekeeping.

The day she was paid the money began happily and ended in misery. Willard Stearns, her lover, had been long looking for the day when they should be married. Now, when the money was paid, Sallie told him that she proposed to invest it in the stock of the Hope Mining company. He looked at her aghast.

"I have kept in touch with the property," she said, "and know something about what they are doing. My father worked that mine for three years. He used to talk to me about it because he hadn't any one else to confide what absorbed him. I know that when a certain event happens, if it ever does happen, a rich lode will be struck."

She got out her father's old maps, showing plot after plot crossing and covering one another, and tried to explain what her father had so often explained to her. But either he could not or would not understand. He took no interest in the angle at which the Sanborn lode dipped nor in the depth at which it crossed the Conyers. A gold mine to him meant a capacious maw capable of swallowing the hard earned money of simple minded people. He told Sallie that if he married her he had the prospect of living with a woman who had inherited a speculative mania. He preferred to go through life alone.

Sallie tearfully accepted the situation. The next day she visited the mine and introduced herself to the superintendent of the boring gang as the daughter of the former owner. He was very kind to her, answered all her questions, but showed no expectation of striking paying dirt. Indeed, he told her that he expected soon to abandon the work. Sallie asked him how deep was the hole. He told her it was 1,400 feet. "Promise me that you won't stop till you have gone 200 feet farther," she said. "Why so?" "Because you'll strike a rich vein at 1,500 feet."

He gave the promise, and Sallie returned to Colorado Springs. The next day she went to a broker and asked the market price of Hope Mining shares. They told her that there had not been a quotation for months, but if 2 or 3 cents were offered it would bring all she might wish to buy. She authorized them to offer 2 cents a share for as much as $1,000 would purchase. The offer was made and $50,000 par value of the stock secured.

Old Conyers had expected to make a strike at from 1,450 to 1,500 feet. Sallie waited a week in a terrible suspense. She had absolute confidence in her father's expectations, but her $1,000 was backing these expectations. The next day, looking at the quotations of Hope stock, she was astounded to see that it had been run up to 50 bid and few sales. The vein had been struck, the stock became worth $2 a share, and Sallie was rich.

Willard Stearns kept away from Sallie from the day he told her he would not marry one who had inherited a mania for speculation. One day he heard of a great rise in Hope Mining company stock and saw an item in a newspaper stating that the daughter of Conyers, who formerly owned the mine, had a large block of the stock. His heart for a moment seemed to cease to beat. He hoped Sallie would send for him. But she didn't. He wrote her a note congratulating her on her good fortune and received a very kind reply. This encouraged him, and he sought to renew the engagement.

"No," she said, "your reasons were good, though not exactly as you stated them. You and I are made of different stuff. I am, like my father, ready to risk all on that in which I have confidence. Your natural bent is in a different line. Together we should be constantly pulling in different directions."

Big Game and Disease.

It has been suggested that the big game of Africa should be systematically exterminated in order to abolish the "fly fever" by destroying the principal means of nourishment of the tsetse. In regard to this suggestion, Sir David Bruce says that while it is true that the tsetse disappears when the big game is killed off, there are other African diseases similar to the fly disease which are not spread by the tsetse. Although "civilization and big game cannot exist together," he thinks that the proposed wholesale destruction all over Africa would be quite unjustifiable. As the new country is divided off into farms, the big game must go, but the process should be a gradual one, applied only as the exigencies demand. For at least a thousand years to come there ought to be room in Africa for big game reserves.

BILLY SUNDAY

The Adrian Telegram has an extra good editorial on Billy Sunday, from which we quote a few paragraphs. "Nearly every man who attempts the new and untried makes fast friends and better enemies. This has been true of the remarkable career of Evangelist Billy Sunday, who last week Sunday completed a six weeks campaign in Columbus. During his stay there, 18,137 converts "hit the trail" as Sunday expresses it, or came forward to the altar at the request of the Evangelist.

"The Career of the base ball reformer has been like a meteor, he is unique in his field. His individuality calls forth unlimited criticisms of both man and methods, but they advertise both. The critics and those who read the criticisms, go to see and hear, and that is what Sunday wants. "It is not for one, or a hundred men to say whether or not Sunday's work is a success. That is out of the realm of human judgement. The Evangelist is presenting his case before a higher tribunal."

The Ovation which the City of Columbus gave Sunday at the close of the meetings, has seldom been if ever paralleled in history. Sunday apparently can make the public forget the high cost of living, whatever may be said of him there is but one Billy Sunday.

NEEDED EXPLAINING

Supper was in progress, and the father was telling about a row which took place in front of his store that morning: "The first thing I saw was one man deal the other a sounding blow, and then a crowd gathered. The man who was struck ran and grabbed a large shovel he had been using on the street, and rushed back, his eyes blazing fiercely. I thought he'd surely knock the other man's brains out, and I stepped right in between them.

The young son of the family had become so hugely interested in the narrative as it proceeded that he stopped eating his pudding. So proud was he of his father's valor, his eyes fairly shone, and he cried:

"He could n't knock any brains out of you, could he Father?"

Father looked at him long and earnestly, but the lad's countenance was frank and open.

Father gasped slightly, and resumed his supper.

Advice about Stomach Troubles and how to relieve them.

Don't neglect indigestion, for it may lead to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent physician once said that ninety-five per cent of all ills have their origin in a disordered stomach.

RAILWAY SIGNAL SCHOOLS.

Apprentices Take Three Year Course in Block Signals.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has established signal schools on the divisions of its line east of Pittsburg to train men for the signal service of the system. This is due, says the Bookkeeper, to the rapid growth of block signaling which is in use along these lines. There are some 12,408 signals east of Pittsburg, covering 2,385 miles of road.

The railroad has appointed six signal apprentices who will be trained as engineers to direct and plan signal installations. Apprentices in these schools will serve a three years' course. The first year will be given to mechanical work with the repair and construction gangs, the second year will find them in the office of the supervisor of signals, and the third year will be devoted to outside work on electric and electro-pneumatic appliances.

Missionaries of the Sudan.

"Missionaries wherever they work have many difficulties to encounter and many hardships to contend with, but I doubt if there is any part of the earth where the missionary has a harder time than in the Sudan," said Dr. A. C. Hudson of Los Angeles, who spent several months in that country.

"Despite the effort of the Government to stamp them out, cannibalistic practices are still prevalent in the Sudan. The Government is adopting strong measures to punish those responsible for such inhuman practices.

"The worship of their ancestors, witchcraft and the employment of witch doctors and fetich worship are among the obstacles that confront the missionary, but notwithstanding these and other difficulties the work of evangelization is producing encouraging results, and in Africa to-day there are more than 3,500,000 Christians."

He Couldn't Lose It.

All flushed and breathless, the well-dressed young man picked up the hat he had been chasing down the street, and leaned against a lamp-post to rest.

Another, also breathing heavily, came running up and took the hat out of his hand.

"I'm much obliged," he said.

"For what?"

"This is my hat."

"Where's mine, then?"

"Hanging behind you at the end of the string."

Then for the first time the young man remembered his hat-guard.—Success Magazine.

One of Those Foolish Questions.

A certain man, of rather a waggish disposition, contends that his wife has no imagination. A writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger tells why he thinks so. At dinner one night he chanced to mention a tragic circumstance which he had read in the evening paper on the way home.

It seemed that a passenger on a transatlantic steamer had fallen overboard in mid-ocean, and had never been seen again.

"Was he drowned?" asked his wife.

"Oh, no," answered the husband, "but he sprained his ankle, I believe."

Consider the Difference.

Statisticians inform us that the cost of living has increased 250 per cent. during the last 100 years. Still, it will have to be admitted that living is worth a good deal more than it was 100 years ago.

COAST TO COAST

Four Years Experience as a Marine

BY WM. M. OLDS

We were there until the 15th of October, and then went aboard the U. S. army transport Thomas and left in the evening on Tuesday. On the second day out from Manilla the sea got rough, and the men would feed the fish after each meal. We arrived at Nagasaki Sunday afternoon the 20th at 1 o'clock. The Japanese began to coal the ship and got through the next evening at sunset, so our ship left the beautiful city of more than 200,000 population the morning of October 22th, just before day light.

I would liked to have stayed in Japan at least one week, but all day the 21st, I rode around the city and far into the beautiful hills of the country, among the rice fields and vegetables gardens. Some of the hills are very steep, about two and three thousand feet high, and look like a checker board clear to the very top, by the different shades of the different kinds of vegetables. The harbor of this city is the most handsome I was ever in, the bay in front of the city is surrounded by steep green hills from one to two thousand feet high, and the water in the bay is very clear and blue. As I stood on the upper deck of our ship the next morning while the sun shed its light upon the water of the bay, I was charmed by the scene, the mountain peaks were reflected in the clear water to beautiful to be painted by any artist.

I will always remember Japan and the Hawaiian Islands as the beauty of my cruise. The first forty-eight hours out from Japan we passed a small rocky Isle, 500 miles east of Japan, and this was the last sight of land until November the 5th, which made a little over two weeks out sight of land. We arrived at Honolulu at noon the 5th, and left the next morning at 10 o'clock after taking on about 150 bags of mail for the United States. After the ship left the harbor I stayed on the upper deck and watched the beautiful Isle, the most handsome Isle in the whole world, which I knew in a few more hours would fade from my sight forever.

In six more days we reached San Francisco the land of home and civilization, the first I had seen of the United States for nearly four years. In more than one week after arriving at Mare Island, I was discharged on the 23rd of November 1912. On buying a ticket for a ride over the Santa Fe railroad I passed through the State of California, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, and Illinois, arriving at Tecumseh, Mich., on Friday, December the 20th.

THE END.

TERRITORIAL CENSUS FOUND IN THE VAULTS

LANSING, Feb. 15.—The territorial census of Michigan, taken in 1820, was found in the vaults of the supreme court by C. M. Burton of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical society. Owing to the fact the federal government has no record of the census of that date, the discovery is of considerable interest.

AN INNOCUOUS SMOKE.

By Means of a Holder, Some Cotton and Chloride of Iron.

In an article on the hygiene of smoking published in the Munich Medical Weekly, Dr. J. Bamberger says that the injury which may follow the use of tobacco differs with the manner of smoking. Those who use a mouthpiece, or if not are careful not to keep the end of the cigar saturated with saliva, are much less apt to suffer from the absorption of the various products of the burning tobacco.

"Dry smokers" run much less risk of harming themselves than those who chew the ends of their cigars. Dr. Bamberger suggests that a bit of absorbent cotton saturated with chloride of iron be placed in the holder, and he claims by doing this some of the harmful proucts of combustion are rendered innocuous.

Weighing Touch.

A wonderful instrument has recently been invented for the purpose of measuring the sense of touch. The device consists of a series of little disks, suspended by fine, delicate threads from wooden handles, the last being stuck into holes around a block.

The lightest disk is taken out and brought into contact with the skin of the subject, the latter having closed his eyes. If nothing is felt a heavier disk is employed, and so on till the pressure becomes noticeable.

A touch of a disk weighing three-one-hundredths of a grain was observable on the temple; one weighing five-one hundredths on the nose or chin, and one weighing nine-one hundredths on the inside of the finger.—The Pathfinder.

Just Cause for Pride.

The man admired his wife just about as much as any man can admire a wife, nevertheless when he saw that she was devoting more and more time each day to mirror gazing he determined to take her down a peg. Said he, brutally:

"I wouldn't be so stuck on myself if I were you, just because people happen to notice you when you go out. It isn't you they're admiring; its your clothes. I heard a bunch of women say so the other day."

For an instant the shock to the woman's vanity overpowered her, then, quickly recovering she said:

"In that case I am prouder than ever. Nature is responsible for me, but I designed the clothes myself."

And then the man shut up.

For Future Dreadnoughts.

That the German government believes ships of war will be much bigger in the future is shown by the enlargement of the Kaiser Wilhelm canal, which is to be deepened at once to 36 feet, with provision for a later deepening, if necessary, to 46 feet. The width of the canal is to be doubled. The new dimensions of the locks will considerably exceed those at Panama.

Warm Floors and Healthy Children Make Happy Homes

There is no better way for you to avoid worry and expense than by insuring your children's health.

Warm floors in the home, which is the children's play house in winter, are assured when using Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater.

The steel base and body construction allows the heat to be radiated to the floor keeping it warm during the coldest weather.

Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater

The Cleanest—Easiest to Care For Burns Soft Coal, Lignite, Hard Coal, Crushed Coke, Wood and Cobs.

Users of coal must remember that the ordinary heater is a big care to operate. That its smoke and ashes entail dusting, curtain washing and carpet sweeping. Think then of the ease of operation and the cleanliness of Cole's Hot Blast.

Cole's Hot Blast has a guaranteed smoke-proof feed door—open the feed door and the current of air draws the smoke directly across the top of stove to the stove pipe—away from the opening. Contrast this simple, cleanly feed with the side door in an ordinary heater. The side door used on other stoves permits escape of dirty smoke, unpleasant gas and accumulated soot drops from it. If you overfill a side door stove, coal falls to the floor. And note this, you cannot make a side door heater air-tight—an everlasting advantage in favor of Cole's Hot Blast which is air-tight and guaranteed to remain so always.

No fires to build—the fire is never out in this remarkable heater from fall until taken down in the spring.

Better select one today—surely it is the heater you need—

The Village of Manchester has to pay $683 for which it was garnasheed on a writ secured by the Buckeye Traction Ditcher Co. of Findley, Ohio. This grew out of the use of the ditcher by the construction company on the water works last summer who failed to fill their contract. Manchester will have to look to the bonding company for the money.

Mr and Mrs. B J. Pulver were in Detroit Wednesday and Thursday for the Convention of the Rexall Agents of Michigan. There were 125 present with visitors from Ohio, Illinois, New York and Ontario, besides several from the house office in Boston, and a representative from London Eng. The Home of Rexall, as the stores carrying these goods are called, is located in every town in the United States and Canada, and each Michigan home had its representative there. Each session of the two days was full of interest, Wednesday evening was given up to a theater, Thursday morning officers were elected and luncheon was served at noon. After the afternoon business was finished the Convention adjourned to meet in the evening for a grand banquet. Mr. Pulver reports a most instructive and interesting meeting.

MONDAY CLUB

Open Meeting, Gentlemens' Night Held at the Presbyterian Church Monday Evening Feb 24.

ONE-HUNDRED-FIFTY GUESTS

Last evening the the Ladies of the Monday Club held an open meeting at the Presbyterian church having as their guests the Gentlemen, members and guests numbered one-hundred and fifty.

At 6:30 P. M. dinner was served. The guests did ample justice to this delicious menu of:

Chicken bouillon, Whipped cream
Wafers
Pressed chicken, Creamed potatoes
Peas in Timbles shells
Olives, Rolls, Coffee
Lemon Sherbert, Sunshine cake.

Mrs. R. S. Moore chairman of the committee serving. Services orchestra played while the dinner was served; the music being much enjoyed and nearly every piece was encored.

Mrs. F. B. Wood the President at the close of the dinner announced, that before adjourning to the reception room above that Miss Winifred Ward of Adrian, would entertain the guests with two selections.

The first, was an Italian selection she answered to an encore.

The program was contiuued in the parlor where Miss Ward explained in a very concise manner, the beginning and the object of "The Drama League of America." The formation of the club in Evanston, Ill., in 1910; how it has spread over the United States and has many thousand members at the present time. Its object is to promote good drama.

A bulletin is issued on the rendering of a new play and sent to all the members, it is criticised and analysed by the best critics. It is said that when this bulletin is sent out it effects the box office at once.

Their idea of the drama is not action, but the manner in which the words are rendered.

Miss Ward gave as an illustration a drama that was given in Chicago last year, by a theatrical troope from Dublin, called "Cathleen Ni Hoolihan." Following out the idea of the Drama League without gesture or action. She held everyone spellbound and breathless until the last word was spoken.

Miss Ward has a most charming personality, a sweet and melodious voice, and has the temperment to impress her audience as if they were one of the actors in the play. She was charming in a yellow brocade charmeuse satin with rhinestone ornaments and was a sparkling brunette. she rendered the play with much eclat and we feel sure she will have a hearty welcome whenever she visits Tecumseh.

NO REASON FOR IT
When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Killbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name, Doan's and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Stanley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man sings a lullaby it naturally sounds rocky.

Conductor S. L. Miller, Norfolk, Nebr., on Bonesteel Division of C. & N. W. Ry. Co., recommends Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I have used Foley Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and endorse their use for any one afflicted with kidney trouble. They are all right." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What has become of the old-fashioned widow who used to "set her cap" for No. 2?

Mrs. S. S. S., Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Illuminating Shells.

Experiments have recently been made at Toulon with shells intended to illuminate the sea at a distance from the land, thus disclosing the presence and movements of an enemy at night. The shells are made to explode at a great height, and to give light for a sufficient time to permit an examination of the surface of the sea for several miles from the shore. The officers in charge of the experiments regard the illuminating shells as more effective than search-lights in disclosing the position of hostile ships.

Another form of shell has been proposed, which shall, in bursting over the sea, spread a cloud of thick smoke about the batteries on shore, thus preventing their seeing the approaching ships, and rendering the illuminating shells useless.

Fossils as Sign-Posts.

The recent discovery in the southern part of Madagascar of reptilian fossils, which geologists affirm belong to the Permian epoch, leads to the expectation that coal will be found there. In India, Australia and southern Africa the strata containing the remains of these animals are characterized by the presence of coal-beds. The likelihood that the same condition of affairs will be found in Madagascar is regarded as being much strengthened by the association of one of the fossils recently discovered with a leaf of glossopteris, one of the plants most distinctive of the Permian coal formations in the southern hemisphere.

ARISTOCRATIC DWARFS.
They Hold Aloof From General Collection of Midgets.

A lilliputian colony which has arrived in Paris comprises over one hundred and fifty men and women, none over twenty inches high. The novelty of the show will be that it is not a show of "freaks" in the ordinary sense. The dwarfs are not only perfectly well constituted men and women, but they are many of them "people in society," persons of culture and quality. "We are a trifle mixed, it is true," said the leading member of the lilliputian company, "and there is even one negro among us." But a number of the dwarfs are persons of good family and in good circumstances who have never consented to exhibit themselves before.

The leading members of the company are two brothers—Count Primo Magri and Baron Magri—both Italians. Though both about a foot high, they are full of dignity and explain that they do not mix indiscriminately with the remainder of the colony, which includes persons of all sorts and conditions. "The manager merely chose the smallest people he could find, you see, in all sorts of classes all over Europe," they say; "and the company, therefore, is mixed. Besides aristocrats like ourselves, there are peasants and menials."—London Telegraph.

More Than She Could Bear.

Marion was a little American girl of six years. For three months her mother and aunt had dragged her through the museums and art galleries of Europe.

She was made to look at the slippers of Marie Antoinette, the prayer-book of Catherine de Medici, hats of Napoleon and endless numbers of uninteresting Madonnas. These, her mother told her constantly, she must remember, for when she grew up she would realize how famous they were.

At last Marion rebelled. She refused to go to a world-famed museum. After much persuasion, she yielded upon one condition.

"I'll go any place you like," she said, "if you'll promise never again to make me look at anything famous."—Youth's Companion.

The Lively Cheeses.

"Your cooking is better than ours," he said. "Still, there are some things in it I decidedly dislike. I dislike, for instance, 'hung' game—game kept until it smells like cheese.

"And your cheese itself—I mean your more expensive cheese—the kind with mold in it—it isn't very—

"I cracked a joke about your cheese at a luncheon.

"'Do you prefer with your apple pie Roquefort or Limburger?' said my host.

"'Let them race across the table to me and I'll take the winner,' said I."

TWENTY YEARS.

Makes a great difference in most women. They are troubled with "nerves"—they suffer from backache, headache, sleeplessness, a sensation of irritability or twitching, hot flashes, dizzy spells, or many other symptoms of female weakness. The local disorder and inflammation should be treated with Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets and the irregularity and weakness of the female system corrected and strengthened with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The strain upon the young woman or the woman of middle age—upon the nerve and blood forming structures—may be too great for her strength. This is the time to take this restorative tonic and strength-giving nervine and regulator. For over forty years sold by druggists for woman's peculiar weaknesses and distressing ailments. The one remedy so perfect in composition and so good in curative effects as to warrant its makers in printing its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. The one remedy which absolutely contains neither alcohol nor injurious or habit-forming drugs.

MRS. SCOTT.

Following letter selected at random from a large number of similar ones and cited merely to illustrate these remarks:

"In the winter of 1908, I became greatly run down and irregular," writes MRS. HENRY SCOTT, of Swan Creek, Mich., Route 1, Box 49. "I slowly but surely grew worse, and, at last, resolved to apply to the doctors for help. The doctor said I had inflammation, enlargement and laceration. I was in bed eleven weeks and got no better. The doctor said I would have to have an operation, but to that I would not listen. My husband purchased two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I started to take this remedy I could not walk across the floor, but after I had taken three bottles I could feel myself gaining, so I dropped the doctor and took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Only for it I think I would have been dead—I really believe it saved my life. I feel better now than in twenty years."

Pure Iron at Last.

Chemically pure iron has never been obtained until very recently. It has been found almost impossible to remove the last traces of impurities, especially of sulphur. But a German chemist, Dr. H. Kreusler, has finally by a long series of ingenious processes, partly chemical and partly electrical, succeeded in isolating the pure metal, the properties of which he expects to differ greatly from those of the impure iron that we know. Iron prepared by Kreusler's process resembles platinum.—New York Herald.

Whale Fishing Dying Out.

The depression in the Dundee whale fishing is so acute that there is danger of the industry disappearing from the British Isles. The growing scarcity of whales in the arctic regions has made the industry very unremunerative, and shareholders have become so disheartened that a number of the vessels have been put up for sale. A serious side of the question is the probable fate of the Eskimos who depend upon the whalers for supplies of rifles and ammunition.

My Friend Pat
A Story of Colorado and the Emerald Isle
By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

When I was prospecting in the gold fields of Colorado and had made what I believed to be a strike I put some gold dust in one pocket for expenses and specimens for assay in the other, and started on foot down the mountain for Denver. On the way I fell in with a young Irishman, very ragged, with a bundle tied up in a red bandanna handkerchief and a short pipe in his mouth, at which he was pulling lustily.

"Good mornin' to you," he said cheerily.

"Good morning, Pat," I replied.

"How did you know my name was Pat?" he asked.

"By your brogue."

"Is it very broad?"

"No; but broad enough to give you away as a resident of the Emerald Isle."

"Northern Irish, is it?"

"I suppose so. What are you doing out in this country?"

"Oh, I came to dig for a fortune."

"And having made it you're going back home to enjoy it?"

"What made you think I've made my fortune?"

"Oh, by your eminently respectable appearance."

"Well, now, that's lucky!"

"Why so?"

"Because I'm sadly in need of a loan, and since I've made a fortune it'll be safe for you to favor me."

I laughed at the Irish wit, and the way the young man had caught me in a trap. I was feeling somewhat set up, for I believed I had struck a fortune myself. Besides we gold seekers in those days were prone to help one another.

"How much do you want?"

"Enough to take me to Ireland—a matter of $100."

"I can't do that much for you, but I might spare $50 to get you to New York. Couldn't you make up the rest in some other way?"

"Half a loaf is better than none."

We went on to Denver together, and I was greatly amused by his humor and an original way he had of viewing things. I sold my mine for enough to make me independent for life and got a few hundred dollars for a first payment. By this time I had become so friendly with my traveling companion that I advanced him the whole sum needed to take him to Ireland. I believed he had made the failure nearly all gold hunters make, and since I had been one of the few fortunate ones I was ready to give him a tiny bit from my bonanza.

"Where'll I send it?" he asked.

"You needn't send it at all. As soon as I get that deal closed out I'm going to Europe, and I'll see you there."

"Well, you'll find me on the estate of the Earl of Ballygarach. At any rate, inquire there for me."

"A tenant of his?"

"No."

"What's your place there?"

He hesitated, and it seemed to me he was trying to invent a reply, so I gave him a shake of the hand and said goodby. I felt sure I was making a loan that would never be repaid, but I'd had to invent stories myself about my hole in the ground in order to obtain means to keep on digging, and I wouldn't have thanked any one to question me too closely. As I turned away from him I saw a peculiar look in his eye.

"Why do you look at me in that way, Pat?" I asked. I had always called him Pat, though his name was John Curran.

"I can't make out why you're lending me this money. Unless you give me your address, that I may return it, or your promise to see me in Ireland I refuse to take it."

"All right; you have my promise to see you in Ireland."

"Don't you go back on me by not coming," he added, and we parted.

The sale of my hole in the ground was conditional, and some months elapsed before the purchasers had satisfied themselves that the property was what I claimed for it. Then, after all, I was obliged to take a good deal of the stock in the company that was formed in part payment, but this didn't trouble me, for I had great confidence in the value of the mine. Indeed, my stock eventually became many times more valuable than the cash payment. It was a year after the sale before I found myself independent to do what I liked, and I set off on a tour around the world. My course was eastward and took in England as my first landing place. I had always a desire to visit Ireland and, after seeing England to my heart's content, crossed the Irish channel. But I regretted feeling obliged to hunt up my debtor. I didn't need the money I had loaned him, and I didn't believe he would be in condition to pay it. To tell the truth, I had no idea I would find him on the estate of the Earl of Ballygarach or that I would find him at all. This opinion was not based on the belief that he was dishonest, for he had an expression that invited confidence, but on the fact that necessity knows no law, and his necessities had probably forced him to invent all he had told me.

After visiting the principal cities in southern Ireland I worked my way northward and one day brought up at a little town near the estate of the Earl of Ballygarach. I rode out to the place in an Irish two wheeled cart and, stopping at the manor house, asked the butler if he could tell me of a man on the estate of the name of John Curran, who about a year before had returned to Ireland from America. The servant gave me a blank stare, then led me into a reception room, invited me to be seated and went away.

Presently he returned and said that the earl was not at home and he was the only one who could give me the information. Milady desired that I should make myself at home—in the library if I liked—till his lordship's return. Since I was not averse to nosing among books I assented.

An hour passed in this way, when the butler entered and said that luncheon would soon be ready and asked if I would like to go to my room. Though I didn't like such trespassing, I was not averse to being entertained by an earl and his lady, so I followed the man upstairs. What was my astonishment on entering the room assigned me to see my baggage there.

"How did this come here?" I asked.

"Milady sent to the inn for it, sir."

I brushed up a bit and went downstairs again. The butler announced luncheon and led me into the dining room. I was received there by a very pretty young woman, who said to me:

"My husband will not return for an hour or two, and, since he does not like to have any one who calls during his absence turned away, I have taken it upon myself to make you at home. He is very fond of Americans and would never forgive me if I let one of them go away without some entertainment."

I protested that I had only called to learn of the whereabouts of one John Curran, whom I had met in Colorado, and the lady replied that the earl would give me any information in his possession on his return. She entertained me delightfully at luncheon, doing everything in her power to make me feel that I was welcome. Her voice was sweet and sounded still sweeter from the rich brogue of an Irish lady. She expressed great interest in America and kept me telling her of the country, the people and our customs. Just as we were about to rise from the table there was a sound of wheels without, the front door was thrown open, and a man stalked into the dining room.

Great heavens, he was Pat!

The moment he saw me he advanced and, grasping my hand, gave it a vigorous shake, saying:

"You've come at last, have you? I vowed that if you didn't come soon I'd go back to America to find you." Then, turning to the lady, he added:

"This is the gentleman I've been looking for."

"I supposed he was when he asked for John Curran, who had come from America a year ago."

"Well, I'm John Curran meself," added the host, "and I was Earl of Ballygarach when we were trudging together in Colorado, though I didn't know it. When I went out there were three lives between me and the title, but two of them had died, and I had heard that the third, my uncle, was very ill. I was trying to get home, but I didn't know what I should find here. I might find an estate waiting for me, and I might not be able to repay your loan; but, by Jove, old man, that was a queer thing for you to do—letting me have that money to get home with."

I said something about his honest countenance, but my conscience was not clear, and I didn't help the matter much. So I made light of the whole matter, mentioning the spirit that animated men who lived in new countries, their disposition to help one another, their respect for the softer sex and their harshness with anything unmanly. Lady Ballygarach was much interested in this account of a people she had never mingled with, though I fancied that it was because her husband had been one of them.

The earl then asked where I had put up, saying that he must send at once for my luggage, but his wife informed him that she had sent for it, whereupon he commended her highly and declared she was a trump.

The earl kept me a guest several weeks, during which he entertained me royally. He told me that he was a younger son in another branch of the family; that his father wished him to enter the army, but, having no fortune and being in love with the girl who was now his wife, he had preferred to go to America to seek his fortune. While away his father and his older brother had died, and his uncle, the earl, a bachelor, had fallen ill. The death of his father and brother had left him with no one to call upon for funds, and, as he had before told me, his uncle would not have helped him if he had asked for help.

I confess the change in him was so great from when I had known him in the gold diggings that it seemed strange to address him by his title. I was struggling to get it out and had advanced as far as Lord Ballygar— when he broke in upon me:

"Never mind that. Call me Pat. I became so far Americanized while in your country that these flourishes on a man's name sound redicuious."

"Do you object to your title, Lady Ballygarach?" I asked.

"Not a bit of it," her husband replied for her. "What woman would?"

During the rest of my visit I called the earl Pat.

I became so fond of Pat that I found it difficult to tear myself away from him. He had had just the experience to make a man of him.

When I left him it was with the promise that he would return my visit in the land where we had both been poor. He did so, and my success as a miner enabled me to return his hospitality in kind in my own home.

SLAY EX-RULERS

Killing of Madero and Saurez Discussed in Whispers.

UGLY RUMORS ARE CIRCULATED

United States Ambassador Wilson Does Not Believe the Killing of the Deposed President and Vice President Was Framed Up—Shot While Trying to Escape.

RULERS OF MEXICO SLAIN IN REVOLTS

Miguel Hidalgo y Comtilla, liberator, 1813.
Jose Maria Morelos y Pavon, president, 1815.
Francisco Xavier Mina, president, 1817.
Augustin de Iturbide, emperor, 1824.
Maximilian, archduke of Austria, emperor, 1867.
Francisco I. Madero, deposed president, and Jose Pino Suarez, deposed vice president, 1913.

Ex-President Madero and Ex-Vice President Jose Pino Suarez were riddled with bullets as they were being transferred from the national palace to the penitentiary. An attempt by partisans was made to rescue them and they were killed while trying to escape.

The city is quiet under the iron rule of Huerta. The people have dared not express openly what thousands are whispering. The soldiers of Huerta and Diaz crowd the streets and the government has announced that it will brook no opposition. Some accept as truthful the government's explanation. Many insist, however, that the killing was ordered by the government.

Not Premeditated Assassination.

United States Ambassador Wilson told your correspondent that he thoroughly believed there was a real attempt at rescue by some armed followers of Madero. He did not believe for a moment, he said, that the affair was framed up by the new government, as some intimated. He said that Senor De La Barra talked with him two days ago about a plan to remove Ex-President Madero and Vice President Suarez to the penitentiary for better security and comfort. Mr. Wilson said he considered this as proof of good faith on the part of the present regime.

It seems that Madero and Suarez were advised before midnight of the project to transfer them to the penitentiary. They arose, dressed and entered an automobile in waiting in the courtyard of the palace. The auto had already been occupied by Major Cardenas and a force of armed rurales.

Partisans Fire on Guards.

The automobile immediately left for penitentiary, followed by another automobile full of rurales. The machines had gone about two-thirds of the way to the penitentiary and were in the Colonia De La Bolsa, Mexico's whitechapel district, when, at the corner of Calle Le Cumberri, five armed men crying "Viva Madero" fired upon the guards. These men were followed by some thirty others from a side street, who also fired volleys at the two automobiles, riddling them. From what can be learned the prisoners took advantage of this attack to attempt their escape and they were riddled with bullets, whether by the rurales or accidentally by their would-be rescuers, is not known.

Huerta Denies Responsibility.

After the news of the killing of Madero and Suarez became known Provisional President Huerta immediately sent for the newspaper men, making full and frank statement of the facts and promised to give the fullest details obtainable later, as he considered it most important to justify the government in the matter and avoid any suspicion that might arise that it was a "put-up job." The bodies of the deposed president and vice president were removed to the penitentiary.

Ugly Rumors Afloat.

The American ambassador believes the government had no hand in the assassinations and accept Gen. Huerta's and De La Barra's statement as accurate and sincere. There are the ugliest rumors to the contrary. Many of the people believe that Madero and Suarez, like Gustavo Madero, were the victims of that shocking expedient of dictators ironically known as "ley de fuga," and that the government employed a trick frequently used by Porfirio Diaz when he desired to rid himself of people dangerous to the welfare of the republic.

Ninety-Five Volunteers Shot.

It has been reported that ninety-five federal volunteer soldiers were executed late in the day at Sauz, below Juarez. They compose part of the garrison which rebelled, angered over the killing of ex-President Madero, the former leader.

One at a time they stood against an adobe wall. Ninety-five times the firing squad aimed and fired. The majority of the men are said to have displayed much courage, declining the execution mask.

More than fifty of the garrison escaped before the arrival of a strong detachment of federal regular troops from Chihuahua City.

SUFFRAGE RESOLUTION PASSES.

Lansing—By a vote of 26 to 5, the senate adopted the resolution heretofore adopted by the house to submit an equal suffrage amendment to a vote of the people at the April election. The senate added an amendment requiring that foreign-born women must be naturalized, the same as foreign-born men, before being eligible to vote. The resolution now goes back to the house for concurrence in the amendment.

TURKS BEG FOR PEACE AND CONCEDE MUCH

Bulgaria Presents New Boundary Line Proposition.

Sofia, Bulgaria, news says tht Turks are begging for peace and are making concessions. Bulgaria is willing to make the new boundary a line drawn from Midia on the Black sea to Rodosto on the Sea of Marmora. This would leave in the hands of the allies all the territory of the present Turkey in Europe, including the north side of the Dardanelles, except the country near Constantinople. An indemnity is also demanded.

The bombardment of Adrianople still is in progress. It is evident that the Turks suffered terrible losses in the battle of Bulair. The number of their dead and wounded is placed at 25,000. The Turkish troops came rushing forward in great masses, flourishing their yataghans and shouting wildly, but were mowed down by the mitrailleuses. The Aleppo regiment was wiped out entirely. Five hundred captives taken in the battle were brought to Sofia.

While it was thought that the Bulgarian-Roumanian crisis had been averted when both consented to arbitrate, it is said that Roumania will not consider the decision of the powers binding and Bulgaria cannot yield Silistria. While Roumania holds war meetings the Bulgarians are calm, grim and determined.

At Palm Beach, Florida, an immense crowd on the bathing beach at noon saw a government aeroplane of the coast defense type, managed by Frank Coffyn and Lieutenant Eric Ellison, turn a quick circle in midair, pause an instant and then plunge 1,000 feet into the ocean about two miles out. The machine hit the water at an acute angle.

Every one who could seized glasses and in a minute or two were relieved to see both men climb out on one of the pontoons, take off their coats and wave them repeatedly. They were uninjured.

PARDON SCANDAL

New York Prison Heads Accused of Graft Game.

HARRY THAW AS "MEAL TICKET"

Witness in Inquiry Instituted by Governor Sulzer States That Officials of Asylums and Reformatories Had Clever Plan to Deal in Pardons for Those Who Could Pay.

Many and sweeping charges that the New York state superintendent of prisons and a number of his subordinates have been engaged for some time in a "profitable business of brokerage pardons" through which they had planned to effect the release of Harry K. Thaw and others, were made before Governor Sulzer's inquiry committee.

The witness was William F. Clark, former secretary of the committee, whose name was mentioned last week in connection with an alleged attempt to free Thaw from Matteawan hospital. Dr. John W. Russell, superintendent of that institution, testified that he was offered $20,000 by a New York lawyer named Anhut if he would release Thaw, but that he refused the money. He said that Clark also had approached him in Thaw's behalf.

Clark turned the tables by declaring that Colonel Joseph F. Scott, superintendent of state prisons, and his "immediate underlings," including Dr. Russell, were engaged in a conspiracy to involve Governor Sulzer, "so that they might be retained in office and continue the profitable business in pardons which they had carried on under [illegible] Dix."

Clark said that he learned of the "conspiracy" a month ago and immediately informed Governor Sulzer that he was in "great danger."

Sends for Harry Thaw.

"Governor Sulzer told me to go ahead and [illegible]," Clark continued. "During my investigation I learned that in the early part of December Dr. Russell sent for Harry Thaw and asked him if he would like to get out. Thaw naturally said he would like it first rate. ROOSEVELT WILL PUSH LIBEL SUIT

Case against Ishpeming Man Will Not Be Dropped.

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 21.—Testimony of men prominent in the financial affairs of the United States will be offered in the libel suit instituted by Colonel Roosevelt against George A. Newett, publisher of the Ishpeming Iron Ore, scheduled to be tried in Marquette, May 26.

Newett spent a part of the winter of 1912 at a winter resort on the west coast of Florida, not far from Tampa. While there he met prominent financial and mining men who told him stories about Roosevelt. Investigation of these statements by Newett, it is said, led him to believe that they were true and publication of the charges against the former president led to the libel suit.

Doubt has been expressed as to whether Roosevelt would push the suit, but James H. Pound, who recently returned from New York, where he conferred with Roosevelt relative to the action, states that the colonel will come to Michigan in May for a twofold purpose: to strengthen the party in the state by one of his whirlwind campaigns, and to direct the suit against Newett in person. He will be in Marquette on May 26 according to Mr. Pound.

Mr. Pound further declares that Roosevelt has no intention of dropping the matter but is determined to push it to a finish and is intent upon securing reparation for the injury done by the alleged libelous statement.

Newett, it is known, has received offers from scores of persons throughout the country to come to Marquette and testify in his behalf. The publisher will be defended by William P. Belden, attorney for the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, the largest iron mine operator in the upper peninsula. He is confident of proving his charges, according to statements made by him shortly after the preliminary papers in the suit were filed.

CHANGE OF VENUE DENIED

Case Against Deputy Sheriff Kleis Goes to Trial in Allegan.

Allegan, Mich., Feb. 25.—Former Congressman Diekema of Holland has been here the past week in the circuit court arguing a petition for a change of venue in the case of the people against John Kleis, deputy sheriff of Ottawa county, who is charged with the murder of Ted Goring, whom he shot last summer at Saugatuck.

Diekema alleged local prejudice against Kleis was so strong he could not secure a fair trial here, supporting the claim by several affidavits of prominent people. Prosecuting Attorney Stone brought about [illegible] affidavits from men all over the county showing no prejudice is extant. Judge Cross denied the motion and the case went to trial here Monday.

LIGHT CALENDAR IN BARRY

Number of Divorce Cases (Four) Is Lowest on Record.

Hastings, Mich., Feb. 22.—That matrimonial conditions are becoming happier in Barry county is evidenced by the fact that only four divorce cases are entered on the calendar for the February term of circuit court which convenes next Monday. This is about one-fourth of the usual number of divorce suits on the calendar, and the smallest number recorded in many years.

The entire calendar is the lightest in many years. The principal case of the term will be the trial of Fred Baker, the former Nashville man accused of fleecing some of his fellow townsmen with a get-rich-quick scheme.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

PONTIAC — The city commission has finally adopted the gas ordinance, providing for the quality of gas supplied by the local company and also for tests and inspections. The Pontiac Light company notified the commission of its refusal to accept the terms of the ordinance. The commission also turned down the proposed charter amendment to permit of municipal ownership of all public utilities, and likewise proposed amendments to change the city fiscal year and to make a special assessment payable in ten year installments instead of five years as now provided. All of the amendments were to have been submitted at the April election, but City Attorney Bromley discovered that a recent law provided that amendments must be on file with the city clerk at least ninety days preceding an election which is now impossible.

INFANT DEATHS SHOW INCREASE

Secretary Martindale's Report Shows the Causes.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 25.—Secretary of State Frederick C. Martindale has just completed tables showing the infant mortality for the first four weeks of life for the years 1910, 1911 and 1912.

For the year 1910 there were 3,161 deaths of infants aged one to four weeks. The number of deaths of children aged seven days or under was 2,329, or 73.7 per cent; 428, or 13.5 per cent, died during the second week of life; 245, or 7.8 per cent, died during the fourth week of life. The most important cause of death during the year, or the cause showing the largest number of deaths, was premature birth. No less than 829 children dying during the first week of life from this cause; 44 during the second, 13 during the third, and 7 during the fourth. The cause showing the next largest number was inanition, 192 deaths from this cause, occurring during the first week of life, 60 during the second, 31 during the third and 26 during the fourth. The next in numerical importance was convulsions, 217 for the year; then follows enteritis, 141; congenital debility, 123; malnutrition, 140; marasmus, 90; pneumonia, 88; organic heart trouble, 76.

For the year 1911 there were 3,228 deaths of children aged four weeks or less, 71.9 per cent, or 2,320 aged 7 days or under; 13.5 per cent during the second week of life; 8.9 per cent during the third week of life and 5.7 per cent, or 185, during the fourth week of life.

For the year 1912 there were 3,262 deaths of infants aged 4 weeks and under, 2,389 during the first week, 425 during the second, 253 during the third and 195 during the fourth week of life.

Some of the causes of infantile mortality are common to every locality. Such are prematurity of birth and congenital defects. The health conditions under which the mother lives have an undoubted influence on the vitality of her progeny and on the occurrence of premature birth.

REP. UNSOELD DEAD.

Lansing—Without warning and surrounded by a dozen of his colleagues, Representative G. Joseph Unsoeld, Detroit's representative in the state legislature, fell unconscious from his chair at noon on Tuesday. He was born in Uhlm, Germany, April 3, 1845. He received his early education in the schools of Germany, but continued his studies in the night schools of Detroit after his arrival in this country, and has been a resident of Detroit for over a half century.

PESSIMIST VS OPTIMIST

Upland Calif.
Feb. 13.

Editor of Herald:-

I have just finished reading a letter in the Jan. 31, Herald from Mrs. Anglemyer describing the beautiful country she had passed through, and hasten to answer it as I have a good many friends in and around Tecumseh and I would not like them to get the California fever and come out here to live. But the lady is just the kind they want to come as she would make a first class "Booster".

Just a word about the Orange and Lemon groves she spoke in admiration of the fruit laden trees. Well I wish she could have seen them before the freeze, if they look fine now, they were much more so before the freeze. She said the frost had not touched some of the groves at all. Well the Ranchman who can be found that has a grove that has not been touched would be a hard thing to find and would count himself very lucky.

The newspapers have not printed near the right amount of damage the freeze done because it would not be policy real estate would not be worth much to the tender foot if he knew all the facts of that freeze. The frost killed all the flowers and the pepper trees look so sick now but they are the most beautiful tree of all, as the leaves are fine and bright red peppers hang down, and the tree grows to a good height.

I am afraid she will be disappointed in the Date palm having fruit as they mature out here too cold nights; but of all the palm I do think the Date palm the prettiest. Eucalyptus tree is a homely tree but like lots of other homely things is a very good thing. California people would miss it very much as it is their wood for fuel and is a rapid grower, but it is a native of Australia. It is like every thing else out here, come to California to help them out.

California has many pretty spots and is a fine place to spend your winter also your money but is not a place for poor people as every thing is high and labor cheap, California has enough labor of there own. They are in need of money and must have it to live on as the state can not be depended on to raise crops. I hope our friend does not have the shiver or get out in a sand blizzard for if she should I think she would not like it. Just now we are having the grandest weather just like April back east but what I have passed through to get this spell of climate is more then I can tell you in this letter. If you doubt my word come and live (if you can) through a spell of shivers and sand blizzard, Michigan is good enough for me. They rave over their climate out here, but my father lived to be 93 in the Michigan climate and I can not so far find but one native of California here in this town and he don't look as if he would stand it to live here till he is 93. I wonder if our friend saw the dumps of oranges along the route, those oranges are frozen and the packing houses dump out. Now I wonder if the frost did any damage.

Maybe she thought like I did when I came through and saw them that they were rotten ones but now I know they are frozen ones. This state is in bad shape now after two frosts, there is nothing to do or to live on. Ranchmen can not raise anything and every thing is mortgaged they have to live on if it were not for the Tourist who come for the winter they could not keep a going out here

Just a few facts from

CITRUS CROP NOT BADLY HURT.

Report of Damage by Frost in California Exaggerated

By the Associated Press.

Berkeley, Cal., Feb. 19.—According to a report received at the University of California yesterday from scientists on board a demonstration train now touring southern California, the damage from frost to citrus crops in the southern part of the state was not so great as reported. The investigators found that at least three-fourths of the trees would bear as heavily as last year and that the reported danger from frozen oranges remaining on the trees has been exaggerated.

The Over-Skirt and Over-Blouse Styles are Distinctly Popular

Not for a long time has the beginning of a fashion season offered so many alluring possibilities both in the things to buy for new gowns and ideas for making over the old. The present mode of combinations of materials and colors are both a blessing and a snare, requiring much thought and discrimination if its many excellent opportunities are to be realized. The combination of colors is something that cannot readily be explained. It is easy to suggest the colors, but certain of their shades may fairly scream at each other; yet sartorial reputations have been built on a judicious combination of yellow, green and lavender. Great designers do not go at these things haphazard—they experiment. Some of us may be blessed with a better natural color sense than others, but there is no royal road for anyone; successes grow only on the pathway of endeavor. In the combination of fabrics decided contrasts are used. The sheerest of voiles are striped or bordered with the rough and apparently heavy ratine and sponge cloths. Chiffons are trimmed with fur, and velvets with airy lace.—"A Glance at Spring Styles," in The Ladies' World and Housekeeper for March.

Obituary

OMAR L. EVERHART

Omar Everhart whose death was mentioned in a recent issue of this paper was born at Massillon Ohio and came with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Everhart to their farm home north east of town, in his youth.

In early manhood he was married to Miss Rosa Brown of this place and she together with one son, two grandchildren and three sisters survive him.

In the autumn of 1912, he disposed of his home in this village where he had resided for several years and located at Battle Creek.

He was employed at the Nichols and Shephard shops when the fatal illness overtook him and tho' reluctent to do so was obliged to give up work.

Hoping a change would be beneficial he spent two weeks at holiday time with his sister here. But disease was master and despite all efforts to stay its progress, each day he grew weaker and with but little remaining strength returned to his home to await the end. On Saturday Feb. 15, 1913 he peacefully passed away and on the afternoon of Feb 17 was laid to rest.

Rev. Potter with tender words of sympathy and comfort conducted the funeral services.

An abundance of flowers from friends and fellow shopmates gave sweet tho' silent tributes of regard to one who although not old in years had finished his life work and answered the final call.

Microbes In Your Scalp

Authorities say that a microbe causes baldness. If you are losing hair try our remedy at our risk.

Professor Unna, of Germany, and Dr. Sabouraud, the great French Dermatologist, claim that a microbe causes baldness, and their theory has been verified by eminent scientists. This microbe destroys the hair follicles, in time causing the scalp pores to close and the scalp to become shiny. Then, it is believed nothing will revive the growth. If treated before this occurs, baldness may be overcome.

We know of nothing that has given such universal satisfaction in treating the scalp and hair as Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. It has been designed after long study to overcome the cause of falling hair as discovered by Prof. Unna, Dr. Sabouraud and other scalp and hair specialists, and we believe it will do more than anything else can to remove dandruff and stop falling hair; and if any human agency can promote a new growth of hair it will do that, too.

We want you to make us prove it. We will pay for a month's treatment of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic used during a trial, if you will use it according to directions, and are not thoroughly satisfied. When we will do this, you surely should not hesitate to at least try it.

Start the treatment today. Your mere request will get your money back if you want it. Two sizes: 50c and $1.00.

HAVE YOU A SILO?

If you have not you will want one and naturally you will want the best. Prof. W. M. Esten says: ' A round wooden Stave Silo, taking all things into consideration, has proven most satisfactory." We have found this to be true and for that reason sell

THE SAGINAW SILO.

The 1913 Saginaw Silo has several new features that greatly add to the good qualities. We have had all-steel Door Frame with Ladder attached, Fir first staves, Perfect-Fitting doors and Top and Base anchors. This yea we have added the Outer and Inner Angle Steel Rib and Spline-Dowel. The angle steel rib positively prevents tilting of staves as often occurs and the spline-dowell greatly adds to the strength of construction. We have already started taking orders and have sold A. O. Howard a 10x36 Saginaw Silo. We are able to erect cement silos for those wishing them.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show a Way

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says:

Henry Kempf, carpenter Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

W. S. Skelton, a merchant at Stanley, Ind., says he would not take $100.00 for the relief a single box of Foley Kidney Pills gave him. "I had a severe attack of kidney trouble with sharp pains through my back and could hardly straighten up. A single box of Foley Kidney Pills entirely relieved me." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man sings a lullaby it naturally sounds rocky.

Conductor S. L. Miller, Norfolk, Nebr., on Bonesteel Division of C. & N. W. Ry. Co. recommends Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I have used Foley Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results and endorse their use for any one afflicted with kidney trouble. They are all right." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What has become of the old-fashioned widow who used to "set her cap" for No. 2?

Mrs S. S. S, Van Buren St., Kingston, N. Y. (full name furnished on application) had such decided benefit from using Foley's Honey & Tar Compound that she shares her good fortune with others. She writes: "Foley's Honey & Tar Compound brought my voice back to me during a severe case of bronchitis and laryngitis. Oh, how many people I have recommended it to."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

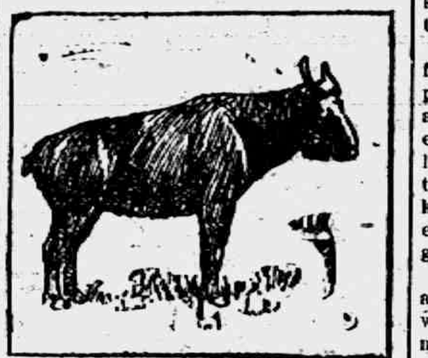
IS STRANGE CHINESE ANIMAL.

The Takin Seems Moose, Yak, Antelope and Goat Combined.

Strange to contemplate is the Chinese takin, first of its kind ever brought to the shores of the United States, which was placed on exhibition, stuffed, in the American Museum of Natural History. As far as is known to Mason Mitchell, one of the American consuls in China, who presented the specimen to the institution, he is the only Caucasian who has ever seen one on its native crags.



The Takin, or Chinese Buffalo.

The takin, or Chinese buffalo, which now adorns the museum, is about the size of a Jersey cow, and it cannot be said that he bears much resemblance to the American bison. His body and legs suggest both the antelope and the goat, his back is like that of a yak and his head, which is surrounded by curving horns, has the bulging nose which suggests that of the moose. The takin has hoofs which are parted and his ways are like those of the goat. He is a rather heavy animal, yet he spends his time in the western mountains of the Sze-Chuan province, where he gets about among the crags as lightly as does the big horn of the Rockies. He is strong and able-bodied and in a fight can give a good account of himself.

The hide of the takin which was sent here was dry and as hard as a board, and Mr. Figgins, chief taxidermist of the museum, had a long struggle with it in getting it into proper form, but by following the hair patterns he has been enabled to present the skin with all the distinction which an animal of such complicated anatomy deserves.

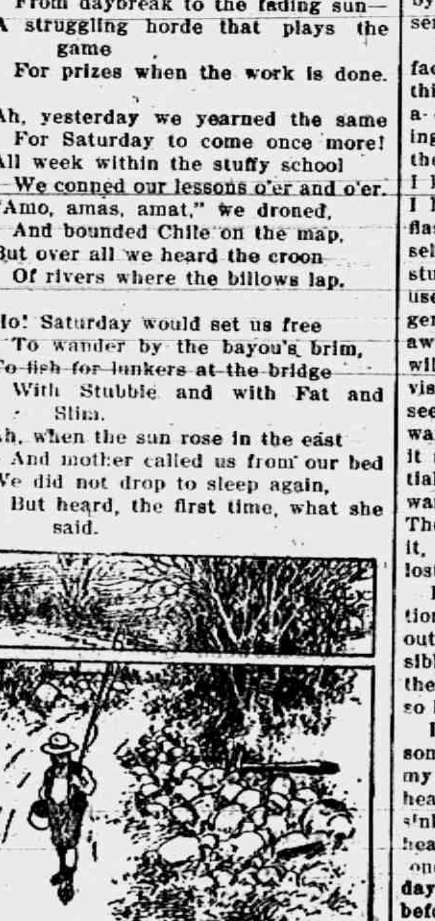
The hoofs of the creature are very hard and have grooves and scratches in them, which indicate that he was well accustomed to making his agile way over the sharp rocks in his native province.

Saturdays.

To-day, within the galley's hold,
We yearn for Naples far away,
The vision of the Matterhorn
Is calling to our hearts to-day.
Thus, longingly, we strain and sweat
From daybreak to the fading sun—
A struggling horde that plays the game
For prizes when the work is done.

Ah, yesterday we yearned the same
For Saturday to come once more!
All week within the stuffy school
We conned our lessons o'er and o'er.
"Amo, amas, amat," we droned,
And bounded Chile on the map,
But over all we heard the croon
Of rivers where the billows lap.

Ho! Saturday would set us free
To wander by the bayou's brim,
To fish for lunkers at the bridge
With Stubble and with Fat and Slim.
Ah, when the sun rose in the east
And mother called us from our bed
We did not drop to sleep again,
But heard, the first time, what she said.



Then off to join our happy crew,
How gladly, joyously we sped;
And as we chorused by the way
Our faithful Tiger barked ahead.
Oh, those were days worth hoping for,
Worth slaving for, when work was through—
For what in Switzerland or France
Can yield the happiness we knew?

Ah, Saturdays of youth! Thy joy
Sweeps back with mocking voice of scorn
And scoffs at us each week-end day
When carols wake the timid dawn;
For what vacation is so sweet
As that we knew in childhood, pray,
When gladsome as a meadowlark,
We "went a-fishin'" Saturday?
—Bryon Williams, in Washington Star.

A Defeated Conqueror

People said I was the luckiest fellow living, and I quite indorsed their opinion, for I had not only entered into possession of a decent little legacy left me by my uncle, but I had also won the hand and heart of Ada Miller, the prettiest and most charming young lady in the whole county.

People said her father was immensely rich and that she would come in for a handsome fortune at his death, but what cared I about that? For had I not sufficient for us both, even if she were penniless. And did I not love her with the whole strength of a pure and disinterested love?

I cannot begin to describe her to you, for the task is quite beyond me. Suffice it to say she was admired by all who knew her, and loved by not a few. The latter circumstances ceased to disturb me when once I became her accepted lover, though before that time it occasioned me a great deal of anxiety, and caused me to spend many a restless night.

Of one lover in particular had I been jealous, for to my excited and fear-laden imagination he seemed to possess everything that a young lady could desire. He was tall, broad-shouldered, handsome, with a pleasing manner and faultless dress, and in addition to all this, he was endowed with more than an average share of this world's goods.

He was madly in love with Ada, but conducted his wooing in a way with which not even his closest rival could find fault. Kind, considerate and gentlemanly, never obtruding his presence unnecessarily, he yet managed to pay her considerable attention, and many an anxious time did I spend, fearing that his superior attractions would put me in the shade.

Fate, however, decided otherwise, for when I summoned up courage to put my fortune to the test, Ada shyly accepted me, informing me in a most engaging manner that she had never loved anyone else. You may be sure that I was in ecstasies, and scarcely knew for the next few months whether I walked upon air or upon solid ground.

Our engagement was to last a year, at the end of that time our marriage was to take place. The time had almost elapsed, and nothing had occurred to mar the harmony of the scene, when, quite unexpectedly, something happened which filled me with the deepest horror, and which causes me to shudder even now as I recall it. It has partly to do with my rival, Horace Rishton, whose existence for the time I had almost forgotten.

He had received the news of our engagement in an apparently calm and quiet manner, and his subsequent behavior had not led us to regard him as being more than ordinarily affected by it, but in the event I am about to describe, I was enabled to see how deep and tragic the effect upon him really was.

The revelation came in this wise:

It was but two days to our wedding, and I had occasion to go on a little business connected with it to a neighboring town, a place some four miles distant from my home. Having accomplished my errand, and finding that I had some considerable time to wait for a train, I resolved to walk back, so striking out, I soon left the town behind me.

I had gone somewhere about two miles when the moon suddenly clouded over, and I was left in comparative darkness. As I knew the way, however, I thought nothing of it, but trudged cheerfully along, thinking only of Ada and our approaching union. Suddenly, and without a moment's warning, the ground gave way from under my feet and I felt myself falling headlong down, down into the depths of the earth. How far I fell I knew not at the time—I learned afterward that it was about thirty feet—but I expected instant death when I reached the bottom, and without doubt that would have been my fate had not the bottom of the hole been filled with water to a considerable depth. This broke my fall, and also by its coldness restored me to my senses.

I struck out on coming to the surface, and swam around to find something to which I could hold on. After a considerable time spent in searching, during which the full horror of the situation began to dawn upon me, I knew at once the place into which I had fallen, and as the knowledge flashed across my mind I cursed myself for having been so careless as to stumble into it. It was an old, disused shaft which had been there for generations. Not many people were aware of its existence, for it was in a wild and solitary spot scarcely ever visited by anyone. I, however, had seen it several times in my moorland wanderings, and had always regarded it as a dangerous place. It was partially fenced around, but I must have wandered in through one of the gaps. There was no footpath anywhere near it, so I must, in the darkness, have lost my way.

However, here I was, and the question confronted me how was I to get out? I tried to discover if it was possible to climb out, but the sides of the pit offered no hold of any kind, so I had to abandon that idea.

I next shouted, in the hope that some solitary wanderer might hear my cries, but no answering voice was heard, until, after I was obliged to sink back in silence and despair. My heart sickened as I thought of the loneliness of the place, and how days, and even weeks might elapse before anyone passed that way.

I struck out frantically round the pit to seek again for some means of escape, but my search was as fruitless as before.

Despair took hold of me. I thought of Ada, of our approaching marriage, of the preparations which had been made, and the plans which had been formed. And now it was all over. I must think no more of entering again the bright region above and sharing in the joys that awaited me there. I was doomed to die—to die a lonely, horrible death, and to lie in a watery grave. As I held on to my feeble support, and thought of all this, my brain reeled within me, and I feared that my reason must give way.

Death instead of marriage! What a contrast! Just when I ought to be leading my bride to the altar and stepping across the portal of married life, to let go my hold here and fall into the cold, relentless arms of death! And what of Ada then? Surely she would sorrow and grieve and be disconsolate.

But Horace Rishton! What of him? Might they not become man and— But, no, the thought was torturing, and drove me in a fit of frensy to shout again with all my might. But it was all in vain, for no one heard.

How the night passed I cannot tell, neither do I know how the morning hours dragged on, for I was numb with cold and faint with hunger and fatigue. I only know that after what seemed to me to be ages, footsteps drew near, and a voice called out from above:

"Are you there, Fred?"

My heart leaped into my mouth, and for a moment I was unable to utter a sound. At last I murmured, in a faint voice:

"In Heaven's name, get me out! I'm dying."

"Can you hold on another minute?" the voice asked. "I've got a rope here. Keep up till I fasten it to this stake. Can you slip a loop round your body, or shall I come down to you?"

"Send the rope down. I'll manage to pass it round," I shouted eagerly.

In another minute it was dangling before my eyes, and was soon passed under my arms; after which I gave the word to draw up. Slowly I ascended, and at last emerged into the light and freedom of the upper air.

It was Horace Rishton who had saved me, and if ever my heart went out to my rival it was then.

"I cannot sufficiently thank you," I began.

"Give me no thanks," he interrupted harshly. "Thank Heaven instead. Heaven and hades have been fighting over you, and heaven has won. But you little know how near you have been to death."

I looked up in wonderment at him, for his words were unintelligible to me. He took no notice of my look, but continued:

"I guessed where you were, call it instinct or whatever you like. No one else did. They will seek everywhere but here. But I seemed to know, and—well the Devil tempted me, nay, he fought with me. Don't you know why? You love Ada Miller, do you not? Then so do I. Yes, with a love which gives me no rest night or day, a love which makes it impossible for me to live without her. You have won her hand, but don't you think I envy you? Don't you think I even hate you at times? And when I guessed you were here, don't you see the Devil tempted me to leave you here and to say nothing whatever about it? But Ada has chosen you, she loves you. Your wedding day draws near. Go—take her and be happy. But for me happiness in this life is over."

He turned away to unloosen the rope which he had made fast to one of the stakes of the fence.

I watched him wonderingly with a dazed mind, when all in a moment, before I could think or speak, he reeled, fell over, and toppled headlong into the pit from whence he had drawn me, carrying the rope with him.

"He's gone!" I shrieked, and springing to my feet—for the numbness left me for a moment—I rushed to the mouth of the shaft crying frantically. "Horace! Horace!"

But no answer came to my cries. A loud splash succeeded his fall, then all was still and silent, as the grave. I looked around for help, but no help was near, and overcome with weakness, fatigue and horror, I fell senseless to the ground.

When I came to I found myself in the same position, and knowing that it was extremely improbable that anyone would pass that way, I put forth all my strength, and dragged myself with great dificulty in the direction of home. When I had gone a mile or so I entered upon a more frequented road, and soon fell in with those who rendered me all the assistance I required.

My story caused a great sensation, as you may be sure, and for a time was the one object of interest in the place. Ada looked upon me as one given back from the dead, and rejoiced over me accordingly. Her joy would have been complete had it not been for the unfortunate death of Horace Rishton, for that naturally cast a gloom over us all.

Of course, his death was put down to accident, and much regret expressed at the painful occurrence, but I, who had seen the whole thing, knew it was no accident, though, rightly or wrongly, I kept the knowledge to myself.

Every year we pay a visit to his grave, and as we gaze upon the silent tomb, we think with gratitude, and yet with regret, of a rival's love.—Household Words.

Ambergris and Amber.

There is some popular confusion of ambergris with amber; in fact, however, there is no relation between them. But for a long time the nature of ambergris was hidden in mystery. In ancient days it was commonly believed that it flowed up from the bottom of the sea. Sinbad the Sailor tells of a spring of ambergris that he found; but it was in a crude state. The fish swallowed it, and then disgorged it in congealed form, and in this condition it floated on the surface of the sea. This story harmonizes perfectly with the old Arabian belief.

Tommy Atkins.

The term arose from the little pocket ledgers served out at one time to all British soldiers. In these manuals were to be entered the name, age, date of enlistment, length of service, wounds, medals, and so on, of each individual. The War Office sent with each little book a form of filling it in, and the hypothetical name selected, instead of John Doe and Richard Roe (of the lawyers), or M. N. (of the Church), was "Tommy Atkins." Hence every British soldier became a "Tommy Atkins."

Deceptive Artificial Pearls.

According to the Daily Mail of Birmingham, the centre of England's jewelry manufacture, says that there are now made many imitation pearls which look so like the real thing that they deceive experts. They are made by means of a transparent glass shell, a little glue, and some essence of the Orient, a silvery, pearly substance, composed of fine scales rubbed from a small fish called the "bleak" or the "athlete," 17,000 of which require rubbing to get a pound.

Wisdom from Uncle Eben.

"Nursin' a grouch," said Uncle Eben, is like neglectin' de flowers an' vegetables an' puttin' in yoh time tendin' de weeds."

One Worthless Without the Other.

"Experience," said Uncle Eben, "may be a good teacher, but she's liable to make folks spend a heap o' valuable time stayin' after school, learnin' the rudiments of common sense."

Alfalfa Growing in Michigan

BY V. M. SHOESMITH

Professor of Farm Crops, Michigan Agricultural College.

The following statements are abstracts from the summary of Bulletin No 271 of the Michigan Experiment Station, on The Growing of Alfalfa in Michigan:

"1. Alfalfa is rapidly coming into favor as a farm crop in Michigan, ninety-two per cent of the farmers reporting expressing a good or medium opinion of alfalfa as a farm crop in their respective sections."

"2. The two principal causes of failure in growing alfalfa have been poor preparation of the seed bed and the lack of inoculation." "Among other important causes of failure are acid soils, light infertile soils, poorly drained soils, use of nurse crop and in case of late seedings, winter killing."

"3. Alfalfa is being grown successfully on a good many varieties of soil types throughout the state. The exact type of soil does not appear to be of much importance but soils that are shallow by reason of the water table or rock formation near the surface and very light infertile soils should be avoided. Farmers on light sandy soils should seed on their best land and may need to take some special means of building up the fertility of the soil Farmers in the better agricultural sections should as a rule seed on the higher lands of the farm because this land is more in need if improvement, because the alfalfa as a rule is productive on this land and because the soil most productive in corn and other crops is left for the growing of these crops."

"4. Alfalfa should not be seeded after a grass sod but may follow a cultivated or small grain crop. The preparation of the seed bed should be thorough and extend over a period of several weeks so as to secure a firm and finely pulverized seed bed in which the weeds and weed seeds have been as completely eradicated as possible. The most satisfactory way of preparing a seed bed is to plow in the fall or early spring and to harrow every week until late spring or early summer."

"5. The use of manure in seeding alfalfa is advisable if applied sometime before seeding or after the alfalfa has come up and made some little growth. It is advisable to turn under a heavy application on a quickly prepared seed bed, as this tends to hold up the soil and allow it to dry out or to apply as a top dressing shortly before seeding, because of the introduction of the weed seeds."

"6. There are doubtless many conditions under which commercial fertilizers, judiciously applied, may profitably be used to stimulate a more vigorous growth both in the new and old seedings, but the idea that is more or less prevalent that commercial fertilizers may be used to immediately make any soil productive is a fallacy. and until further data is available at least, commercial fertilizer should be applied in an experimental way to learn what may best be used under local conditions."

"7. On many soils throughout the state lime does not seem to be needed but on others it is quite essential to the successful growing of alfalfa. It is well to apply lime on a portion of the field when seeding alfalfa for the first time, especially if difficulty has been experienced in growing clover, or if there is any other indication of an acid soil."

"8. The presence of nitrogen fixing bacteria are of utmost importance in growing of alfalfa. Both the soil and pure culture methods of inocculation have given good results and one or both should always be used whenever alfalfa is being seeded or the first time in a field."

"9. The exact date of seeding is not of so much importance as the preparation of a good seed bed and several other factors. Late spring or early summer is a favorable time on the medium or heavy types of soils, and early or middle spring is a good time on the lighter types of soils."

"10. The use of a nurse crop is not advisible except on fields that are apt to blow or wash and on seed beds that are poorly prepared and are apt to become very weedy."

"11. The rate of seeding within certain limits is not an important factor in the seeding of alfalfa. A very light seeding is satisfactory under ideal conditions. Ten or twelve pounds per acre should ordinarily be as good as more and is a safe amount for general recommendations."

"12. There are no commercial varieties of alfalfa in the sense that we have varieties of corn, wheat, etc. For general use we must depend mainly upon the American grown seed of the common or the blue flower alfalfa, though the Grimm and other selections of the variegated alfalfa are very desirable for planting under Michigan conditions. Northern grown seed should be purchased in preference to that grown in the central and southern states."

"13. New seedings of alfalfa should be clipped often enough to hold the weeds in check but not usually more than two or three times during the first season."

"14. Alfalfa should be seeded on practically every farm, all or a portion of which is well drained, throughout the agricultural sections of the state. Its special places in Michigan agriculture are seeded alone as a hay crop, seeded alone as a pasture for hogs and as a perennial legume for mixing with clovers and grasses for both hay and pasture."

A STOCKING LETTER

From Long Beach, Calif.

February 17, 1913.

"Since I came to California,
  Like a vision I recall
How the winter used to linger,
  Just to greet the coming fall:

There was just a breath of summer
  'Twixt the autumn and the spring,
And frozen ears and noses
  Were a very common thing.

But here's the land of sunshine
  Where blizzards never blow,
Where the bees are always busy,
  And the roses love to grow;

Where nature seems a smiling
  In happiness and glee;
Right here in Long Beach living
  Is good enough for me."

Oh yes, I know that occasionally persons coming here for the first time are disappointed in some of the features of the country and so, very unreasonably, condemn the WHOLE country and write letters back to the home friends, and often for publication in their home papers, exaggerated reports of the few imperfections of that section of the country where they happen to temporarily locate.

The great trouble with most of them is that they expected, or seemed to expect, to find California a perfect state, a condition that does not exist in their own state or any other state in the Union. Among the thousands of tourists we have had with us this winter, we learn of one couple, a man and his wife, who don't like Southern California and Long Beach a little bit. They have the courage of their convictions as is shown in the following excerpts taken from a letter published in their home paper:

"You requested me to write occasionally. I hesitate to do so as my report, if truthful, will not be as interesting as others I have read eulogizing California. If wife and I were in Montevida, Minn., today we would stay there. We both have taken bad colds. My bronchial cough is very distressing, my sides are sore and I sigh for the day when I don't cough any more."

I suppose they never had any bad colds, bronchial troubles or side aches in Montevida, and that our climate, which is pronounced by thousands of tourists and homeseekers to be "the best climate in the world," caused all their trouble.

Read him again. "The only way we can keep nice and warm and particularly, relieved from coughing, is to keep in bed, which we do from 7 p. m. until 8 a. m. The damp sea air, together with the fine dust which seems to float like flour, tickles my bronchial tubes to perfection." He here conveys the impression that our atmosphere here is always filled with "fine dust floating like flour" which is a gross misrepresentation of our pure, invigorating atmosphere which we enjoy the whole year through with only a few days now and then when we have our Santa Anas or sandstorm. The next disagreeable experience this good couple had was being out in one of these sand-storms. I will let him tell you about it:

"Yesterday Wife and I went to San Pedro to see some of the large ships that had arrived there, but owing to the sand storm we could not see much and came back to Long Beach, went to our apartments, started our gas radiators and tried to get warm. We have some convenient rooms, but the heating apparatus is deficient, etc."

Do not think for one moment that I am intimating that these people did not have the experiences of which they write. No doubt they had. The sandstorm they could not avoid, but the uncomfortable apartments they could have avoided for there are a score or more of them which are comfortable scattered over the city.

We have sand storms and they are very, very distressing, to those who are obliged to be out in them. Houses are filled with the dust which covers everything to our discomfort and annoyance. We feel it in our throats, in our noses and in our eyes. But they last only from one to two days, seldom lasting three days, and are not of common occurrence like the blizzards and electrical storms of Minnesota, neither are they as destructive to life and property.

My objection to such letters is this: They convey to Eastern people the impression that such conditions prevail here which is so far from the truth that the writer deserves censure by those of us who have lived in this section of California for 20 years and know by experience that we have the best all-the-year-round climate on this continent right here in Long Beach.

Now for the proofs of my statements 690,8 per cent. increase in population between 1900 and 1910, the largest increase in the U. S. Today our permanent population is close to 25,000.

Again I quote. "My wife says she never saw so many cripples and invalids in her life as she saw on the beach." There is a good reason for that. She lives in Minnesota where the winter climate is not as conductive to the comfort and pleasure of "cripples and invalids" and, I add, old people, as this climate where they can be on the beach, the pier and the Pike in the bright sunshine nearly every day in the year. Of course when it rains or we have a sandstorm if we are wise we stay in the house, just as sensible people of Minnesota do during the severe storms of that state.

I spent a few years in Minnesota and have been in California 20 years and come far from agreeing with these people where they winter that they "prefer Minnesota as an ideal winter resort." A gentleman writing to one of the local papers called such letters as the above, "Freak exceptions to weather of Sunny Southern California" Very sincerely,

W. P. STOCKING.

CONGRESSMAN FITZGERALD.

Special to the Herald.

Washington,—Congressman Fitzgerald of New York having demonstrated that he is above any considerations of "pork" is still hammering away for economy in the public business, It is said that the insertion of a nice fat appropriation for enlarging the postoffice site in Brooklyn in the public buildings bill failed to influence Fitzgerald one iota, and that when this was learned the committee quietly cut out the item.

The democrats have shown a good deal of strength of purpose in this economy programme, but the pork barrel is too much for most of them. At the rate the Government has been going this fair land would soon have been sprinkled over with postoffice buildings like a hobbledehoy with freckles, Of course some postoffices are necessary, but in order to get them it has been necessary to placate a lot of congressmen who did not need them but who thought that Government Buildings would look well on Main street and help gather in votes.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE CAUSE OF RHEUMATISM

Stomach trouble, lazy liver and deranged kidneys are the cause of rheumatism. Get your stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels in healthy condition by taking Electric Bitters, and you will not be troubled with the pains of rheumatism. Charles B. Allen, a school principal, of Sylvania, Ga., who suffered indescribable torture from rheumatism, liver and stomach trouble and diseased kidneys, writes, "All remedies failed until I used Electric Britters, but four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me completely." Maybe your rheumatic pains come from stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Electric Bitters will give you prompt relief. 50c and $1.00. Recommended by B. J. Pulver.

Loafing is really no fun unless you have lots of work to do.

An Epidemic of Coughing

is sweeping over the town and young and old are alike affected. Foley's Honey & Tar Compound is a quick safe reliable family medicine for coughs and colds. A. S. Jones. of Lee Pharmacy, Chico, Calif., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has no equal, and I recommend it as containing no narcotics or other harmful properties." BEST FOR SKIN DISEASES

Nearly every skin disease yields quickly and permantly to Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and nothing is better for burns or bruises. Soothes and heals. John Deye, of Gladwin, Mich., says, after suffering twelve years with skin ailment and spending $400 in doctors' bills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him. It will help you. Only 25c. Recommended by B. J. Pulver.

BEST KNOWN COUGH REMEDY

For forty-three years Dr. King's New Discovery has been known throughout the world as the most reliable cough remedy. Over three million bottles were used last year, Isn't this proof? It will get rid of your cough, or we will refund your money. J. T. Owens, of Allendale, S. C., writes the way hundreds of others have done: "After twenty years, I find that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and colds that I have ever used." For coughs or colds and all lung troubles, it has no equal. 50c and $1.00 at B. J. Pulver's.

MORE TROOPS TO BORDER

President Taft Continues Work of Preparing for Possible Trouble.

With nearly ten thousand U. S. soldiers now en route to or preparing to leave for the mobilization camp at Galveston, President Taft reiterated his determination not to bring on a war with Mexico by intervention. At the same time, in fulfillment of his promise to "lay the cards on the table" for President Wilson, orders were written at the war department for the dispatch of two additional brigades to the Mexican border.

The troops now enroute to Galveston or ordered to proceed there comprise all those in the central department commanded by Major General W. H. Carter at Chicago. The Fifth brigade is now on its way to Galveston while the Fourth and Sixth brigades, now ordered to move, will follow immediately.

MYOPRACTIC

We are asked what is a Myopractor and what do we treat, and how do we treat. We treat by adjustment and we treat all chronic diseases. Do we give medicine, no, do we believe in medicine, yes, and we work with the M. D. We are asked why employ a Myopractor if we employ a medical doctor. If you are a going to repair your old house why employ a carpenter and a mason, because they each have their own special work to do, the same with diseases Myopractor removes the causes as Osteopathy, Mechano, Therapy, and Chirapractic teaches.

But this we find in many cases is not enough, and the patient needs medicine for the system is too weak to rise from its weaken state. Menyza patent has been lost for the want of the right treatment, therefore we say Myopractic is the lost art of healing, Science and medical men will back us in what we say.

Come and get acquainted, and let me explain this simple method of healing. When you understand our way of healing, you cannot help but have absolute confidence in Myo Practic adjustments. Chronic diseases a specialty.

HASTINGS MORE BEAUTIFUL

Hastings school children will complete in making that city more beautiful during the summer months.

Plans have been made by the Teachers Clubs and the Woman's Clubs, to help along the work of the Junior Civic League. Flowers and vegetables gardens, yards and lawns are to be improved and cultivated and in September ther there will be an exhibit, and prizes will be given by the business and professional men of the city, Not a bad proposition for Tecumseh to consider.

CHEAP SUGAR

Comparison of retail prices in this and in other countries shows that, with a few exceptions, sugar is cheaper in the United States than it is elsewhere. In the United Kimdom, Denmark, Turkey, Switzerland, and Belgium, prices for corresponding grades of sugar are a fraction of a cent lower than they are here. From data gathered by American consuls, it appears that the average retail price in this country being 5.7 cents the price of similar sugar in the United Kingdom and in Denmark was five cents. To show the higher cost in this country, it is customary to compare the price of eighty-eight degree raw beet sugar in Hamburg with one hundred degree refined granulated here. The average retail price of corresponding sugar in France and in Germany is a fraction higher than the price in the United States. Prices in Canada are practically the same as prices here. The average of the United States being 5.7 cents, the average of all Europe is 7.8 cents. The price in Russia is above seven cents; in Sweden 8 cents; in The Netherlands, 8.7 cents; in Spain, 12 cents; and in Italy, 14 cents. These, of course, are not fixed values but are the prices given at the time of an American quotation of 5.7 cents.—From "Sugar and the Tariff," by A. G. Robinson, in the American Review of Reviews for March.

Big Game and Disease.

It has been suggested that the big game of Africa should be systematically exterminated in order to abolish the "fly fever" by destroying the principal means of nourishment of the tsetse. In regard to this suggestion, Sir David Bruce says that while it is true that the tsetse disappears when the big game is killed off, there are other African diseases similar to the fly disease which are not spread by the tsetse. Although "civilization and big game cannot exist together," he thinks that the proposed wholesale destruction all over Africa would be quite unjustifiable. As the new country is divided off into farms, the big game must go, but the process should be a gradual one, applied only as the exigencies demand. For at least a thousand years to come there ought to be room in Africa for big game reserves.

"It's The Best Polish I Ever Used"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that a glossy shine on your stove you paint black every few days. It is not a question of oft-repeated application.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself.

It makes a brilliant glossy shine that don't rub or dust off. It anneals to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. Makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish is made by the same formula and sold under the same name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us:

[illegible]

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill.

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, fenders, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.

Use Black Silk Metal Polish for nickel, brass, silverware or tinware. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

Instant Relief from Eczema

You can stop that awful itch from eczema and other skin troubles in two seconds.

Seems too good to be true—but it is true, and we vouch for it.

Just a few drops of the simple, cooling wash, the D.D.D. Prescription for eczema, and the itch stops instantly. We give you enough to prove it for 50 cents.

Now, if you have tried a great many cures for eczema and have been disappointed, do not make the mistake of refusing to try this soothing wash. All other druggists keep this D.D.D. Prescription—go to them if you can't come to us—but if you come to our store we will give you the first dollar bottle on our positive no pay guarantee, that D.D.D. will stop the itch at once.

D.D.D. Soap keeps the pores healthy; ask us about it.

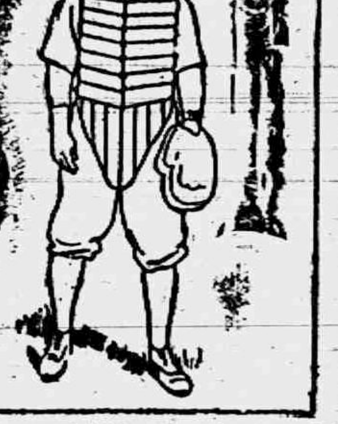
ARMOR FOR BALL PLAYERS.

Improved Protector Leaves Only Arms and Legs Unguarded.

Baseball has been shorn of some of its dangers to catcher and umpire by the improved protector invented by a Chicago man. This armor leaves only arms and legs unguarded, and as these parts are not particularly vulnerable, the wearer may feel safe from injury. Unlike the old style protector, which covered only the chest and stomach, the new device has flexible parts which extend over the shoulders and a long flag which reaches almost to the knees. The shoulder pieces do not interfere with the catcher in throwing to second and they save him many a glancing blow from a hard-pitched ball which might otherwise put his arm out of commission. In the case of the umpire, the protector enables him to watch the ball as it crosses the plate and not worry about where it is going to hit him. This armor, however, is not designed to protect him from missiles thrown from the bleachers and it now remains for the inventor to devise a boiler plate receptacle for his complete safety.



A "Bit" that Bores Square Holes.

Bits for boring square holes have been on the market for years, but they are adapted for use only in cutting into wood. The tool bores a round hole, while at the same time it cuts out the corners with a cutter, which is fed into the hole without turning. Obviously, such a tool will not work in metals, and yet square holes have a wide use in machinery for keys, wrenches, hand wheels, etc. The present method of making square holes in metals is either to punch them in or cast them, or to drill a round hole and then work it up into the right form with a slotter or shaper.

International Manners.

A German lady, we perceive, has started a school wherein the art of eating is taught. Not the art of acquiring food, but the art of dealing with it when it is on the table. An international school of table manners would do as much as The Hague Conference to reconcile animosities. There is really nothing, for example, in which we could not agree with the American if he would only come over to the British notion of eating an egg. Possibly the Rhodes scholars will think the matter out at Oxford.—Westminster Gazette.

How Kansas Got Its Name.

The late Colonel Inman always insisted that Kansas got its name through mistake of a proofreader. The early Kansas Indians were Kaws, a diminutive of Kausas. In revising the works of a missionary the proofreader mistook the "u" for an inverted "n" and changed it to "n." Since then it has been Kansas.

Chiropractor

Read What I Do

F. M. BROWN

I use no medicine, Surgery or Osteopathy, Only Spinal Adjustments.

Chiropractic, (Ki-ro-prac-tic) means hand manipulation of the spine.

Disease is a manifestation of insufficient, or abnormal nerve supply. The nerve force is the life of the body when that is shut off the body suffers.

The different organs of the body are supplied by nerves leading from the Spinal Cord, which originate in the brain.

The Spinal Column is made up of 24 movable bones, from between these 24 bones are given off, latterly, 25 pairs of Spinal Nerves. These nerves pass out from the spinal cord through a small opening or notch between the vertebrae, This being the only place in the body where nerves pass between two bones, hence the only place where a nerve can be impinged.

Each pair of spinal nerves, has its own particular ramification and organs which it controls. Between each vertebra is a thin layer of cartilage serving as a cushion to protect the body from jars.

During life these cushions become packed from different causes allowing the nerves to become pinched between the bones. Disease will cause the muscles to contract, and draw the bones of the spine out of alignment thus causing a slight subluxation and and nerve impingment, causing the nerve supply to be shut off according to the severity of the dislocation, hence an impinged nerve cannot do its required work, therefore an affection of its respective organ is sure to follow.

Now what I do is to examine your spine, I can detect the smallest dislocation, and knowing the exact remification of all the spinal nerves I can tell you just where your trouble is located. Then by scientific spinal adjustments done by hand I remove these subluxations and release the pressure on the nerves which allows a full amount of nerve force to flow after which nature will take care of the disease.

This is briefly speaking, the theory of the science of Chiropractic. Between 80 and 90 per cent of all disease will very readily yield to this treatment if given a fair trial.

I am a graduate of the Michigan College of Chiropractic of Grand Rapids. Michigan. A college recognized by the state and national associations as being one of the very best of its kind, in existence.

I am no Quack, I will treat you fair I will examine you free of charge, if I can't help you I will tell you so. I have spent a small fortune and almost three years in College preparing myself to be able to handle this work. Anyone desiring further information concerning my ability and Character may write Dr. O. B. Frye, M. D. Thompson of the Michigan College of Chiropractic, Grand Rapids, Mich.

For the present until I can get suitable rooms in the business part of town you can find me from 9 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at the home of Mr. Gustine Sisson, East Chicago St.

Respectfully,
F. M. Brown,

DEEDS, NOT WORDS

Tecumseh People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills, For Tecumseh kidney sufferers. Have made their local reputation. Proof lies in the testimony of Tecumseh people.

Mrs. George Burroughs, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me has been permanent. Since I publicly endorsed this remedy in December 1905, I have had no further need of a kidney medicine. My whole body ached and my strength and energy left me. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply of this remedy at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began using it. In a few weeks my condition improved in every way and my pains and aches were a thing of the past."

A Cold. LaGrippe, Then Pneumonia

Is too often the fatal sequence. La Grippe coughs hang on, weaken the system, and lower the vital resistence. R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat, N. The Law's Delay.

"I understand that you called on the plaintiff, Mr. Barnes. Is that so?" questioned Lawyer Fuller, now Chief Justice.

"Yes," answered the witness.

"What did he say?" next demanded Fuller.

The attorney for the defense jumped to his feet and objected that the conversation could not be admitted in the evidence. A half-hour's argument followed, and the judges retired to their private room to consider the point.

An hour later the judges filed into the court room and announced that Mr. Fuller might put his question.

"Well, what did the plaintiff say, Mr. Barnes?"

"He weren't at home, sir," came the answer without a tremor.—Success Magazine.

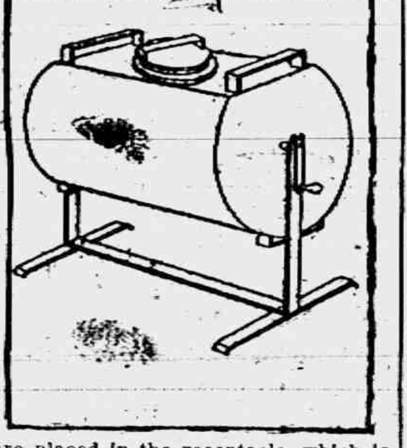
TO WASH VEGETABLES.

Placed in a Cylinder and Cleaned as Latter Revolves.

How often people are heard to say that they do not eat this or that in hotels and restaurants because they do not know if it has been cleaned properly. In the old days, when the process of properly cleaning, this objection was a fair one, but now it has less ground for existence. With the advent of the numerous time and labor saving devices, the food is just as clean in first-class restaurants and hotels as it is at home, and one of the inventions that have brought about this improvement is the vegetable washer devised by a New Hampshire man. In appearance the vegetable washer looks very much like the paper stands seen on store counters. It comprises a stand on which a hollow cylinder rests upon an axis. The cylinder has an opening on one side and a screw top for the opening. The whole is water-tight. The vegetables are placed in the receptacle, which is filled with water, the top screwed on and the cylinder revolved by means of a handle.



Quaint Old-Time Custom.

Custom decrees that a gold coin, or, at the very least, silver, shall be put under the mainmast of each new ship launched. The coin bears the date of the year when the vessel is completed, a fact well known to collectors, who keep an eye on ships that are likely to be the depository of numismatic prizes, says Pearson's Weekly.

Thus, at Liverpool some years back, a derelict Yankee schooner, bought for a song, yielded an 1804 dollar, the rarest and most eagerly sought after of all American coins. It sold readily for $6,000, and would be worth to-day at least double that sum, for it was in perfect preservation, having rested in its cotton wool wad beneath the hollow "stepping" of the mast since the day it was first placed in position.

Its recovery was the result of foresight and business enterprise, combined, of course, with special knowledge. A man passing the worthless hulk on the day of the sale noticed the date, 1804, on her stern and rightly guessed that she might be the bearer of a dollar of that year.

In the same way have been preserved and recovered many of the ancient silver Scottish pennies known as doits which were so thin that twelve of them were barely equal in value to the penny sterling. The old Scottish shipbuilders of the days when these coins were in circulation used, with characteristic national thriftiness, to put one of them beneath each mast they "stepped," in preference to the more valuable groat.

The Indian Moons.

Time is calculated among the Indians by moons instead of months. "We" is the Indian for month. January is called "We-ter'i," "the Hard Moon." February, "the Raccoon Moon." March, "Sore-eye Moon." April, "the Moon in which geese lay eggs," May, "the Planting Moon." June, "the Moon when the strawberries are red," July, "the Moon when choke-cherries are ripe," August, "the Harvest Moon." September, "the Moon when rice is laid up to dry." October, "the Rice drying Moon." November, "the Deer Killing Moon," and December "the Deer Moon."—Editorial Review.

His Prime Necessity.

The under dog doesn't care much for sympathy; he wants assistance.

Tent Stove-pipe Opening.

If a stove is used in a tent there must be an opening for the stove pipe, and this should be lined with something which will not burn. An ordinary piece of tin sewed into a hole in the roof answers every purpose, except that on a windy day it is very noisy. For my last camping trip I made an arrangement which proved satisfactory. It can be duplicated as follows: First get the material, a piece of zinc 12x14 inches, a piece of asbestos cord two feet long, and a pair of leather shoe laces. In the center of the zinc cut an oval opening, 4 1-2 x6 inches, and around it one-half inch from it, and three-fourths of an inch apart, punch a row of holes large enough to admit the asbestos cord. Next lace the cord through a hole over the edge of the zinc and through the next, and so on all the way around. This brings the cord against the pipe, making it noiseless, and being of asbestos, it will not burn. Now sew the zinc to the tent with the leather shoe laces, having the canvas over the zinc at the upper side and underneath the rest of the way. This makes it watertight.—Wm. D. White.

The Maple Leaf

Tall, dark, tangled pines and spruces completely surrounded the beautiful Lac d'Amour; the blue sunny morning sky smiled at its reflection in the lake's clear mirror. Wild tuneful notes of hidden birds mingled with the perfumed whispered messages of the breezes and the musical dip, dip of oars.

Helen MacNole rested a few moments, allowing the light skiff to drift idly towards the lily beds, while she eagerly and with extreme pleasure drank in all the uncultivated, primitive Canadian beauty of forest, lake and sky. Two whole months at Aunt Sophia's cottage meant a great deal to this Boston girl, for she had never before been in the fair province, and every scene was new and attractive to her.

Helen had half lost herself in a delightful reverie when the sound of splashing paddles aroused her, which was accompanied by a mellow tenor voice that was singing, with the most enthusiastic, passionate earnestness the sweet song of "The Maple Leaf." The chorus ran:

"The maple leaf, our emblem dear,
The maple leaf forever.
God save our King and heaven bless
The maple leaf forever."

The rare voice that sang those words quite charmed Helen, yet she laughed softly, and a mischievous light came into her irresistible blue eyes as she threw back her head and sang in her pure soprano voice "The Star Spangled Banner." After she had concluded she said to herself with a low laugh of sheer fun: "I'll show whoever it is that there is a Yankee on this little sea."

She had scarcely finished speaking when a pretty canoe glided around the ben of the Lac d'Amour. Its occupant, none other than the tenor singer, regarded his enemy with a half amused, half piqued look of surprise. He was handsome. His face was dark and vivacious; his smile, showing strong white teeth, was dazzling. There was a careless grace and motion about his movements. The wind had ruffled his soft black hair until it half tumbled into his sparkling brown eyes.

Helen looked at the tenor half confused, half afraid, for she had not expected to be discovered in her retreat—and by such a well-meaning young gentleman.

"Pardon, miss, if I have disturbed you and your song," the young man commenced.

"You have not disturbed me at all, sir—see, my boat has never moved an inch," Helen replied, with an attempt to look grave, but for some unknown reason she burst into a hearty and mirthful laugh.

"You are an excellent singer, miss. Excuse my frankness, it is my misfortune, not my fault," the tenor said, leisurely laying the paddle across the canoe.

"All Yankees are good singers," Helen responded concisely, trying to look utterly sincere.

"So you're a Yankee. Yes, I know so by your song which sounded a good deal like a challenge," the other said, as he calmly and with open admiration studied Helen's proud head, crowned with braided coils of gold-tinted brown hair, her pink cheeks and slender, straight form.

"Yes, I am a Yankee—Miss Helen MacNole, of Boston, Mass.," Helen replied.

"And I am Lester Lejarn, a French Canadian Frenchman," the young boatman retorted, with equal dignity. Then both the boaters laughed merrily, it was all so amusing.

It does not take long for two young, happy-spirited persons to get acquainted; when Helen's boat grated the shore beside of Lejarn the two had become quite intimate. Helen, for her part, felt in a childish mood of enjoying the adventure. As for Lejarn, he was very much in earnest; he decided that he would see more of this charming Yankee, this Helen MacNole, of Boston, Mass.

Helen found out from Aunt Sophia that Lester Lejarn was the son of an Englishman by birth and claimed his French descent on his mother's side. After the death of Lejarn's mother Mr. Lejarn had come to Canada, bringing Lester, the only child. When Lester was but fourteen his father became blind, and since that time the young Lejarn had worked in a Montreal business house and supported his father.

Helen firmly put aside the fact that she was the only daughter of the widowed, prosperous banker, Arthur MacNole, and allowed the French tenor to take her boating, driving and walking when he was home from work. Finally, a message came to the effect that Helen must come home, as a party of wealthy New Yorkers were coming to pass the winter season at the MacNole mansion.

At twilight, when the sky was gaudily colored by sunset, and the Lac d'Amour was a sheet of pink crystal, Helen walked slowly, for the last time, down to the shore with Lejarn.

"I don't believe I care to go out on the lake to-night," Helen said, her voice rather low and tremulous.

"You are sorry to leave this place, that's it?" Lejarn asked kindly. Helen nodded.

"Why?" he continued. "I cannot believe you have grown to love the Maple Leaf better than the Star-Spangled Banner."

to laugh ... trunk of a ... maple tree ... ticular thought came to her ... some strange, cold gloom settled over her heart. Lejarn looked at her ... intently.

The sunset had faded away, leaving the sky a blue, shadowy expanse, where stars twinkled faintly. The moon was rising above the pines and shone upon the Lac d'Amour with a glorious light.

"Helen, it is because you love me," Lejarn said softly and convincingly. The tears coursed freely down Helen's cheeks.

"Helen, I love you. I've dared to, although you are a Yankee girl," he smiled, "but I cannot claim you—you would not marry a poor Frenchman, would you?"

Helen dashed the tears from her eyes and nodded, saying, in a pained voice: "But my father."

"Ah, I realize," Lejarn said abruptly, then, "Here, Helen, take this Maple Leaf Pin, and when I can stand on an equal footing with you I'll come to claim you. It will take time to build myself up in business, perhaps you may tire of waiting, but remember I will always love you," and Lejarn pinned the silver token onto Helen's dress; he clasped those strong arms about her for a moment, and only the lapping waves and her sobs were heard. She almost pushed Lejarn away and fled from the lake.

Hushed woodlands and tranquil bay met the tired eyes of the passengers on board of the boat which was slowly drifting into the Canadian harbor.

Helen, clad in black, her face rather pale and sad, looked back at the vast extent of ocean behind her and sighed. She would never return. Her father had died, and the heavily mortgaged estate had been confiscated, all but ... year that she had spent since she left Canada the previous ... Helen was returning to make her home with Aunt Sophia.

From the time she left the boat until she got out of the pony cart at her aunt's cottage, Helen mused doubtfully, hopefully. Lejarn was in that town yet, so she learned—but had he forgotten her after that brief summer acquaintance?

Although fatigued, that same evening Helen walked through the woods to the lake. She even donned the same muslin gown she had worn that night when she and Lejarn had stood on the shore, and fastened the little maple leaf pin to the collar. The little boat was still there and she got in. For a time she rowed aimlessly, gazing beyond the black pines, into the brilliant, glowing west.

Lejarn had forgotten her, probably, and she must forget him. Helen took off the pin and held it in her hand a moment. At that instant a rustling in the bushes disturbed her and looking up she saw—Lester Lejarn standing on the gleaming strand of the Lac d'Amour.

"Helen!" he uttered; his face grew pale with sudden surprise. With a hasty movement, he started to unloose the remaining craft that was tied to the stake, but Helen shook her head, and with a few strokes brought her boat to the shore.

"Pardon me, Miss MacNole, I have again intruded upon your solitude—and on a sadder occasion." Lejarn glanced at the black ribbon band on Helen's sleeve.

Helen nodded and stood silently before the tenor, who looked at her questioningly.

"I have not become wealthy enough yet to claim you—but—probably you had forgotten me—" he began in a choking voice. Then he told her how he had struggled to advance in business and how his father had died, too, and left him utterly alone. Helen told her own grief in a few words. Then there was silence a few moments; Lejarn searched for the pin, but did not see it. Helen, seeing the action, blushed faintly as she unclosed her hand and showed the little emblem.

The Lac d'Amour grew dark and pine fragrance filled the air. Again the moon shone brightly and the waters of the lake lapped a soft, tender song, not marred by sobs of sorrow, but a happy silence told the simple three-worded story more eloquently than ever before. Far across, on the opposite side of the lake, children's voices were singing:

"The maple leaf, our emblem dear,
The maple leaf forever.
God save our King and heaven bless
The maple leaf forever."

And Helen walked through the silent aisles of the forest with Lejarn, never more to leave the region of the Lac d'Amour.—EVA GORMLEY.

State Socialism.

State socialism, as the name fairly implies, is the theory that land and capital should be taken possession of by the State; that all production for distribution and all distribution should draw from the State his compensation, whatever it may be, for services performed, and that money and interest should cease to exist. Socialists do not advocate violence or any form of force, the opinion of many to the contrary, notwithstanding. They believe, as a body, that the object they are after is to be reached not by force but by the ballot, as the peaceable expression of free opinion.

Writing on the Wall.

Our boys in blue will teach the old heathen to speak United States and show the young ones how to write old English names on front walls. On rocks and monuments of Asia there still are seen coarse old Greek names and naughty pictures, the work of Alexander's foot and horse.

Paper from the Okra Stem.

From extended experiments that have recently been made at Macon, Ga., it has been found that a fine grade of paper can be made from pulp prepared from the okra stem, and a plant for making paper from this source is likely to be erected in that city at an early date. Okra is easily grown in the southern states, and could be produced in large quantities as a papermaking plant. The plant is an herb, belonging to the mallow family, genus hibiscus. Its botanical name is hibiscus esculentus.

Limited Monarchy.

A limited monarchy is one in which the power and prerogatives of the sovereign are limited by constitutional provisions or by custom recognized as law. The British empire is governed by a limited monarchy. A limited monarchy differs from an absolute monarchy in that in the latter case the will of the monarch is absolute and the sovereign is limited by no constitutional barriers or regulations.

Bering Sea Volcanic Islands.

The Bogoslofs are a group of three small volcanic islands in the southern part of Bering sea, and 37 miles northwest of the island of Unalaska. One of these islands, Castle Rock, has been known since 1796; Fire Island has been known since 1883, while the third one, Perry island, rose from the sea about the time of the San Francisco earthquake, in 1906. According to a letter to Science, this island has now sunk.

Meaning of Twins.

The Standard Dictionary defines a twin as "one of two young produced at a birth; said of human beings and of beasts, and used mostly in the plural." It will thus be seen that "twins" means a pair—that is two—and a "pair of twins" would mean four.

Sitting in the Shadow.

One evening when Luther saw a little bird perched on a tree roost there for the night, he said: "This little bird has had its supper, and now it is getting ready to go to sleep here, quite secure and content, never troubling itself what its food will be, or where its lodging on the morrow. Like David, it 'abides under the shadow of the Almighty.' It sits on its little twig content, and lets God take care."

EMILIO MADERO REACHES BORDER

Brother of Late President Not Dead as Reported.

MAKES ESCAPE FROM MEXICO

With Brother Raoul and Three Servants, He Rides Six Hundred Miles on Horseback Until He Reaches Safety at Marathon, Texas—Ambassador Wilson Resigns.

San Antonio, Tex., March 6.—Emilio Madero, who was officially reported dead by the Mexican government and United States Ambassador Wilson, reached here after an overland trip from Torreon to the American border, and tells a graphic story of his experiences.

Make 600 Miles on Horseback.

With Emilio were his brother Raoul and three servants, who accompanied them the 600 miles on horseback from Torreon to Marathon, Tex. They came from Marathon to this city on the first train, where they joined another brother of the late president of Mexico, Gabriel Madero. Neither Emilio nor Raoul would say anything further than the other brothers have already said as to the future plans of the Madero family. Both refused absolutely to discuss Mexican politics.

Gabriel stated that an aerogram had been received from their father, who with other relatives is on his way to New York from Havana, saying all are well. It is understood that Alfonso Madero will meet them in New York.

Exchange Shots with Bandits.

Emilio Madero said that they were in the neighborhood of Torreon when the news of their brother's death was received and concluded that the best thing to do was to flee the country. They would not trust the trains, so started with three servants across country on horseback. On two occasions they were stopped by bandits or supposed bandits and exchanged shots with them. The last was a party of forty, near the border, and they escaped because one of the servants knew of a short cut through the mountains.

Ambassador Wilson Quits.

Mexico City, March 6.—Henry Lane Wilson, the American ambassador to Mexico, sent his resignation to the president of the United States.

Claiming to have 11,000 men under his command, Venustiano Carranza, the rebel governor of Coahuila, has telegraphed Ambassador Wilson the terms on which he says he will restore peace.

Carranza demands that President Huerta resign and that Senor Lascurain, the former minister of foreign relations, succeed him, and also that General Felix Diaz leave the country on the first steamer.

Ambassador Wilson submitted the message to President Huerta, who laughed, saying that Carranza had fewer than 2,000 men and was practically surrounded in the hills.

Seventeen Rebels Killed in Battle.

In a battle between federals and Carranzistas at Cedral, state of San Luis Potosi, seventeen rebels were killed and many wounded. The federals lost three men killed and five wounded.

Followers of Carranza burned four bridges along the line of the National railways of Mexico and captured three small towns.

It is reported that the rebels also have taken the important town of Lampazasos, eighty miles south of Laredo, and are moving toward Neuvo Laredo.

American Reported Killed.

Washington, March 6.—Frank Horace, an American, is reported shot dead by an unknown assailant in Manzanillo. Consul Kirk is investigating.

BANDIT WEBB ARRAIGNED

Automobile Robber Pleads "Not Guilty" in Chicago Court.

Chicago, March 6. — Robert Webb, alleged automobile bandit and confessed slayer of Detective Peter Hart of the Fiftieth street police station, was arraigned before Judge Cooper in the criminal court on one charge of murder and eight charges of robbery, to each of which he entered a plea of "not guilty."

Immediately afterward State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne announced that he would bring Webb and the other alleged automobile bandits to trial within a month.

Report Flagler Hurt.

Daytona, Fla., March 6. — A press dispatch said that Henry M. Flagler, virtual owner of the Florida East Coast railroad, broke his hip in a fall at Whitehall, his winter home near Palm Beach, and was in a critical condition. Mr. Flagler is eighty-two years old.

Makes Nearly All Missouri Dry.

Jeffersonville, Mo., March 6.—The senate passed the county united local option bill. This bill has already passed the house, and means that practically every county in the state will go dry except those in which St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph are located.

THRONGS FIGHT POLICE

Washington, March 6. — Riotous scenes attended the exodus of the inauguration crowds from the capital. Tired and impatient travelers at the union station rushed the thin line of police, brushed them aside and tore down the iron-barred gates that led to the trainshed and the long lines of waiting coaches.

Subsequent efforts to dislodge them were futile. As a result many boarded wrong trains.

The scenes in the station were tumultuous. State troops and marching clubs made the big building resound with the blare of their bands. Women fainted in the crush.

SENATOR KERN NAMED AS LEADER IN SENATE

Champ Clark Renominated as Speaker of House.

Washington, March 6. — Senator John W. Kern of Indiana was chosen as the leader of the Democratic majority in the senate by acclamation when the members met in caucus to elect a chairman. He succeeds Senator Martin of Virginia and will wield far greater power.

Democratic members of the new house of representatives—the majority which will shape legislation on the tariff and other important measures—also assembled here for the first time in caucus to organize for the work of the coming session

Champ Clark was renominated for speaker amid a chorus of cheers and yells. This action assures his election.

The meeting was held at the call of Representative Burleson of Texas, the caucus chairman, who becomes postmaster general in President Wilson's cabinet.

Mr. Burleson's successor as caucus chairman is Representative A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, who is closely identified with the new administration and will be in a measure its exponent in the lower branch of congress.

Representative Underwood of Alabama was chosen chairman of the ways and means committee. Speaker Clark declared that upon the conduct of the new house depended in large measure the prosperity of the country and the success of the Democratic party.

WILSON ADVISERS TAKE THEIR POSTS

Cabinet Members Are Confirmed and Sworn In.

BAR AGAINST JOB HUNTERS

President, as First Official Act, Promulgates Order Refusing to Receive at White House Those Who Come Soliciting Appointments to Government Positions.

THE WILSON CABINET.

William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska, secretary of state.

William Gibbs McAdoo of New York, secretary of the treasury.

Lindley M. Garrison of New Jersey, secretary of war.

James Clark McReynolds of Tennessee, attorney general.

Albert Sidney Burleson of Texas, postmaster general.

Franklin Knight Lane of California, secretary of the interior.

William C. Redfield of New York, secretary of commerce.

William Bauchop Wilson of Pennsylvania, secretary of labor.

Washington, March 6.—The Democratic administration of the great executive department of the government got under way with the qualification of all but two of President Wilson's advisers as executive officers of the United States. Throughout the department buildings there were little inaugurations as President Wilson's appointees took the oaths of office for their respective positions.

Cabinet Nominations Confirmed.

President Wilson sent the names of his cabinet officers to the senate shortly after noon, so that when the senate convened at 2 o'clock it required but a few minutes for the confirmation of all on the list.

None of the new members of the cabinet attempted to transact any real business. Most of them spent the greater part of the afternoon in conferring with the officials whose places they are to take and getting acquainted with the personnel and machinery of the Washington government. All declined to discuss politics or any matters pertaining to the business of their respective departments of the government.

Secretary of State Bryan took the oath of office soon after 4 o'clock in the office vacated but a few hours before by P. C. Knox, who left for Palm Beach, Fla.

Wilson Conserves Energies.

President Wilson put up a bar against officeseekers across the open door of the White House. Virtually this was his first official act as president of the United States. Men with ambitions for office whom he may care to see he will send for, but all others must present their prayers for preferment and their indorsement therefor to the heads of departments, who will communicate with the president or not, as they see fit.

Train Derailed at Walcott, Ia.

Walcott, Ia., March 6.—While running at forty miles an hour the Rocky Mountain Limited, west-bound, on the Rock Island road, was derailed here. Twelve hundred feet of track was torn up and all the cars except the mail car left the rails. No one was injured.

SAILORS PERISH AS BOAT SINKS

German Torpedo Vessel Rammed by Man-of-War.

SIXTY-SIX LIVES ARE LOST

The S-178 of the German Navy Is Crushed by the Cruiser Yorck in the North Sea and Cut in Two, Only Seventeen Being Saved by Vessels of Fleet.

Heligoland, Germany, March 6.—Sixty-six of the crew of the German torpedo boat S-178 were drowned when the little vessel was rammed by the cruiser Yorck in the North sea.

Among the dead are the commander of the torpedo boat, Lieutenant Koch, and his first officer.

The surgeon and engineer and fifteen men of the crew were saved. The torpedo boat sank immediately.

The boat was one of the newest destroyers in the German fleet. It displaced 636 tons and carried a complement of eighty-four officers and men.

Had Participated in Maneuvers.

The S-178 was returning during the night from maneuvers in which it had participated with the German battleship fleet, the cruiser squadron and sixty-four other torpedo-boat destroyers.

The destroyers attempted to pass through the intervals in the column of warships while the latter were steaming ahead at full speed. The commander of the S-178 calculated the distance incorrectly and his boat was cut in halves by the cruiser Yorck.

The Yorck signaled the accident to the other vessels of the fleet, which slowed down and cruised around in the vicinity, flashing their searchlights in all directions. Small boats were lowered from all the vessels and succeeded in picking up two of the officers and fifteen of the crew of the sunken destroyer.

Second Big Disaster.

The sinking of the S-178 is the greatest naval disaster since the French battleship Liberte blew up in the harbor of Toulon in September, 1911. In that disaster 435 men lost their lives and 200 were injured. Neighboring warships were damaged by the terrific explosion.

Two hundred and forty officers and men of the Japanese navy perished April 30, 1908, when the training cruiser Matsushima was sunk off the Pescadores island as the result of the explosion of one of its magazines.

The worst of all explosions on American warships was on July 21, 1905, at San Diego, when the boiler of the gunboat Bennington blew up, killing sixty-two of the crew and injuring fourteen others.

Government Sues Sugar Trust.

New Orleans, La., March 6.—Charging the government has been defrauded of $100,536.93 in customs duties by the American Sugar company in New Orleans, United States District Attorney Charleton B. Beattie filed suit in the district court against the trust to collect that amount.

Illinois Postoffice Robbed.

Findlay, Ill., March 6.—The postoffice was robbed and several hundred dollars' worth of money and stamps stolen. No clews have been obtained to the robbers. The safe of the postoffice was wrecked by the use of explosives.

Cripple Burned to Death.

Stillwater, Minn., March 6.—Frank Zybarth, aged sixty-four, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed his store. He was crippled from burns received in a fire many years ago.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
